The Epworth Era seems to be running at a high rate of speed, and if the editor is not careful the train will be ditched and all its precious freight of young people lost. His mode of defending the distinguished evangelist, Sam P. Jones, offends all right-thinking people. One sentence from the Era will suffice to show the animus of the editor: "Bishops and saloon keepers have made common cause denouncing Sam Jones." The Holston has always spoken in the highest terms of the noted evangelist. We believe, with Dr. Steel, that "he is a phenomenon," but why pluck laurels from the brows of eight good and great men, leaders of our militant hosts, in order to crown another good man whom the church has already greatly honored. If you feed our young Epworthians upon such intellectual pabulum as this, in a few years you will have an army of ecclesiastical anarchists who will pull down the fair temple of Methodism over your head. Are our young people to be taught to pronounce the words "Bishops and brewers" in the same breath? Is this the mission of the Epworth Era? Has reverence for those in authority over us, in both Church and State, ceased to be a virtue young people should cultivate? What atrocious crime have our venerable Bishops committed that they should be stabbed under the fifth rib by the Epworth Era editor. Go slow, Bro. Steel. The Southern Methodist Bishops made you what you are. Put on the brakes.

PERIODICALS.

We have received from Messrs. Flood & Vincent, The Chautauqua-Century Press, Meadville, Pa., five new volumes which will constitute the course of reading for the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle during 1894-95 beginning in October. The following are the books: The Growth of the English Nation, illustrated, by Profs. Katharine Coman and Elizabeth Kendall, of Wellesley College; Europe in the Nineteenth Century, illustrated, by Prof. H. P. Judson, of the University of Chicago; Renaissance and Modern Art, illustrated, by Prof. William H. Goodyear, of the Brooklyn Institute; From Chaucer to Tennyson, by Prof. Henry A. Beers, of Yale University; Walks and Talks in the Geological Field, by the late Prof. Alexander Winchell, of the University of Michigan.

Unreasonable.

As a rule the papers in the Methodist Episcopal Church are higher in price than those in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Not a single paper in our church is higher than two dollars per year, but the New York Advocate and Zion's Herald are both two dollars and fifty cents, and their publishers declare they can not be issued for less money. Yet with us there is a constant clamor for a reduction in the price of our papers. It is unreasonable.—Central Methodist.

NOTES.

Dr. Tigert secured 51 new subscribers to the Methodist Review at the Kentucky Conference.

Oil has been found near Burns, Tenn., and it is thought that at a depth of 500 feet it will flow in paying quantities.

The Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias has decided to receive no more liquor dealers and gamblers into the order.

Dr. J. E. Godbey, the new editor of the Arkansas Methodist, is showing himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Of Mgr. Satolli's "manifesto" against the saloon-keepers, a Western paper aptly remarks: "It was only a toy pistol and was not loaded."

Dr. H. C. Morrison, our Missionary Secretary, has been transferred from the North Georgia Conference to the Louisville Conference, his old home.

In Great Britain and Ireland there are nearly 20,000 juvenile temperance societies of one kind and another, with an estimated membership of 2,614,000 young people.

The report put into circulation by some busy-body to the effect that the New Orleans Church Extension Society is dead is a slander. It has not even the semblance of truth.

The Salvation Army's "Darkest England" social scheme has been the means of inducing 1,757 unfortunate women to enter rescue homes, of whom 1,423 have been converted.

What does a preacher's agency for his Conference organ amount to, if he never gets a subscriber, and never tries to do so, either privately or in the pulpit?—what except this: He gets the paper at half price.

The congregation at Carondelet Street Church were favored last Sunday with a spiritual feast in the shape of a sermon from our senior Bishop. The Bishop grows in deep spirituality with advancing years.

A Bible agent in Brazil reports that the priests destroy every Bible they can get hold of, and do all in their power to prevent the people from buying, telling them that the Protestant Bible is full of lies, and a very dangerous book.

The recent session of the Pittsburgh Conference witnessed an unusual scene. When the elders were ordained Bishop Foster called to his assistance three members of the Conference and a Presbyterian and a Baptist clergyman, pastors of their respective churches in the place.

The Sunday-school of Carrollton Avenue Church, in this city, has taken a new departure in the way of a course of study. While it uses the International Lessons, it has a supplemental course intended to run through a period of eleven years. It has adopted the graded system in use in the public schools.

Our senior Bishop does not belong to the class of "non-preaching prelates." During the long hot Summer, when he was on the coast, and was supposed to be resting, he preached somewhere every Sunday. He sets a fine example for younger men also in the fact that he is a prodigious reader, keeping himself abreast of the times in theology, literature and science.

Total abstinence in the British army in India is on the advance, the number of abstainers having nearly doubled in four years. The present commander-in-chief, Sir George White, is much interested in the subject, and has discovered that nearly all the crime and half the sickness in the army are traceable to drink, and that intemperance is the main cause of failure in health and endurance on the part of the British soldier.

A new city has been projected as a suburb of New Orleans. It is located about ten miles out on the I. C. R. R., at the spot hitherto known as Kenner station. It will be put down on the maps as Hanson City, in honor of Mr. A. H. Hanson, the general passenger agent of the I. C. railroad. Seven hundred acres of land have been purchased and laid off into lots. Besides having two railroads passing through it, the new city has the advantage of an extensive river front. A number of factories will be started at an early day. A large number of residences will be erected for renting purposes, and aid will be given to those who prefer to own their own homes. The projectors of the enterprise propose to contribute ten per cent. of the cost of a church to be erected by any denomination. There is an immense amount of capital behind the movement.

An Appeal.

To the Methodists of Louisiana and all others interested in Centenary College, I make the following appeal in behalf of the Department of Natural Science.

If you are in possession of any natural specimens, geological, mineralogical, or zoological, which you are willing to devote to educational purposes, I respectfully request and urge that you donate them to the museum of Centenary College. Any objects of curiosity or historical interest, such as Indian relics, war relics, etc., will be gladly received. If you do not possess any of these, but will suggest or furnish a means of securing them, the favor will be greatly appreciated. Our material for chemical experiments and apparatus for practical work in chemistry and astronomy is very limited, and there are no funds on hand for enlargement here, except such as have been contributed by a few good friends, who have been thoughtful of these needs. One brother from Mississippi will send fifty dollars the first of October, and another from —— promises to send one hundred dollars within a few weeks. Now, let a few other friends give from five to twenty-five (or more) dollars each; and if you desire, specify for what you wish the money used. I am now greatly in need of, at least, five hundred dollars for laboratory purposes, and shall be glad to communicate with anyone who may feel disposed to help along this line. If Centenary is to do true college work in all her departments, let her friends help as they can to increase her facilities; and to this end I beg your co-operation as suggested above.

J. M. SULLIVAN.

Centenary College, Jackson, La.

Louisiana Part of Woodville District.

At the close of the last General Conference all of that part of Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, became a part of the Louisiana Conference territory, preachers and all. By the way, they get some of our strongest men. H. R. Singleton, W. L. C. Hunnicutt and H. Walter Featherstun can fill acceptably any pulpit in that Conference, and they don't get from us a single Conference claimant. The money raised for Conference claimants in Woodville district will, doubtless, be for the benefit of the claimants in the Mississippi Conference this year—so says Bishop Keener—and should be forwarded to the Mississippi "Joint Board." The foreign and domestic missionary the same way. There are seven works in that part of Woodville district lying in Louisiana that have appropriations. If these brethren serving these works will forward to me their reports and postoffices at the close of the Conference year, I will remit to them the amounts due them from our Missionary Board. Full reports are to be made to the Louisiana Conference.

To All Preachers of Every Evangelical Denomination in Mississippi

Do not fail to call the attention of your congregations to the Convention to be held in Jackson, Miss., Wednesday, Oct. 24, at 10 A. M., to organize a State Sabbath Association. Addresses are expected to be made by eminent laymen and able preachers. We must organize to preserve our American Sabbath, and prevent the prevalence of the so-called European Sabbath.

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN, and Others.

Brethren: Will you please send me your church extension money by check or money order on Vicksburg, or draft on Jackson or New Orleans? There is no necessity for taking it to Conference. Having to collect at Conference delays the Board in the transaction of its work, and renders it very laborious to the treasurer.

BEYOND.

BY ELLEN K. BRADFORD.

I think that the first glad sound I shall hear
When I enter heaven, will be
The musical patter of little feet
On the golden streets toward me.

And peeping out between angels' wings
At the pearly gates I shall see
The dear little child who, with flying feet,
Will be coming to welcome me.

The lilies will fall from her dear little hands
Down on her robe of snow;
She will hush her singing, and, reaching her arms,
She will come to her mother, I know.

I can feel even now those dear little hands,
That will gently quiver in mine,
And the dimpled arms that about my neck,
As of old, will so fondly twine.

But how will she know, through the furrows deep,
And the dim, faded eyes and hair,
The one on whose bosom she used to sleep,
And whose face was then young and fair?

Ah, these are of earth; when I go to her,
The eyes, here so used to tears,
Will shine with a luster fresh and bright,
To begin on eternal years.

Then the silver hair a bright crown will be
Of glory about my brow;
"No spot, nor wrinkle, nor any such thing,"
Shall disfigure me then as now.

And Jesus, our Savior, will tenderly look
On us, and, in accents mild,
He will say to the angels, "That mother was led
To me by that little child."

Little by Little.

It is a law of God's moral government that wicked conduct shall become easier and easier as men persist in it.

And this is a merciful provision of the divine government. Many a boy has been saved from the penitentiary by the teachings of a mother who understood this law. She would say, "My son, if you steal the smallest thing, it will become easier to you to steal something of greater value." It is the first step that must be resisted; for the path of sin becomes easier and easier as we walk on in it.

Here is a boy, who only last week swore his first oath. He heard one of the larger boys swear, and thought it was very manly. But when the horrid words first escaped his young lips he was frightened at himself. He started, turned pale, and glanced anxiously around to see if his terrible oath had fallen upon the ear of anyone who might perhaps "tell mother." But very soon his heart has become so hard that he can, without a qualm of conscience, affront high Heaven with his frightful oaths, calling down the vengeance of an angry God upon his own soul, and the souls of his associates.

There was a great painter who longed to paint a picture of heaven. But he had never seen heaven. One day, whilst he was deeply meditating, a little four-year-old boy came near him. It was a lovely child. The light of heaven seemed to fill his laughing eye, and he looked the very picture of purity, innocence and happiness. The painter gazed with rapture upon the bright young face, and said enthusiastically, "I'll paint the child and he shall be my picture of heaven." He was not far wrong. Heaven is purity, and purity is heaven. And if there is anywhere upon this sin-cursed earth—anything left to remind us of heaven, it is a beautiful child whose bright young life has not yet been defiled by the trail of the serpent—sin. And he painted the child, and under the picture he wrote that sweet word—"Heaven."

He then said to himself, "If ever I should meet a human face that shows as much of hate and wickedness as this does of love and innocence, I'll paint that too and call it 'Hell.'" Long years rolled by, and one day, in looking through a prison, in a foreign land, the painter saw a creature whom it seemed the grossest flattery to call a man. He was crouching like a wild beast in one of the darkest corners of the dungeon of condemned felons. His eye gleamed with the fires of the pit. His whole countenance was the embodiment of malignity. The painter started back in horror, but presently recovering himself, he said, "I'll paint that face and call it 'Hell.'" And he did paint it and under the picture he wrote the awful word "Hell." But what was his astonishment when he learned that the condemned felon was the identical little boy, who forty years ago, had sat for his picture of heaven!

Oh, fathers, mothers in Israel, take care, take care! That little one you so tenderly love, and dandle on your knee, and press to your throbbing heart, is sitting as a picture of heaven, or as a model of hell!—Exchange.

Stop Before You Begin.

The great majority of those who are enslaved by strong drink did not begin their career of self-destruction in the dram-shops. While the lower classes of drunkards are victims of saloons, the more respectable sort began with the social glass. It was at the social party, or in the billiard-room, or at the club, or at the wedding that the fatal habit was formed. Not many begin to drink alone, or from sheer appetite for stimulants. The glass was offered to them by somebody, and from want of moral courage or from a desire to appear "gentlemanly" they consented to drink.

I was once at a wedding in a "genteel" circle of society where the popping of champagne corks was like the rattle of musketry. Within a few years I met the oldest son of the family a confirmed drunkard. His parents had tempted other people's sons and ruined their own! The man who sets a decanter on his table sets a trap for his boys that may land them in perdition. The young lady who offers any intoxicant to her young gentlemen friends deserves to become that wretched object, a drunkard's wife.

The drinking usages are sadly on the increase in this country—in social life, at restaurants, at clubs, and even in the fashionable shopping resorts for ladies! While the chief discussion is about prohibiting saloons, Satan is stealing a march on us by tempting young men to be tipplers. The only safeguard for any young man—even though he be a professing Christian—is entire abstinence. He never knows what latent appetite he may have within until the spark touches the gunpowder. A young man of my acquaintance (a church member) found, before he was aware, that he was becoming a slave to the bottle. He said to me, "My young associates invite me to drink with them and are ruining me. After this when they ask me to drink I shall knock them down." He was terribly in earnest; and no wonder; he had been playing with vipers at the mouth of hell.

For two reasons every conscientious young man ought to pledge himself to total abstinence. First, for his own sake, for he don't know how soon he may become a tippler. Secondly, for the sake of others whom he may tempt to ruin by his example. The one time to stop drinking treacherous intoxicants is to stop before you begin.—Dr. Cuyler.

Look upon the bright side of your condition; then your discontents will disperse. Pore not upon your losses, but recount your mercies.

The Value of Civility.

There would be fewer broken friendships, fewer unhappy unions and family quarrels, were it not so much the custom among intimate friends and relations to neglect the small courtesies of life. It is the foundation of misery in marriage, and many a serious and life-long estrangement has begun, not from want of affection so much as from lack of that delicate and instinctive appreciation of the feelings of others which makes a person shrink from saying unpleasant things or finding fault, unless absolutely obliged, and in any case to avoid wounding the offender's sense of dignity or stirring up within him feelings of opposition and animosity; for although many persons profess to be above taking offense at honest censure, and even seem to court criticism, yet it must be very carefully administered not to be unpalatable. Even kind and generous actions are often so uncouthly performed as to cause the recipient more pain than pleasure, while a reproof or denial may be so sweetened by courtesy as almost to do away with any sense of mortification or disappointment. Good breeding is always inclined to form a favorable judgment, and to give others the credit of being actuated by worthy motives. It does not wish or seem to know more about people than they themselves desire should be known, but it is always prepared, when necessary, to take an interest in the affairs of others, while self is not suffered to obtrude unduly.—The Baptist Weekly.

A Mother's Victory.

There are difficulties in many a family which others little dream of, and one of the hardest things is divided counsel, where husband and wife are not one; and yet the one who has the deep spiritual life (and especially if she be the mother) will, I believe, win in the end. I read some time ago of a deeply devoted Christian mother whose husband had become skeptical, and the mother endured untold agony while the father made sport before the children of what was to her most sacred and dear. Not one word passed her lips, however, as she would not lower him in their estimation. When they were in bed she took her New Testament and read the life of the Savior to them, making no comment on what they had heard from their father, and the truth was the effectual antidote. Three of her boys she lived to hear preach Christ, and all her children followed her into the church. She had religious life in her family.—Selected.

The World's Tribute to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893

World's Fair HIGHEST MEDAL.
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

HYGIENE.

Abuse of the Stomach.

Different constitutions have peculiarities in regard to the way in which they assimilate food, and the old adage that what is one man's meat is another's poison, may have some truth in it. There is no ailment more common in middle life and in old age than indigestion. This depends upon improper food taken too frequently or eaten too fast or in undue quantity. The victim of indigestion flies to medicine for relief, or to one of the thousands-and-one quack remedies that are advertised to cure everything. How much more rational would it be to alter the diet, and to give the stomach the food for which it is craving? If the stomach could talk, I can imagine after pills and gin and bitters and quack remedies of every description have been poured into it, it would beg to be relieved of such horrors, and say: give me rest, a cup of oatmeal gruel, or a graham gem, and go and take a little fresh air for my benefit. Instead of this, the miserable organ has to be dosed with all sorts of horrible concoctions in the way of drugs, brandies and sodas, and champagne to endeavor to stimulate it into action. There is no doubt that the stomach that requires stimulants and potions to enable it to act efficiently, can hardly be said to be in a healthy state, or can long continue to do its work properly. The digestive organs, unfortunately, are the first to sympathize with any mental worry. They are like a barometer, and indicate the errors of malnutrition and its consequences. The healthy action of every organ depends upon the proper assimilation of the food taken. As soon as the digestive process fails, everything fails, and ill-health results, with all its disastrous concomitants. More cases of indigestion have been cured by telling the sufferer to eat plain food and saw wood for half an hour daily than by medicine.

Addison tells, in the Spectator, an old story of an emperor who had dyspepsia and his doctor ordered a hole bored in an ax-handle and some medicine poured into it instead of into his mouth. Then the emperor was ordered to use the axe in chopping till his hands became moist with sweat. This, it was said, would cause them to absorb the drug and produce a cure. The story goes that the prescription succeeded and that his majesty became sound and well once more in his digestive organs.—Journal of Hygiene.

The Rest Cure.

"Do you remember old Dr. L.——?" asked a woman of society the other day. "He believed in what is called 'rest cure,' years and years ago. I remember very well a formula he gave me when I was first married, which was practically the same thing that every one advocates now-a-days. 'Whenever a woman feels tired,' he used to say, 'or discouraged, or depressed, or out of sorts generally, she should lie down and be absolutely quiet for fifteen minutes. The eyes should be closed, and the mind should be made a blank as far as possible. She should not even think of the time, but have some one to call her at the expiration of the time. This treatment, reported twice a day, has a wonderful effect on nervous women.'"—Exchange.

Madame Patti has uttered some strong convictions on the effect of alcoholic liquors on the human voice. She thinks anyone who aspires to success as a vocalist should be a total abstainer. She says: "Alcoholic stimulants of any kind tend to irritate the throat, and should be entirely abstained from. Even light wines are no exception to this rule. Most people are familiar with the hoarse voice of the hard drinker, and it is often said of such an individual that he has burnt his throat with drink. Even a moderate use of alcohol may, therefore, tend to make the voice husky." Thus all indications points to total abstinence.

Dr. B. W. Richardson says: "I find that alcoholic drinks give no strength. No, on the contrary. Drink builds up no muscle, but destroys its power, and makes it less active for work."

Sir Andrew Clark, the general physician in the largest hospital in London, says that seven out of every ten persons treated there owe their ill-health to drink.

DAVIS—Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS was born near Evergreen, La., in December, 1871; was married to Miss Lura Blocker in December, 1893, and departed this life at Vinton, La., Sept. 13, 1894.

The church at Vinton was never bereaved of a more faithful and devoted member, and there are none to fill his place. He was very brightly converted under the ministry of Bro. John A. Miller, while he was presiding elder, in August, 1890, and at once became a worker in the church. Shortly after his conversion he obtained exhorter's license, which he held until his death. He was a very faithful and successful Sunday-school superintendent, and, as a humble and earnest servant of the Lord, won the highest esteem and love of all who knew him.

He was afflicted in early Spring with congestion of the lungs, which went into rapid consumption and hastened his death. All during his sickness he was submissive to the will of God, and in affliction was cheerful and never murmured. The writer was with him when he died, and death could not have been gentler in its mission. After taking leave of loved ones, he said that Jesus was with him and that all was well, and then "passed from death unto life" as one that falls to sleep, without a struggle or the slightest indication of pain, but with a smile of triumph. J. W. LEE.

Resolutions adopted by Sulphur Mine Quarterly Conference, Sept. 19, 1894:

Whereas, In the wise providence of God, our dear brother, James C. Davis, has been removed from the sphere of Christian warfare to that of eternal rewards, we, the members of the Sulphur Mine Quarterly Conference, desire to make formal and permanent expression of our sense of loss and bereavement sustained both by us and the entire religious community, of which he was one of its brightest ornaments.

Resolved, That in the death of our dear brother we have lost a faithful friend and wise counselor, and the church of Christ a faithful worker and bright example of the Christian virtues.

Resolved, That the Sunday-school has been especially bereaved in this dispensation of God's providence, and that in every sphere of work in which he was called to labor as a servant of Christ and the church his loss will be irreparable by any human providence, and while we thus record our grateful recollection of all he was to us and the church he so much loved, we will not only revere his memory, but imitate his virtues of mind and graces of character.

Resolved, That our heartfelt sympathies are due and are hereby extended to his faithful wife, devoted parents and brothers and sister.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, to the family of our deceased brother, and that a copy be spread upon the Minutes of this Quarterly Conference.

J. W. LEE,
H. S. SWEENEY.

DECKER—CHARLES E. DECKER was born at Jackson, La., Sept. 15, 1847, and died at his home in West Feliciana parish, Sept. 17, 1894. He was married in 1872 to Mrs. Mary E Norwood (nee Perry), and lived happily with her until his death. Six children were born of this union, of whom two are living. In 1866 he became a member of the M. E. Church, South, in which he lived a consistent, useful life. For several years he has been one of the leading official members of his church. He was a true friend to the pastor. He was greatly beloved by the poor, to whom he was a friend and helper. He was an affectionate husband, a loving father, a good neighbor, a true and useful citizen. Few men enjoy so fully the respect and confidence of their fellow-men.

In public life he was distinguished for probity of purpose. He has held high positions in State and parish, and at his death was treasurer of the State Insane Asylum and representative of his parish in the State Legislature.

He was ill for some weeks, and bore his sufferings with patience and fortitude, trusting in God and relying fully on the merits of his Savior. HIS PASTOR.

MORRIS—Mrs. MARY A. MORRIS, wife of Hon. B. F. Morris, was a native of East Feliciana parish, La., having spent the most of her life in Clinton, where she left a large circle of friends. Sister Morris died in the faith, Aug. 2, 1894, aged sixty-seven years.

Unostentatious, cheerful and trustful, she had what the apostle styles "a lively hope," which was void of that worldly, fallacious element, now too commonly indulged to the exclusion of that joyous expectancy, which is an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast. To her Christ was an abiding, purifying, sanctifying, qualifying, conscious reality. She could say with apostolic complacency, "For I reckon that the sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

She died in sight of the promised land, leaving assurance to her loved ones that all was well. May her Christian life and triumphant death be sanctified of God to the welfare of each member of that broken circle!

Her former pastor, C. A. POWELL.

NAPIER—Mrs. SARAH NAPIER died at her residence in Jones county, Miss., Sept. 21, 1894. She was the widow of Rev. P. H. Napier, who was an itinerant minister of the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South. Sister Napier was the daughter of Rev. John Dooly, of Jasper county, Miss., who died about thirty years ago. Now Bro. Napier, Bro. Dooly and Sister Napier are all over the flood.

E. J. TAYLOR.

SPRUILL—Mrs. CORNELIA F. SPRUILL, wife of Rev. B. L. Spruill, died Aug. 30, 1894, near Ofahome, Miss., in the forty-eighth year of her age. She was always a child of the church. She was the daughter of the Rev. Richard Fryer, of the Methodist Church, and grew up under Christian training, always finding it her pleasure to assist her parents in their work for the Master.

She was married in March, 1867, and in her new home among strangers she realized more than ever her Christian responsibilities, and she was ever found at her post infilling the work of a follower of the blessed Savior. It was impossible to know her and fail to love her, for she was gifted with all those virtues one expects to find in a refined, intellectual Christian woman. Her husband found in her a true helpmeet; her children found her patient and loving, yet firm in her discipline. She realized that motherhood is woman's glorious crown and her children God-given jewels. Hence she took time, in spite of pressing household care, to direct the education of her children; and did not forget, while treining their minds, that there were higher, nobler lessons to be impressed upon their young hearts.

She had been confined to her bed since last November, and was a great sufferer, but bore her sufferings with the gentle submission becoming a Christian. She understood her social duties so well that it was a treat to accept her hospitality. One found such a pure, sweet influence in her home as to call to mind the wise king's description: "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Her influence, like the erome of a bruised flower, lingers in the minds and hearts of those who knew her. Many sincere friends mourn and sympathize with her husband and children. God will bless and comfort them.

MAGGIE PHILLIPS.

DIXON.—On Aug. 25, 1894, the redeemed soul of Mrs. ELIZA DIXON, one of the oldest members, passed peacefully away. Sister Dixon (nee Mullens) was born in Lawrence county, April 26, 1822. In childhood her parents moved to Hinds county, where she spent the rest of her life. She was converted and united with the Methodist Church at eleven years of age. Her last husband, L. Dixon, passed into rest Oct 10, 1884, leaving seven children, who all survive her. She has one sister still on this side waiting for the Master to call her home. Her earlier life was devoted to rearing her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. They, too, are consistent church members, and expect to meet her on the sunny shores of everlasting life.

Her home was a home for the itinerant. She cared also for the poor, who remember her until this day.

Her last days were her brightest in Christian experience. She suffered for five months as few have to suffer, but bore it with Christian fortitude. When she realized the end of this life was near she turned everything over to her Savior, and for weeks enjoyed rapturous peace until she entered heaven. When death came she was surrounded by nearly all her loved ones.

LANINS—Mrs. BARBARA LANINS was born in 1855, and died at her home on Black river, after prolonged illness, July 31, 1894.

Sad, indeed, are these lines which say that the white-winged messenger, Death, has whispered "Come" to one of the fairest of our sex. Not only fair in face, but one whose every thought, every act was to brighten the rugged paths of life. Her youth was crowned with patience, amiableness, and all the virtues that gain the respect and admiration of the stranger and the love of all who knew her. In the advanced years of life her lovely traits were increased by the devotion of a dutiful wife and kind mother. Although the deep sorrow of a heart-broken husband and the sore grief of the motherless children can not be entirely removed, it is much lightened by loving friends and devoted relatives. But in the deepest grief for the absent one there is a divine presence which will comfort all, if we will only depend on Him. Then, don't grieve; be comforted.

J. D.

VAUGHN—Mr. H. A. VAUGHN, of Roxie, Franklin county, Miss., died at his home in Roxie, Sept. 23, 1894, aged forty-eight years. He died of a wound inflicted by his oldest daughter. He freely forgave his daughter, and blamed himself for the misfortune. He professed faith in God through Christ, and felt that his sins had been forgiven. His last words were, "I'm not afraid to die." May God bless the bereaved ones! A. C. FLOWERS.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Composure is very often the highest result of strength. Did we never see a man receive a flagrant insult, and grow a little pale, and then reply quietly? That was a man spiritually strong. Or did we never see a man in anguish stand as if carved out of solid rock, mastering himself? or one bearing a hopeless daily trial remain silent, and never tell the world what it was that cankered his home peace? That is strength. He who with strong passions remains chaste; he who, keenly sensitive, with manly power of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet refrain himself, and forgive; these are strong men, spiritual heroes.—Guardian.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

The type is large and clear, and so far as possible the poems are printed in the order in which they were written, showing the growth of the author in strength and power.

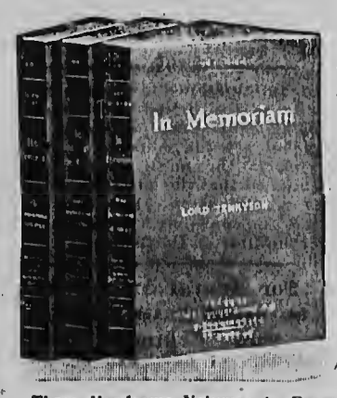
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,
IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.
The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the art motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.
"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.
Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.
Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January, '96. This offer not available to those subscribers who have had the benefit of other premium offers. Those who desire a cloth-bound edition are referred to our advertisement headed, "15 Poets in Library Cloth—Poet's Popular Edition." Address

A train was held up on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad on Oct. 12. The safe of the Adams Express Company was rifled by the robbers, and it is supposed they secured between $150,000 and $200,000

Biloxi, Miss., was visited by a fire on Oct. 12, which swept away four blocks in the center of the town. A survey of the burned district shows the destruction of twenty-seven buildings, aggregating a loss, with their contents, estimated at $75,000.

The white screwmen in this city have made a firm stand, and have notified the stevedores that in the future they would no longer work with their colored rivals in stowing cotton. They claim the latter have broken faith and do not live up to the agreement made for mutual benefit.

The Navy Department is evidently determined that American interests in the far East will be well protected during the progress of the war between China and Japan. Although there are now five good vessels in Chinese waters, other ships are being hurried to that station as rapidly as possible.

The L. and N. and the East Louisiana excursion trains collided at the Northeastern Junction, about two miles from the city, on Sunday. About fifteen people were more or less injured and $40,000 worth of railroad property was destroyed. The East Louisiana locomotive ran into a coach loaded with people and overturned it.

The United States has been invited by the quadruple alliance, composed of Great Britain, France, Germany and Russia, to join it in a friendly intervention in the war between China and Japan. The invitation has been declined. The declination is based on the time-honored policy of this government to avoid any entangling alliances with foreign powers.

Miss Jessie Ackerman, an "around-the-world" missionary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, arrived in Chicago, on Oct. 12, after a trip of 150,000 miles, which she claims is the longest journey ever made by a woman. She had been abroad for seven years and her work has carried her through China, Japan, New Zealand, Australia, India, South Africa, Madagascar, Java, Singapore and the Hawaiian Islands.

In his annual report just issued Gen. Schofield, the Commander-in-chief of the United States Army, made several significant recommendations. These recommendations are, first, an increase of the numerical strength of the army, and, second, the fortification of the Southern coast and harbors. With respect to the fortification of the Southern coast, he points out that there are absolutely no defenses south of Fortress Monroe; whereas there are many positions of incalculable strategical importance which, in the hands of an enterprising enemy, would result in immense damage to the United States.

The Southern Pacific train was held up near Sacramento, Cal., on Oct. 12 and the express car robbed of $50,000.

FOREIGN.

The belief is gaining currency that the Czar of Russia owes his protracted illness to a dose of poison administered by anarchists. His early death is thought probable.

In the present precarious condition of the Russian Czar the eyes of the public are turning toward his son, who will soon be clad with autocratic power over the destinies of 100 000,000 people. The Grand Duke Nicholas is only 26 years of age.

During a bull-fight at Dax, in the south of France, an officer, escorted by policemen, went to the arena to stop the sport. He laid before the directors a legal paper forbidding the fight, and was ignored by them. The fight continued, and after the fight the crowd hustled the policemen and jeered the officer.

An extensive plot against the life of the Czar has been discovered. It is added that this conspiracy is considered by the police to be very formidable, owing to the fact that its membership includes a large number of army officers. Many arrests, it is added, have already been made at Warsaw, Odessa and Kief.

The British journals have continually scored Japan on account of her position in precipitating the war with China. The course of the Mikado's government is described as unfair and unjust. Japan has not entered upon a war of conquest. The purpose aimed at in taking temporary possession of Corea is to secure the complete independence of that country and the destruction of the influence of China in Corean affairs.

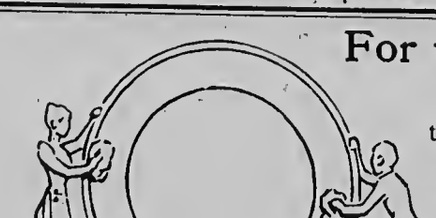
Elections for members in the Chamber of Deputies were held throughout Belgium on Oct. 14. The voting was under the new compulsory system, which provides severe penalties for non-voters. The electors were divided into three classes, as follows: One-year residents, over 25 years of age, who were entitled to one vote; married men and widowers with families, who pay personal tax of five francs to the State, who had two votes, and priests and others of position and education, who had three votes.



For washing Dishes,

there's nothing like Pearline. Why don't you begin the use of it in that way, if you're one of the timid sisters who still think that Pearline "eats the clothes?"

Then you can soak things in it for a year or two, and test it in every way, until you become convinced that Pearline can't do any harm. But it won't eat your dishes, that's sure. It won't clog up the sink pipes, either, as soap does. And that cloudy effect that you've probably noticed on cut glass and china when it's washed with soap—that won't be there if you wash it with Pearline.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 412 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

(I. John i, 7; I. Peter i, 18, 19; Rev. vii, 14; Heb. x, 19, 20.)

Much loose talk about the blood of Christ. Have heard it said that one drop of Christ's blood could wash away vast loads of sin! It was this materialism which induced benighted papists to conserve and to this day exhibit drops of that blood in sacred vials, working miracles whenever shown (!). Whenever the Bible speaks of the blood of Christ, it means his sacrificial death. That, and nothing more. I shall here treat the second last text:—Revelation vii, 14.

1. They have come out of great tribulations.

(1) Tribulations come to every child of God. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

(2) Tribulations are not punitions. God would not exact payment twice. Jesus paid it all. That suffices.

(3) Tribulations are not remedial. If Lazarus, with all his suffering, had been an unbeliever, he would have lifted up his eyes in hell, being in torment.

(4) Tribulations are correctives. To keep us in the narrow way.

2. They washed their robes. Highly figurative. The washing of garments a familiar process.

(1) Have repented of their sins, turned away from them.

(2) Have been converted. Faith in Christ has made them whole. Have a new heart. Are children of God.

3. Made them (their garments) white in the blood of the Lamb. Reference to the ancient process of bleaching. Gradually the originally grey linen turns perfectly white.

(1) Bleached, sprinkled, not with water, but with the blood of Christ. The Holy Spirit constantly enabling us to say: "Abba, Father."

(2) Bleached. Constantly exposed to the warm rays of the Sun of Righteousness.

(3) Bleached. Diligently availing ourselves of the various means of grace. Faithful as workers in the Master's vineyard.

The Union Epworth League

Of New Orleans convened in Louisiana Avenue Church on Oct 11. Dr. Sawyer conducted the religious services. The church was beautifully decorated. Attendance very good. The League of Rayne Memorial Church was, upon application, gladly received into the Union. The reports from the different secretaries indicated commendable progress. Several preachers honored the Union with their presence. The election of officers who will have to serve during the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Morris DePass; three vice-presidents: John Krebbin, Harry Russ, John Ehlert; secretary, Miss Addie McKnight; treasurer, George Brown; editor of Epworth League column in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, this paper scribe.

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

GOD'S LOVE IS LIKE GOD'S SUN.

BY REV. W. E. SELLERS.

God's love is like God's sun!—
It shines behind the blackest cloud,
It shines, although the storm roars loud,
It shines till day is done;
Its beams fall lightly here and there,
Reflecting glory everywhere,
And cheering everyone.

God's love is like God's sun!—
It looks where sleeps the violet blue,
And calls it forth to fragrance new,
And says the Spring's begun;
It paints the lily snowy white,
In darkest spots it sheds God's light,
In spots which all men shun.

God's love is like God's sun!—
Upon the clouds it paints God's "bow,"
It gilds with fire the flakes of snow,
The raindrops everyone
Receive its light, flash back its beams,
From heaven to earth its glory streams,
For sunlight misses none.

God's love is like God's sun!—
In Summer's glare, in Winter's shade,
When flowers bloom, when flowers fade,
Till life's short course is run,
Love gently smoothes the lines of care,
And lifts man up from earth to where Still shines in heaven God's sun.

Two Ancient Japanese Capitals.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

Japan certainly occupies a unique place in the civilizations of the East. It has been considerably Westernized, but no one can claim that it has been Christianized, and I fear some years will elapse before that glad morning will open its golden gates. The enterprise of the West, without its ethics, its militarianism, without its religion, have been emulated and adopted. It is the mission and sublime opportunity of the church to challenge this eager thought, and while not arresting its movement, direct it into divine channels. When the mind is most alert the Holy Spirit can most speedily and savingly work. So as this island kingdom is emerging from the rigid, if not stolid, conservatism of paganism, and is feeling the thrill and power of a new life; the church must act promptly and vigorously, or superstition will only be substituted by rank infidelity. That a wonderful change has been wrought, the faded shrines and weather-worn temples of the country amply and eloquently testify. The old faiths have largely lost their grasp upon the national mind, but the true light has not yet shined upon it. A desperate effort, especially by one or two of the eight sects of Buddhists, is being made to recover their lost ground, and resist the dreaded invasion of Christianity. The priests have, therefore, betaken themselves to preaching, and in Kioto a Buddhist university has been established for the indoctrination of young men preparing for the temple service. The buildings are large, modern in architecture and arrangement, and the liberally furnished library, I am told, contains a number of commentaries on, or rather against, the Bible. This institution is only fifteen years old, and is an expression of that reaction against Western religions of which we have heard not a little. But this determined effort to galvanize into life the once dominant and resistless Buddhism, must come to grief. Though the day of emancipation may be postponed, the Son of God will surely set Japan free—and she will be free indeed.

Leaving Kobe early Wednesday afternoon, we ran up to Nara, one of the oldest and most sacred cities of the kingdom, with Bro. Turner for our guide and guardian. Between Osaka and Nara we passed in full view the ancient monastery of Ho-rin-ji, the oldest Buddhist temple in Japan, completed in the year 607. It is said to contain probably the most important collection of art treasures to be found in any Japanese temple, for the preservation of which the government a few years ago made a grant of $10,000. The oldest Sanscrit manuscript in existence was found in this temple, and a few years ago forwarded to Max Muller in England.

We reached Nara about eight o'clock, and I had my first night in a regular Japanese hotel. At the door we left our shoes, and in the rooms to be occupied we discovered and felt the conspicuous absence of the ordinary furniture in an American house. Probably out of consideration for the avoirdupois and ungracefulness of two of us, three chairs were after awhile brought in, and a table on which to place our evening meal. Beds were laid on the floor, and there we slept—or, at least, tried. Thanks to the thoughtfulness of Bro. Turner, I had a comparatively soft place for my weary head; but who, except a native, can sleep on a Japanese pillow? It is almost as hard as the one on which Jacob dreamed a dream; but I have never heard of anyone who "set it up for a pillar" after a night of visions and revelations. It is a piece of wood six or eight inches long, two or three wide, and probably four inches high. It is scooped out somewhat on top, and used with or without a small, hard cushion—generally without. The argument for such a head-rest, I am told, is that it does not disarrange the ladies' hair—an important matter, as one readily appreciates who has ever seen the elaborately arranged and pomaded hair of a Japanese lady.

Another new experience I had that night. In all good conscience I have tried to live for nearly forty-five years, and amid travels and perils at home and abroad, have lived, if not above suspicion, at least above judicial apprehension and arrest. But that night I was reported and registered at police headquarters. My companions, however, shared the same fate, as do all foreigners venturing beyond treaty limits. Soon after scouring our apartments—floors on which to sit and sleep—the proprietor called for our passports, and sent them to the chief of police. Such is the law. Every hotel proprietor or gentleman entertaining a foreign guest for a night must report his name and passport before he sleeps, or he is subject to arrest and punishment. So it was not for what I did, but for what I was—an American citizen—that I had to report at police headquarters.

Nara is a quaint, old town of about 20,000 population, and in the early years, from 709 to 784, was the capital of the Empire. Up to that time it was the custom for each Mikado to change his residence, fearing, or not desiring, to live in the same palace or place where his predecessor died.

In a grove, through which one would delight to wander and wonder, are several large temples, the approaches to which are lined on either side with from one to three rows of stone lanterns. These are memorials, erected by the devout in honor of some god or dead hero. Near one of the temples on the hill is a shrine which amused me when its history was learned. There is the trunk of a tree out of which grows five or six different species—a cherry, a camelia, etc.—and which has been deified. Before it I saw hundreds of white pieces of paper tied to a lattice—the prayers of the faithful offered and left as memorials. They are the petitions of motherless wives—Hannahs asking for Samuels—and the poor things imagine that the god of that fruitful old tree can remove their reproach. But what seems inconsistent with that story is the fact that children are not at a premium in any non-Christian land, and Japan is notably not an exception. Still I can't afford to spoil a pretty story.

Not far from that was another no less interesting. It was a handsomer shrine, with some attractive images, and which was evidently quite popular. A similar one I saw at Kioto, and even more liberally patronized. Not only were the white paper prayers presented and left to plead after the suppliant had gone, but the photograph of the kneeling and needy one was also tied to the shrine. Toat was the god who looked after the love affairs of the young and brought about matrimonial alliances. From the number of petitions I should imagine that there were a great many hopeless bachelors and forlorn maidens in this beautiful land. Whether this god has regard for the cry of widowhood, I did not learn. If so, I can understand the popularity of his shrine, for this is the country of easy divorces and grass widows. When a man concludes to change wives, he has only to request one name stricken from the register and another inserted. One brother told me he had a cook—a comparatively young man—who had had six wives. Another had a man to apply for the position of cook, and when informed that he would only employ one with a wife, he removed that objection the next morning by reappearing with a companion.

The chief attraction in Nara is the massive image of Dai Butzu, which is seven feet higher than the famous one at Kamakura, but probably less artistic. It is less imposing and impressive from being inclosed within a building. The old temple, To-dai-ji, is sadly out of repair; but from the weather-worn appearance of the scaffolding around it, there is little hope of restoration. The image is fifty-three feet high, is in a sitting posture, sitting on a lotus flower, with the legs crossed, the right hand uplifted and palm turned outward, while the left rests on the knee, with the fingers turned upward. This figure was cast in 749, after eight unsuccessful attempts at its construction, and under the eye and direction of the Mikado himself. On either side are large gilded figures of certain Bosatsus—saints—who have to pass through one more incarnation before becoming Buddhas.

We bade Nara adieu in the forenoon, and "booked" for Kioto, passing through the great city of Osaka again without stopping. That second city of the Empire I purpose seeing at a later day. Of Kioto, the ancient capital, and until recently the home of the Mikados—of its temples and people, of its industries and customs—I could write a dozen letters, if time and space allowed. It has about 250,000 population, and is in many respects the most typical city in this Sunrise Kingdom, containing and retaining, as it does, both old and new Japan. Here we have the most religious adherence to the old religious faiths, and the adoption of most modern ideas in manufacture—ancient superstition and modern commerce. We visited, of course, the Mikado's palace, but had to content ourselves with a jinriksha ride around the walls, in the absence of a special imperial permit to enter the historic grounds. The roofs and general design of the buildings inside we could see, and did not thereby have our appreciation of Japanese architecture at all increased. Beyond, and yet near, the spacious grounds of the Mikado is the Doshisha University, the famous institution of the Congregational Church, and founded by Rev. Joseph Neshima, whose life I read just before leaving America—a story, by the way, which has the dramatic interest of a tale of chivalry. In each one of the substantial brick buildings which adorn the campus is a portrait of that remarkable and consecrated man—one of the earliest and mightiest of the later Japanese converts to Christianity. Well for the university if the spirit of that gifted and godly man should abide in its halls and inspire its labors. But there are reports current, and thought to be correct, that the drift from the true faith is occasion for genuine alarm. Every friend of Christian missions wishes for this really great institution a history of larger prosperity, but on safer lines. Alas! for the church when, in the presence of superstition and false religions, her representatives begin to prate about speculations that lead to disintegration and defeat.

There is a new Buddhist temple in course of erection at Kioto, begun thirteen years ago, and estimated to cost between five and six millions of dollars. This is being built by the Shin, or "true sect," known as "the Protestants" of Buddhism. They are progressive, having appropriated and engrafted some of the ethical teachings of Christianity upon their system. This temple and the theological school, if so it may be termed, are the only substantial evidences I have seen of a revived or sustained interest in the old faiths. I was shown some immense black ropes—cables—and told that they are 2,700 feet long, and made of the hair of Japanese women, contributed for the purpose. How that recalls some suggestive history connected with the construction of the great temple at Jerusalem! The architecture of the structure varies little, if any, from the more ancient temples. It has immense projecting cornice and gables, wide verandas, and massive columns around the buildings—there are always two—but without dome or spire. And is not that typical? Their religion is of the earth, earthy—has only to do with this life—and does not point the soul upward, or make the hopes soar heavenward.

But the most attractive and impressive of all Kioto temples is San-jin-sangen-Do, or the great Kwannon monastery, dedicated to the Thousand-handed Kwannon, the Goddess of Mercy. It was founded by one of the Mikados in 1132. It is filled with images, life-size, of the 1,000 Kwannon to the number of 1,001, and with smaller images, all numbering 33,333. Each image has forty hands, and in each hand is some symbol of worship, representing, as it does, some trait or phase of divine character. Here one could linger for hours, but other points must be visited. Before passing out the door, however, one must stop and look at a smaller image against the wall—one familiar to all who handle the Japanese dollar bills. It is the image of Dai-ko-ku, the God of Wealth, a very fat man, with a bag of money on his back, a hammer in one hand, with which to strike out coin from the rock, and his feet resting on two large bags of rice. That figure adorns the dollar bills of the national currency.

Near this temple the traveler is shown a stone monument surmounting a high mound. It is Mi-mi zuka, or the "Ear Monument." Beneath are buried the ears and noses of Coreans captured or killed in a war waged against that country in the sixteenth century.

In the pottery and silk manufactories—famed throughout the world—one gets bewildered; they always make you sit down, and then give you a cup of tea. You are amazed at the delicate, intricate, perfect combination of color and figure, and all wrought by human hands and with the crudest instruments. I saw a fellow putting some delicate touches on a piece of cloisonnal with a little bamboo stick. Some of that ware, made on brass and silver, is burned eight times, and afterward passes through six or eight processes of polishing. The whole outfit, tools, ovens, etc., of that world-known establishment is not worth one hundred dollars. The investment is in the skilled hand and deft fingers.

Our night at Kioto will never be forgotten. It was the last and supreme night of the Bon festival—the time when the spirits of the dead revisit the earth and receive offerings of rice, etc. Along the roadway we noticed groups of people in the village cemeteries, removing grass and putting fresh flowers on the modest monuments. At Kioto the display was most brilliant. On the sides of the overhanging mountain there were magnificent fireworks; one piece being a perfect representation of the great Shinto gate before each temple, another a Japanese junk, even to the light on the top mast, and another a figure of their character for power. The narrow streets were glorious with many-colored lanterns, while the river was simply wonderful with lights and transparencies. All the city turned out that night in best bib and tucker. The theaters were crowded, and the streets were jammed. Everyone seemed happy, and nobody specially mournful, on account of the returned spirits so soon to depart. I counted it a privilege to have been in Kioto on the occasion of this celebration.

Don't Worry.

Do your best, and unanxiously leave the rest to God. It is not so much hard work as fret and worry that kills men. Let your troubles be turned from stumbling-blocks into stepping-stones, on which to mount courageously to higher things. This universe is not left to the blind rule of fortuitous atoms; in all its vast machinery not one delicate screw is loose, and from microscopic mote to fixed star, and from faintest heart-throb to singing, celestials spheres, God's tender, all-comprehensive thought sleeplessly moves and blessedly sustains. If God arrays the lily in more than imperial beauty and splendor, and no sparrow falls or grass blade goes unwatched by his careful eye, surely he will not leave your immortal nature unadorned or uncared for. Over-regard for material blessings is the secret of barking care and bootless anxiety.

W. F. M. S.

The annual meeting of the Louisiana W. F. M. S. convened at Lecompte, Oct. 5, and was held in the Methodist Church, which was decorated, and the air made sweet by the breath of flowers. Over the altar were the initials, "W. F. M. S.," and the motto, "She hath done what she could," in silver letters upon a blue scroll.

Our faithful president, Mrs. Thos. P. Fullilove, presided, assisted, as usual, by her able recording secretary, Miss Lizzie Paxton. We regretted the absence of our corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. J. Foster, and we all missed her gentle presence. A goodly number of delegates were present, though many societies were not represented. They failed to send a delegate, and also neglected sending a report, which was greatly deplored, as it rendered it impossible to make out a correct and complete report of the entire work for the year. One brother thought the failure to send more delegates must be owing to "us stingy men," and he asked God "to forgive, and open hearts and pocketbooks, that at the next annual meeting every society may be represented." And we said, "Amen."

Miss Mary Werlein presided at the organ, assisted by the choir, and she and Mrs. Campman delighted the audience with sacred duets, in which their voices blend so harmoniously.

The good people of Lecompte opened their hearts and homes with lavish hospitality, and each and every delegate was made to feel welcome and at home in their midst. We were not even permitted to walk to and from church, but a hack was at our disposal, both day and night.

The ties of friendship formed will be lasting, and sweet memories will linger of the days spent so pleasantly in Christian love and fellowship.

The best was reserved for the last. Sunday was a day long to be remembered by all. It was a feast of good things, from the opening of Sunday-school until the close of services at night. Bro. Hoffpauir's eloquent sermon warmed every heart, and from our souls we thanked him for the utterance of such stirring truths. In the afternoon a "young people's" society was organized, and about thirty names enrolled. At night the exercises were conducted by Miss Mary Werlein, and none who were present can ever forget that occasion. The light of Heaven was in her countenance, and she spoke as one inspired—she seemed literally baptized with the Holy Ghost; and when she led in prayer, the Spirit was poured out and all hearts melted, and hearty amens resounded throughout the audience. All felt that it was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Mrs. Fullilove concluded by reading in her gentle manner an original poem, which was beautiful and impressive.

On Monday morning we met and held a short service, after which good-bys were said, and the delegates were soon speeding homeward. The "Convention," a thing of the past.

A Cheerful Giver.

It is said in the divine Word that "God loveth a cheerful giver." Our New Testament critics tell us that the word which has been translated "cheerful" has lost very much of its meaning in the translation. There are two ideas in the original word—the idea of joy, and the idea of promptness to act under the influences of that joy. We get some conception of the meaning of the original word when we learn that it is the word from which comes directly our words "hilarious," "hilarity." The "cheerful giver," then, is the person who gives promptly and with joy when an opportunity is presented. He never puts on a long face and talks of hard times when he has a chance to give. You don't have to beg and beseech, and then pull a gift out of him by main force. While you are presenting your cause, he is feeling for his purse or check book. That is the way God does, and he loves everyone who acts like him. One of these "cheerful givers" has lately made himself known to me. Hearing of the need of our college, he sends one hundred dollars, and writes: "I wish you knew how happy my heart is in making this remittance, even if 'tis small compared to the wants and demands of the college." A little further down on the same page he writes, "You don't know how glad I am to make this small remittance." The contribution of one hundred dollars in such a spirit is regarded by the Lord as a richer gift than ten thousand dollars pulled out of a man by a week's work of our agent. The giver of this one hundred dollars, given with such a cheerful spirit, is already amply repaid in the knowledge of the fact that God loves him. Now, I would like to find another such giver, that he, too, may be blest with God's love.

American Bible Society.

To the Members of the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church, South—

Dear Brethren: Please allow me to call your attention to the collection for the Bible cause, and to urge you, one and all, to heed the mandate of your respective Conferences, and also of the General Conference (see Disp., pp. 36, 43, 49 and 65), and take a collection for said cause in every congregation served by you. Money for the great work in which the American Bible Society is engaged is urgently needed. Multitudes at home, and millions in benighted regions of the earth, are yet to be supplied with the Word of Life, and the American Bible Society is doing all in its power to supply them.

At a cost of less than $600 000 it distributed during the past year 1,417 659 copies of the Sacred Oracle. This is a most magnificent showing, but much more work was needed, and much more could have been done, had the money been on hand with which to do it.

Please urge all your people to come up to the help of this noble society in its noble work. Surely God's people ought not to give themselves any rest till a copy of God's Word is placed in every home and habitation of earth.

In the Living Present.

Pere Hyacinthe is delivering a series of sermons in the Salle Vanbier, Paris, on the subject, "Anarchy and Family Life." He holds that parents are generally too lenient in training their offspring. Obedience must be taught, if it shall be learned, in early childhood.

Two thousand magazines are published in Great Britain. One-fourth of that number are religious. Is that number the ratio of Christians and unbelievers in Albion? 'Tis there as here. Many religious pretenders do not subscribe for a religious journal.

The last of America's illustrious sextet—Whittier, Hawthorne, Emerson, Longfellow, Lowell—Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, has passed away. He died on Oct. 7. He was Boston's poet laureate; but he excelled principally as essayist. His "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" is a work of rare merit.

Prof. David Swing—modest, guileless, sympathetic—died in Chicago, Oct. 10. Expelled from the Presbyterian Church for heresy, about twenty years ago, he posed as the Henry Ward Beecher of the Windy City. Central Music Temple, property of a stock company, where he officiated, was filled on every Sunday by thousands of admirers. He was an ecclesiastical buccaneer. Humanitarianism and philanthropy were the burden of his sermons. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy," was his favorite text.

Mr. Malcolm Moffat, grandson of the great African missionary, has given up a lucrative colonial appointment to take part in mission work on Lake Nyassa. Our Master "divides the spoil with the strong."

The dissensions in Madagascar are largely religious. The Queen and her ministers are Protestants; but the numerous Catholic missionaries are nearly all French. These, owing to the French protectorate, claim special privileges. Fifteen thousand French soldiers are on their way to the unfortunate island. Their arrival will mark a sad day for the Protestant missions in Madagascar.

A notorious worldling, posing as a Protestant, recently remarked to the well-known Father O'Leary, of Ireland: "I have no objection to having the Virgin Mary treated with reverence, but only as a venerable, respectable woman—just such a one as my mother." "Still," replied O'Leary, quickly, "you must allow there is some difference in the children." Served the worldling right! Strange that men, devoid of religion, should claim to be Protestants. ICH DIEN,

As a result of a glorious revival at Ingersoll, Texas, the citizens changed the name of the town from Ingersoll to Edison. Symbol—Ingersoll, darkness; Edison, light.

WORDS.

One day a harsh word rashly said,
Upon an evil journey sped,
And like a sharp and cruel dart,
It pierced a fond and loving heart;
It turned a friend into a foe,
And everywhere brought pain and woe.

A kind word followed it one day,
Flew swiftly on its blessed way;
It healed the wound it soothed the pain,
And friends of old were friends again;
It made the hate and anger cease,
And everywhere brought joy and peace.

But yet the harsh word left a trace
The kind word could not quite efface;
And though the heart its love regained,
It bore a scar that long remained;
Friends could forgive, but not forget,
Or lose the sense of keen regret.

Oh, if we could but learn to know
How swift and sure one word can go!
How would we weigh with utmost care
Each thought before it sought the air,
And only speak the words that move
Like white-winged messengers of love.

Regeneration.

It is a matter of regret and, I fear, of serious consequence to not a few of our church that our people do not secure and carefully read Mr. Wesley's sermons and cease to take other peoples' construction of them. I heard one of our preachers say of another only a few days ago: "He claims too much for regeneration." He then said, "I believe as Mr. Wesley teaches in his sermon on sin and believers." But what does Mr. Wesley teach? This: "We allow that the state of a justified person is inexpressibly great and glorious. He is born again, 'not of blood, nor of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.' He is a child of God, a member of Christ, an heir of the kingdom of heaven. 'The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keepeth his heart and mind in Christ Jesus.' His very body is a 'temple of the Holy Ghost,' and a 'habitation of God through the Spirit.' He is 'created anew in Christ Jesus:' he is washed, he is sanctified. His heart is purified by faith; he is cleansed 'from the corruption that is in the world;' 'the love of God is shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost which is given unto him.' And so long as he 'walketh in love' (which he may always do) he worships God in spirit and in truth. He keepeth the commandments of God, and doeth those things that are pleasing in his sight; so exercising himself as to 'have a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men:' and he has power both over outward and inward sin, even from the moment he is justified."

But, it will be asked, does not Mr. Wesley teach that there is yet sin in the justified man? Yes, he uses these words: "'But was he not then freed from all sin, so that there is no sin in his heart?' I can not say this; I can not believe it; because St. Paul says the contrary." But this is not all he says in the same sermon. He also says this: "But 'they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with its affections and lusts.' They have so; yet it remains in them still, and often struggles to break from the cross. Nay, but they have put off the old man with his deeds.' They have; and in the sense above described, 'old things are passed away; all things are become new.' A hundred texts may be cited to the same effect; and they will all admit of the same answer. 'But to say all in one word, Christ gave himself for the church, that it might be holy, and without blemish.' And so it will be in the end: but it never was yet, from the beginning to this day."

Three facts are thus far presented: (1) The justified are washed, sanctified; (2) yet there is sin in the heart; (3) the church will be holy and without blemish in the end: but it never was yet from the beginning to this day. Then there is a conclusion as follows: "The sum of all this is: There are in every person, even after he is justified, two contrary principles, nature and grace, termed by St. Paul the flesh and the spirit. Hence, although even babes in Christ are sanctified, yet it is only in part. In a degree, according to the measure of their faith, they are spiritual; yet in a degree they are carnal. Accordingly believers are continually exhorted to watch against the flesh, as well as the world and the devil. And to this agrees the constant experience of the children of God. While they feel this witness in themselves, they feel a will not wholly resigned to the will of God. They know they are in him; and yet find a heart ready to depart from him, a proneness to evil in many instances and a backwardness to that which is good. The contrary doctrine is wholly new; never heard of in the church of Christ, from the time of his coming into the world till the time of Count Zinzendorf: and it is attended with the most fatal consequences."

These are plain words, and they are words full of warning to every thoughtful Christian; nor have I been able to find a word in the sermon about getting rid of this feeling in this life. St. Paul was not rid of it, for he said in I. Cor. ix, 27: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." These words were written about the year 57, or about ten years before the death of St. Paul, and from the best information I can get about twenty years after his conversion.

But it may be answered that Mr. Wesley changed his opinions and wrote differently on this subject. I know he was ever open to conviction, and in Tyerman's Life of Wesley (Vol. I, page 88) is a quotation from Wesley's works (Vol. III, page 203), in which Mr. Wesley said, in 1765 of his sermon on 'The Circumcision of the Heart:" "This sermon contains all that I now teach concerning salvation from all sin, and loving God with an undivided heart."

Let our people get these sermons and read them, and learn from his own lips what Mr. Wesley taught as to what we should be in the sight of God, and how we should attain thereto. They will cost but a small sum of money; they will prove a great blessing to all who read them, and will put an end to the controversy over what our church teaches on the subject of sanctification and regeneration.

A Plea for Home Missions in St. Landry.

St. Landry parish is in what is generally reckoned as Southwest Louisiana, and is about the second largest parish in the State. Her soil is rich, varying from the valleys of the Teche and other bayous on the east to the high-rolling prairies on the west. Her white population numbers about forty thousand, the great majority of whom are French descent, or Creoles. The parish is being rapidly developed, especially the western part, which, a few years ago, was a barren waste, roamed over by the Creole cows and ponies, but which is now one of the greatest rice-producing countries in America. A railroad is being built through this section, and a new town has sprung up very recently right in the heart of it. There is not a finer country in the State than St. Landry; neither is there a more inviting mission field in reach of the church.

The Methodist itinerant has been at work, off and on, in this section since 1806, and, so far as I know, unaided by the Conference. We now have four charges, with one other church which belongs on a work outside the parish, and a little more than six hundred members. It strikes me that this is a poor showing for nearly ninety years of work. In one-fourth the same length of time we have gathered in several thousand members in Mexico. We have spent money in Mexico. Why this spending money in Mexico and neglecting our own territory? Does it pay better? Well, we have not spent enough here to know how it pays; but, judging from another standpoint, it certainly does not. In the year 1892 the Central Mexico Mission Conference, with a membership of 2,934, paid preachers $31.24; foreign missions, $354.37, with other collections in proportion. In the same year St. Landry, with a membership of 592, paid preachers $1,153; foreign missions, $106. Our work here took care of itself, and paid something over. It has been doing this for years, and, so far as I am informed, has always done so.

There are thousands of people in this parish who are absolutely without the gospel. They have been brought up under the influence of Romanism; yet many of them are beginning to think and act for themselves. I have had them in the congregation this year who could not speak a word of English. If I could only speak French! But I can not. From the windowe of our Mammothe Chapel I can show a missionary as many homes as he can say grace over to save his life; homes into which the gospel of life and liberty has never gone. There is every reason to believe that missions established among these people would become self-supporting in a comparatively short while; yet, in the face of the fact that these thousands of homes in St. Landry are without the gospel—yea, more, whole parishes in the State in the same awful condition—we strain every nerve to raise large sums of money to send abroad, and habitually (shall I say willfully?) neglect our next-door neighbors. I again enter my plea for home missions in St. Landry.

Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference.

The First Annual Meeting of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference, held at Ellisville, Miss., June 15 and 16, 1894.

Sensations, somewhat akin to those which enter the heart of one who has been in a hard struggle, but who escapes victorious, creep over me. Others there are who might tell of the six years of struggle through which we have passed in our efforts to establish this society in our midst.

But the dark days have passed; the W. P. and H. M. Society of the Mississippi Conference is an assured success. How do I know? Let me give you the list of officers and secretaries, and you have my answer. President, Mrs. J. N. Chatfield, of Meridian—a veritable pastor's heart's-ease; first vice-president, Mrs. Jenie Klein, of Vicksburg—one who pours forth to the church the sweetest music; second vice-president, Mrs. R. J. Turner, of Bay St. Louis—in labors abundant, in prayers sublime, excelling the pastor; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clara H. Cope, of Paulding—a paragon of earnestness; recording secretary, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, of Meridian—brilliant, scholarly, and polished; treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Hollomer, of Meridian—embodiment of Methodism. With such a combination of varied talent and exquisite virtues, the goal of complete victory is not far off. Then, too, their co-laborers, the efficient district secretaries, give an array of talent that can compare favorably with any organization of women in any of our Conferences. Their names are as follows: Vicksburg, Mrs. J. M. Weems; Seashore, Mrs. R. L. Turner and Mrs. W. A. White; Brandon, Miss Lou Womack; Brookhaven, Mrs. E. P. Mellen; Meridian, Mrs. R. Kennedy; Jackson, Mrs. W. A. Gunning. The Minutes show the total receipts during the past year to be $243 63. The amount forwarded the treasurer of the Parent Society at Louisville was $132 56. Two parsonages were aided, as follows: Monrose, receiving $40; Coffeeville, receiving $40. An application from Port Vincent, asking for a donation of $200 from the Parent Society, was endorsed, and awaits the action of the Conference Board of Church Extension.

Brethren of the Mississippi Conference, if we give these earnest, godly women helpful encouragement, the day of parsonageless charges in our midst will soon be but a ghostly memory of the past.

From the "Annual Address," delivered by Rev. B. F. Lewis, I quote the following: "This society was organized in 1886, eight years ago. In that time 1,000 parsonages have been built, and one-half of them have received aid directly from this society. It is not too much to say that one-half of the remaining half have been indirectly aided. In 1886 there were 2,030 parsonages in the M. E. Church, South, valued at $2,247,288. This was the result of 100 years' work in parsonage building. In 1893 there were 3,015 parsonages, valued at $3,693,436. You see from this that in eight years, through the direct and indirect work of the W. P. and H. M. Society, one-half as many parsonages have been built as were built in the whole 100 years previously."

Again, from the report of Mrs. Clara H. Cope, corresponding secretary, I quote: "No doubt you ask, 'What do you want us to do?'

"1. Give us your prayers. 'The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.' Brethren, pray for us.

"2. We want you to speak a kind word for us. Whatever the preacher endorses and works for will succeed. You can, with us, make the W. P. and H. M. Society a success, if you give us a kindly word and help. The design is a home for every servant of God. We women will never rest satisfied until every preacher has a comfortable home.

"3. We want you, if you have not already done so, to organize an auxiliary to the W. P. and H. M. Society. If there is a local aid society, make it connectional by turning it into a W. P. and H. M. Auxiliary. This can be done by adopting our Constitution and By-laws, and each member paying twenty-five (25c.) cents a quarter."

Brethren, in the name of the Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference, let me plead with you, help these women. Let it not be that they must knock at the door of a Conference or a church for admittance, but let a cordial, hearty welcome be given them by every church and Conference.

A Reply to "Rex B."

In this morning's ADVOCATE I see a column article, signed "Rex B.," in which the author tries his hand at the easy task of mote-magnifying in reference to the gracious revival recently conducted by Dr. Carradine. As one of the great mass of regenerate (not one of the elect, as he calls them), it seems to be my duty to reply to this attack.

Beyond all question, it was the most wonderful meeting ever seen in this town! The power of God was manifested as the oldest citizens fail to recall. Bro Lewis, our beloved pastor, and Bro. Grymes, of the Chapel, say it surpassed anything they ever saw.

The vast auditorium of the Jefferson Street Church was packed to the doors; for the last five nights many—some estimate as high as 200 to 250—were turned away. During Dr. Carradine's preaching the crowd was unusually still and attentive. The crowds on the porch occasionally made some noise, but not in the church. The interest spread throughout the country, and some of the best men out of town were sanctified. During the last week there was shouting at every service, and the praises of God were heard on all sides. In this peculiarly Methodist custom the Presbyterians seemed as much at home as the Methodists, after they were sanctified. Did anyone ever see this before?

So much for the meeting. Now to the effects. Bro. "Rex" says it will do harm! If I understand English, the Master himself rebuked his disciples for unseemly zeal when they found one "casting out devils in his name, and forbade him." Now, there is one great enemy to the church, or we might say one great devil in the body of Christ's church—viz., worldliness, and Bro. Carradine's preaching will surely take that out of any church! You may call it a delusion, call it a heresy, call it fanaticism, or what you please, the result is the same. Sanctification purifies the church and leads the members into what Moody calls "the higher Christian life."

How often do we hear the godly pastor say: "If I had a few more like Bro. H. or Sister J., how happy I would be." Let that church get the blessing of sanctification, and the good Bro. H.'s and Sister J.'s will be multiplied indefinitely. It will give any pastor a more godly church, a more liberal membership, and more family altars than anything else.

Bro. "Rex" says, or implies, that it will divide the church. My! my! my!—what rank heresy! Did not Christ himself say, "I come not to send peace, but a sword"? Godliness is always opposed to the worldly church. Sanctified people oppose the use of tobacco, theatre-going, etc.—all worldly amusements; hence the natural remark is "no harm," or they are accused of being Pharisees, or trying to be "too good for this world." The church is in favor of anything that will cause its members to live godly lives; hence there can be but one division, and that is a complete separation of the church from the world; and may the good Lord hasten the day of the divorce!

Now, as to the "aristocracy of heaven," the Bible teaches plainly that some will enjoy a greater happiness in heaven than others; that a godly life will give us a greater capacity for the enjoyment of glories to be revealed hereafter. But let me ask, What harm can possibly result in holding out bright promises to those who lead a higher religious life? I know I am a regenerated man, yet these people have something I have not; an experience to which I am a stranger? Now, what is it? It a delusion, what a glorious one! If spiritual pride, it certainly has a poor way of showing itself.

Mr. Editor, I can liken this revival to but one thing—viz., the old Wesleyan revivals of early Methodist history. Dr. Carradine has a power that few preachers possess, and if sanctification gives him that power (and I believe it does), may the entire ministry of the church soon get the blessing! Wish 300 such men in Mississippi and Louisiana, what a power for good Methodism would become!

At the regular Wednesday night prayer meeting, last night, Bro. Lewis called for volunteer prayers and thirteen responded; there would have been more had time allowed. Then followed a delightful experience meeting. After prayer meeting a party of young people, and a few older ones, went with Bro. Ramsey (the evangelist who followed Dr. Carradine) to the depot to see him off. After he entered the car one of those beautiful hymns, "Where He leads me I will follow," was sung beautifully. It was followed by, "We'll never say good-by in heaven," and the train pulled out. The crowd always present at a city depot, the passengers in the cars and the officials of the road, in their special car, were intensely still during the singing. It was a sight never before seen in Natchez. Bro. "Rex" thinks that harm will result.

Mr. Editor, I know of many who spent the night on their knees praying for this blessing, and others who spent hours upon their knees, and still others who "scarcely did anything but read their Bibles and pray for days," till God gloriously blessed them. Now, let me ask you, is it possible, do you think it even probable, that a blessing which men will labor so for, which will cause such seasons of Bible reading and prayer, to hurt or divide a church? It seems an absurdity to suppose so.

The Greenville District Preachers' Association.

The Greenville District Preachers' Association met at Clarksdale, Miss., Oct. 10, and completed its organization, electing Rev. J. A. Randolph, president; J. M. Wyatt, vice-president; R. H. B. Gladney, secretary and treasurer. By the morning of the eleventh a majority of the preachers of the district were in attendance. Quite a complete and suggestive program was discussed with profit to all. Some of the papers presented were of unusual merit. The essay on the "Distinctive Doctrines of Methodism," by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, was especially beautiful and instructive. Capt. A. A. Sharp, a prominent official of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad Company, and a member of the Presbyterian Church, by the request of our presiding elder, presented a paper on the "Conditions Confronting the Church in the Delta." It was broad in spirit, brotherly, Christ-like, and we were edified.

Each subject had its peculiar worth, and afforded the opportunity for all to exchange ideas.

Bro. G. W. Bachman was with us, magnifying his office. The special sermons by Rev. H. P. Gibbs, on "Consecration," and by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, on "Mission," were full of the gospel, spiritual and edifying.

Bro. J. M. Wyatt and his people spared no pains in entertaining the association.

Our next meeting will be held at Greenville, Miss. The preachers look forward with interest to it.

"The Scripture Way of Salvation."

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE, of Oct. 11, I find an extract from Mr. Wesley's sermon on the "New Birth," by which some brother tries to prove that Mr. Wesley taught the growth theory of sanctification, when the whole context of the passage shows that Mr. Wesley was contradicting the theory that "the new birth is not the same with sanctification." This method of criticism would make God contradict himself in his Word. I give below an extract from Mr. Wesley's sermon on "The Scripture Way of Salvation," which shows he did not believe in the growth theory of sanctification. (Vol. II., page 247.)

W. W. HOPPER.

"But does God work this great work in the soul gradually or instantaneously? Perhaps it may be gradually wrought in some; I mean in this sense: they do not advert to the particular moment wherein sin ceases to be. But it is infinitely desirable, were it the will of God, that it should be done instantaneously; that the Lord should destroy sin 'by the breath of his mouth,' in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. And so he generally does—a plain fact, of which there is evidence enough to satisfy any unprejudiced person. Then, therefore, look for it every moment. Look for it in the way above described, in all those good works whereunto thou art 'created anew in Christ Jesus.' There is, then, no danger; you can be no worse, if you are no better, for that expectation, for were you to be disappointed of your hope, still you lose nothing. But you shall not be disappointed of your hope; it will come, and will not tarry. Look for it, then, every day, every hour, every moment! Why not this hour, this moment? Certainly you may look for it now, if you believe it is by faith. And by this token you may surely know whether you seek it by faith or by works. If by works, you want something to be done first, before you are sanctified. You think I must first be, or do thus or thus. Then you are seeking it by works unto this day. If you seek it by faith, you may expect it as you are; and if as you are, then expect it now. It is of importance to observe that there is an inseparable connection between these three points—expect it by faith, expect it as you are, and expect it now. To deny one of them is to deny them all; to allow one is to allow them all. Do you believe we are sanctified by faith? Be true, then, to your principle, and look for this blessing just as you are, neither better nor worse; as a poor sinner that has still nothing to pay, nothing to plead but, 'Christ died.' And if you look for it as you are, then expect it now."

The Drink and Tobacco Expenditure.

In the United States Senate, on the first ult., during the progress of the discussion of the Revenue bill, Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, replying to a speech of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, against the undue accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few, said:

"Mr. President, there is more than $1,000,000,000 a year expended in this country for the single articles of beer and whisky alone. Adding to that imported liquors, adding to that several hundred million dollars expended for tobacco, and you have probably an expenditure of fifteen hundred or two thousand million dollars annually in this country for those things which, if not vices, are at least self-indulgences. I think before you distribute this property of the rich man, man for man, among the people, you want to know some way by which you can distinguish between the man who has earned the money and has laid it up, as these men have in their savings banks, and the other man who has earned his money and might have it if he chose to lay it up, but has preferred to spend it in whisky and tobacco."—National Temperance Advocate.

A soft answer will win where a club would fail.

Personal Contact and Attention.

There is no surer way of attracting young persons to church services and enlisting them in good works than by meeting them face to face, giving them a most cordial handshake and speaking to them as comrades in the great struggle for the overthrow of evil, the uplifting of the downcast, and for the advancement of everything that is good, personally and socially. This course, combined with classes for instruction in Bible knowledge, and in any other line in which useful information can be acquired, or in any exercise that will show the pastor's hearty goodwill and intense desire to do good to those whom he is thus treating, can not fail to result in binding these persons to the pastor and to his work, and to make them faithful followers and most needful coadjutors in whatever object he may seek to enlist their service. "I was among you," said Jesus, "as one that serveth." This demonstration of humility, of his complete condescension, won his disciples' hearts and bound them to him finally as their Lord and Master. Personal contact, personal attention, and personal condescension on the part of the pastor will produce in our own day gains, especially among the young, that will be most gratifying to the pastor, and most profitable to those whom he serves.—Treasury.

Develop Latent Talent.

Any pastor who has had experience in Christian work must have been often agreeably surprised by the tact and efficiency which a little patience and training disclosed in many who were induced to enter the ranks as workers. In this way experts have been found for every department brought under cultivation. To discover this latent talent that lies unused in every church should be one main object of every preacher and of every church officer. It may be possessed by some one who has a very unpromising personality, and oftener still, possibly, by one who has a shy, diffident and shrinking spirit, who is inclined to offer such excuses as Moses did when God called him to become the leader of his people out of their bondage and into Canaan. But it is the province and duty of the preacher to encourage such persons, to exhort them to come to the help of the Lord, to train them for entering upon his service, and to follow them in their course with words of cheer, and with whatever is necessary to help them to go forward. Many a bright and efficient worker for Christ has thus been developed.—Treasury.

Family Prayers.

When the archangel's trumpet says that time shall be no more, and calls every nation before the judgment bar of God, and the Book of God's remembrance is opened, then, and not till then, will it be known how much good was accomplished around the family altar.

Religion.

No better definition was ever given of religion than that given by the great and strong thinker, Benjamin Whichcote, when he wrote, 'Religion means a good heart and and a good life."—Christian Observer.

The most awful thought that comes to a man sometimes, is the thought of a soul that he injured years and years ago, and that he can not touch and can not help. His own life is under better influence; his own soul is uplifted; but where is the man, where is the woman, to whom he did the harm years and years ago? God save us from that! It would be hopeless if it had not the infinite hope in the endless love of God to fall back upon.—Phillips Brooks.

Have you ever noticed how much of Christ's life was spent in doing kind things—in merely doing kind things? Run over it with that in view, and you will find that he spent a great portion of his time simply in making people happy, in doing good turns to people. What God has put in our power is the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind to them.—Prof. Drummond.

To cultivate modesty is to cultivate a rare virtue. To be modest—the majority of people do not know how hard that is, for they have not tried. Perhaps modest folk, like poets and editors, are born so, not made. Two of the qualities the age needs are modesty and reverence—first-cousin virtue.

Be bright and you will feel bright. Whistle and you won't whine. Cultivate your good feelings as persistently as a croaker cultivates his bad feelings, and you will take a step up the mountain for every step he takes down in the swamp.

Life, like war, is a series of mistakes and he is not the best Christian nor the best general who makes the fewest missteps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes.—The Freeman.

Why Not?

BY REV DAVID MORTON, D. D.,
Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Church Extension.

There are in the United States 15 017 organised congregations in the M. E. Church, South, exclusive of the missions to our Mexican population. Of these 1,634 are without houses of worship. There are 4 455 pastoral charges, and of these 1,328 are without homes for the preachers.

Here then is one of the "problems of Methodism:" We need immediately 1,634 churches, and 1,328 parsonages; how shall we get them?

The fact that the good women of the church have taken hold of the parsonage branch of the problem is a guaranty that the answer will be forthcoming in due time. They ask me for a suggestion as to methods.

The one thing needful is a loan fund of $35,000. They ought to have it; they must have it; and, being women, they will have it, or know the reason why not.

The people who need assistance in parsonage building are not paupers, and they do not ask gratuities. The applications to the Woman's Committee are nearly all for comparatively small sums, and in almost all cases the applicants are as willing to receive loans as donations. This is not true, of course, in strictly missionary territory, where there are no local congregations of sufficient strength to assume the burden of a debt. If there were on hand funds available that could be loaned in sums averaging, say $250 to each applicant, in a very few years there would not be a homeless pastor in all Southern Methodism.

The plan for operating the loan fund is very simple. A station or circuit determines to have a parsonage. Three-fourths, perhaps, of the necessary amount is promised in money, labor and material. Then there is a halt. All have done their best, or think they have, which amounts to the same in counting assets. They can do no more just now, and still they lack $500. Can't they borrow it for a year or two? No; money-lenders are notoriously shy of such loans; they are so hard to collect. If they only could borrow it for a few years, with the privilege of paying in easy instalments! With breathing spells between, they could easily pay off such a debt without feeling it. (By the way, is there any promise in Holy Writ to one who offers a sacrifice that he can not feel?") Here the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society steps in and offers to lend the required amount on easy payments, taking a mortgage on the property for security. The house is finished. Year by year part of the debt is paid, until at last they can proudly look all the world square in the face, and say, "We owe no man anything." Such a plan fosters manly independence, and does vastly more good than if the amount were donated outright.

Already with but $4,000 at their command, the society has aided about forty parsonages, with an average of $100 each. Much the greater part of this has gone to places where it would have been almost impossible for the people to build without it, and yet the money loaned has been repaid with interest, and sent out again and again in helpful mission, verifying Bishop Hargley's oft-quoted and beautiful description of it: "I can think of nothing that impresses me as favorably as putting money into this loan fund, to go on repeating itself and reproducing itself from age to age. It does not stop simply with the first blessing. It helps build one church and comes back with the glad tidings of what it has done, and goes again and builds, or helps to build, another church, and coming back again, says, 'Here am I; send me,' and goes again and again."

Most of the present fund of about $4,000 has been given to the Preachers' Home Loan Fund and the Angel Band Memorial Fund; the former constituted by the gallons of five dollars each to make the preachers' wives honorary patrons of the fund, and the latter by donations of twenty dollars each in honor of the little ones gone to join the Angel Band above.

But I desire in this article to direct particular attention to the plan of loan as the subject to annuity. This plan has been devised for the benefit of friends of the cause who desire to help in the work with their means, perhaps after death, who can not spare now out of their income the amounts they would like to give. Ordinarily, the only thing that can be done under such circumstances is to make provision in one's will and take the chances—I might almost say certainties—of a contest in the courts, with the probable defeat of the testator's wishes. To obviate this difficulty, and to enable the donor not only to be his own executor, but also to enjoy the pleasure "in the flesh" of seeing the fruits of his bounty, the Board has authority, under its charter, to receive sums of money in even hundreds of dollars and to obligate itself to pay a certain fixed sum to the donor or to some beneficiary named by him or her, for life, with the understanding that upon the death of the beneficiary the principal sum shall belong absolutely to the Board, to be used in the work of parsonage or church building. The annuity sum which the Board stipulates to pay is usually six per cent. per annum on the amount of the fund. The fund itself is loaned to the churches, in the manner above described.

To illustrate the advantage of the plan, let us suppose that you have a thousand dollars which you wish to devote at your death to the parsonage-building work. It is now producing you an income of $60 a year. If invested in bonds, you are taking the risk of default and possible worthlessness. If loaned out to private borrowers, you may lose through their insolvency, or be put to the expense of costly litigation to foreclose your mortgage. When collected, you have the trouble and annoyance of reinvesting or relending. Now, all this may be avoided by turning your money over to the Board and receiving its obligation to pay you six per cent. interest upon it as long as you live. This is safe, for pledged to the payment is over one hundred thousand dollars of well-secured mortgages owned by the Board, and back of that the faith and credit, the pledge and promise of the entire church. How easy it will be for the Board to comply with such an obligation becomes apparent enough when you reflect that it does not undertake even to pay back the principal, that becoming the absolute property of the Board upon the death of the beneficiary. The investment, therefore, is absolutely safe. Then, you have the satisfaction of knowing that "your will stands." When once the money is paid over to the Board it becomes impossible for any envious third person to come in and defeat your good purposes. Not only that; but if your gift for the parsonage work is as much as $1,000, you will have the privilege of making it a memorial fund, named after yourself or after a dear mother, father, wife, husband, child, and the pleasure every year of seeing a report of the names of the parsonages aided by that very fund, with the amount loaned to each.

Do not wait until you die to begin to do good with your money; begin now, and begin by investing one hundred, one thousand, five thousand dollars in the Annuity Loan Fund of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. T. Cameron, Black Hawk circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Oct. 11: "Some good meetings this season. Sixteen accessions on profession of faith. Good help from abroad by Revs. J. S. Oakley, J. A. Whitehurst and J. T. Howell, and Capt H. H. Estes. Fair prospect of full collections."

Rev. R. Parvin, Sparta circuit, Louisiana Conference: "We have good news from Sparta circuit. At Bear Creek we had some bright conversions and 24 additions. Bro. P. O. Lowry, from Vanderbilt, did successful preaching and altar work, and in grove meetings with the young men. At Holders we had a good meeting; conversions clear; 3 additions. We had a good meeting at Castor Church. We have just closed a good meeting at Mill Creek Church; 14 added to church. Meetings lasted nine days. Some conversions and sanctifications. Bro. P. O. Lowry has been with me since the first Sabbath in July, and has done a noble work at all my meetings. We baptized 16 adults and 12 infants at the above meetings."

Rev J. J. Kelly, Asheville, La., Oct. 11: 'Our work is doing well. The Lord has greatly blessed our efforts this year. The last two services have been the largest congregations we have had this year. Two children baptized and forty-three dollars for Conference claimants in last week. The church which was just finished at Prairie Grelg, worth a thousand dollars, we held services in last Sabbath. Our new parsonage is nearing completion, which will be a beautiful home. Prospects look bright for collections being raised. Some spiritual-minded, faithful Christians; but it is to be deplored that there are many worldly and wicked people in the church. We hope to have a revival before Conference. Have had one this year, reported by my presiding elder, who ably assisted in the meeting. Thirty-five conversions and accessions; 15 children have been baptized. Last, but we hope not least, the preacher has been filled with the Spirit and rejoices daily. I am walking and living every day with a holy delight filling my inmost soul. Praise the Lord."

Rev. W. T. Currie, P. C., Ponchatoula, La., Oct. 16: "This is my second year on Ponchatoula charge, Woodville district, Louisiana Conference. God has wonderfully blessed my labors up to date. There have been 160 accessions, 100 converts, and about 30 sanctified. When I came to this charge the work paid the preacher $191 and some cents. The whole amount raised that year was about $700. Last year I had the same churches; the amount paid to preacher was $395. The whole amount raised for all purposes was $1,365. This year the Conference took off two of the churches; one of them paid $100. The Conference also took off $50 of the domestic mission money, leaving only $50. I now have five churches. The assessment this year is $450. The stewards think all amounts assessed will be paid. Up to date this year $1,200 have been raised for all purposes. There are two churches under headway; not ten, as was stated some time ago. Bro. Woodward states that he knows there is no building started. We have the lumber all on the ground and all paid for at Springfield. We would have started the building long ago, but we are undecided as where to build, as there is a blind tiger close to the old one. We have 4,000 feet of lumber given on the other one. There has been a parsonage built since I came on this work. I ask the prayers of all. I give all praise to God."

REVIVAL IN NATCHEZ.

The Board of Stewards unanimously joined me in an invitation to Dr. Carradine to hold a meeting for us in Jefferson Street Church, commencing Sept. 16. We had a week of prayer preceding the meeting. Besides this, much personal work was done by the pastor, the Official Board, and others, to get the church ready for the meeting. Dr. Carradine remained with us, preaching twice a day, for thirteen days. His audiences were large, his sermons were scriptural and powerful, and the results were glorious. Several of my members were in the experience of perfect love before the meeting began, and others were "groaning after it," as our church expresses it.

Looking over my church register, I can count more than fifty who professed the blessing of sanctification during the meeting. There may have been others, and some of these may not have fully comprehended the matter; but I think I can safely say that more than fifty made a full consecration of themselves to God, and were purified by faith and filled with the Holy Ghost during the meeting. There were fully as many of Bro. Crymes' congregation at Wesley Chapel who professed the blessing. Several of Bro. Ellis' people, of the Washington circuit, including himself and three of his stewards, received the blessing. Twelve or fifteen members of the Baptist Church, including one of their deacons, and about the same number of Presbyterians, including one of their elders, came into the experience of full salvation during the meeting. There were also many bright conversions and several accessions to the church. Seven were received on profession of faith, and three by certificate of membership, last Sunday, and other applications are pending. Our meeting closed last night with many at the altar, some seeking pardon, and some sanctification.

Rev. U. E. Ramsey, of Kentucky, spent a week with us after Dr. Carradine left, and did us much good by his Bible readings and scriptural sermons. He is a young man, fully consecrated to his work, and mighty in the Scriptures. My church is now in good condition for efficient work. We could run a half-dozen prayer meetings and as many experience meetings at one time without any lack of material.

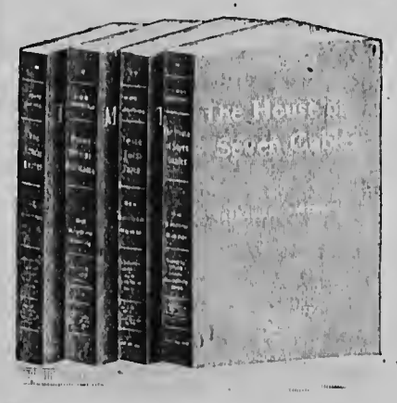
HAWTHORNE'S BEST WORKS.

Four Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large type on good paper and substantially bound by a new process.



Mosses from an Old Manse,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Another delightful companion for idle hours is this collection of magazine papers, which Hawthorne entitled "Mosses from an Old Manse." Like all his works, it is distinguished for its simplicity and truth.

Twice-Told Tales,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Hawthorne, the most distinctly American and by far the most popular of our writers, has given the world an undying book in "Twice-Told Tales." They have all the felicity of expression, as well as the subtlety of thought and insight, which are the special charm of the author of "The Scarlet Letter."

The House of The Seven Gables,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

This masterpiece of Hawthorne's is full of the imaginative charm of romance. In felicity of touch, its author is unapproached by any writer since his own day. The work is, perhaps, the purest piece of poetic prose in all the range of American literature.

The Scarlet Letter,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

A romance of intense interest, exhibiting extraordinary power of mental analysis and graphic description. For an artistic exposition of Puritanism, as modified by New England colonial life, we have nothing like it in our literature.

Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January, '96. This offer not available to those who have had the benefit of other premium offers. DRUMMOND'S ADDRESSES.

ENAMEL PAPER COVERS.

The Greatest Thing in the World and Other Addresses.

By PROFESSOR HENRY DRUMMOND.

We know of no addresses more suited to the religous spirit of the time than those of the thoughtful author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." They contain no toleration of blind and rash unbelief; on the contrary, the writer is one of the most helpful and suggestive of the modern school of Christian apologists. He takes his stand on a very broad basis and expounds, earnestly yet logically, the great truths of religion.

1 VOL. 16mo. LARGE TYPE, 245 PAGES.

These Charming Addresses have been called for by the reading public to such an extent that more than 300,000 copies have been published.

THE VOLUME CONTAINS:

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD—PAX VOBISCUM—THE CHANGED LIFE—"FIRST"—HOW TO LEARN HOW—WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?—THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE and A TALK ON BOOKS.

Sabbath Desecration.

Mammoth political Sabbath breakings are now the order of the day all over South Louisiana. Every Sunday vast crowds—many thousands, the papers say—gather to hear political speeches. This is not confined to one party. The Democratic and the Republican parties are equally guilty. Nor is this the work of the smaller fry of the political world. We mentioned in our last several of our political leaders who are participating in this disgraceful movement. But these do not stand alone. Other leaders, too numerous to mention, are equally guilty. Political meetings are already announced for several Sabbaths to come; and they are to be participated in by those already in power and by those who will be put in power at the next election. Under such circumstances is it at all wonderful that it is almost impossible to enforce the Sunday law?

In this respect Louisiana stands alone among the States of the South. We do not believe there is another State south of Mason and Dixon's line in which such proceedings would be tolerated. In the adjoining State of Mississippi a public mass meeting in the interest of the Democratic party would call forth an indignant protest which politicians would respect. No candidate for high official position would dare to defy public sentiment in this matter. And what is true of Mississippi we believe to be equally true of all other Southern States. What makes the difference? Why is it that Louisiana stands alone in this respect? The answer is easy. Louisiana is dominated by Catholicism. No one can remain in this city even a few days without ascertaining what Rome's idea of Sabbath observance is. It is significant that all these political Sabbath breakings occur in South Louisiana, where Rome sways an undisputed scepter. Suppose Governor Foster, Congressman Price and Senators Blanchard and Caffrey should try to get up a grand Democratic Sabbath breaking in Homer, Minden or Arcadia! Would they meet such a response there as they meet in South Louisiana? We trow not; and we furthermore venture the assertion that they will not make the attempt. They know where public Sabbath breaking will take, viz.: where Rome holds sway—in South Louisiana.

The Arkansas Methodist and the North Carolina Advocate join hands with the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE in advocating an anti-option law.

To Our Preachers.

Dear Brethren: I will be greatly obliged if you will remit moneys you have collected for the ADVOCATE before the meeting of the Annual Conference. When everybody waits until Conference to pay up, there is, as experience has shown, such a rush that it is difficult to make settlements in a satisfactory manner. It takes but a little time to go to your postoffice or express office and get a money order, or to your bank and get a check for the amount of your indebtedness. By this method of waiting until Conference to make settlements, you and I are compelled to be out of the Conference room counting shekels when we ought to be participating in the business of the Conference. Moreover, where there are disputes as to the amount of an account, it is difficult for me at the seat of Conference, away from all the records of the office, to make a settlement otherwise than on a basis of guess-work.

Brethren, I hope you will heed this suggestion and remit at your earliest convenience. I especially make this request of those preachers who did not pay their accounts or say anything about them at the last session of Conference; and this class is surprisingly large. Moneys that were collected for the ADVOCATE a year or two ago ought to have been paid in before this.

W. C. BLACK.

At Zacharie.

On Wednesday night, Oct. 17, we had the pleasure of lecturing at Zacharie, La. The five hours required to make the trip were most delightfully spent in the companionship of one of the celebrities of the century, Prof. Henry Drummond, whose latest venture in authorship, "The Ascent of Man," we had put into our valise.

Arriving at Zacharie about noon, we were domiciled in the delightful home of Bro. and Sister G. B. Brown, whose generous hospitalities we had enjoyed on a former occasion, when it fell to our lot to dedicate the church at Zacharie. We had a pleasant visit to the parsonage home of the pastor, Rev. J. T. Leggett. Bro. Leggett is closing his fourth year on this charge. During this time he has built a church and a parsonage. The church is quite a handsome one, and sufficiently spacious to meet the wants of the community. Many larger towns would think themselves fortunate in the possession of such a house of worship. He has also quite a comfortable parsonage, though it is not yet entirely completed. To aid in paying off a small indebtedness on the parsonage was the object of the lecture. The attendance upon the lecture was good—much better than can be had at a pay lecture in many larger towns. Our church at Zacharie is now a station. This is a refined, intelligent, prosperous community; and Methodism is very decidedly in the lead. The outlook for our Zion is, we think, decidedly cheering.

Rev. O. L. Hailey and His Little Book.

We announced, a few weeks since, that we would publish soon a reply by Rev. O. L. Hailey to Bro. Carley's criticisms of his book, "Why They Did Not Join the Methodists." Since then we have changed our mind on the subject. In his letter asking permission to reply through the ADVOCATE, Bro. Hailey used the following language: "I have been pretty severely impeached, and it would afford me some satisfaction to be allowed to set myself fairly before the readers who have seen the impeachment."

We thought this only a reasonable request, and hence made the announcement as above stated. When the first installment of the reply came, however, we decided to wait until the whole was in hand before commencing. The second installment came soon afterward; but the third has not yet come to hand. The matter in our hands, however, is sufficient to show that it is the aim of Bro. Hailey, not merely to reply to Carley, but to use the columns of the ADVOCATE for an assault on Methodism. He makes some confessions, however, of which we deem it proper that we should take note. One of these has reference to the statement contained in his book about Bishop Galloway. He admits himself in error in this matter, and promises to eliminate this statement from the next edition of his pamphlet; and magnanimously adds that he "would be glad to have the correction co-extensive with the error." His justification of having published the statement is that he saw it published and republished in a Baptist paper, five years ago, without contradiction from any quarter.

He also makes a confession with reference to the following statement contained in his book, "Methodists when they immerse are guilty of perjury." He says: "The word perjure is a harsher term than I wish to use in regard to any Christian man, and I am sorry I let it slip into the tract. I shall change it in the forthcoming edition, and substitute the word stultify." He will no longer speak of Methodists as knaves, but as fools. But he takes pains to have it understood that while he makes this change in phraseology, it is only for decency's sake—not because he has changed his opinions in the least, for he says in the very same paragraph, "I have no fear of being able to justify the use of the word perjure."

These two confessions of Bro. Hailey we think it only just that we should publish. The rest of his so-called "reply" is simply a rehash of the diet that has been served up in Baptist papers ever since Bro. Hailey's relative, Rev. J. R. Graves, published the "Iron Wheel." We have every week something more toothsome and more nutritious to spread before our readers, and, therefore, ask the brother to excuse us from aiding him in his much-loved work of serving up stale hash a la J. R. Graves. We have no doubt that he can find very willing servitors in the office of the Baptist Record, the Baptist Chronicle or the Christian Index.

Profit Sharing.

During the last quarter of a century several capitalists in Europe and America, who have large manufacturing interests, have made experiments in the direction of "profit sharing." The results in most cases have been such as to commend the system to the thoughtful consideration of money kings everywhere. One of these "profit-sharing" establishments is the large firm of Proctor & Gamble, Cincinnati. This firm has been operating the system for fifteen years. It has four hundred operatives who are beneficiaries of the system. The last annual report makes such a fine showing that the company has announced its purpose to make the system permanent. The system, by making every operative a partner in the establishment, unifies the interests of employers and employees, and thus prevents the unseemly and hurtful antagonisms which are a striking feature of the times. It is also a stimulant to industry and economy. Here, then, is a providential finger-board pointing out amid the turmoil of this restless age a pathway of combined righteousness and safety for capital to walk in.

Will capital prove as eagle-eyed in this matter as it is popularly supposed to be? Not just now, we fear. The innate selfishness of poor, fallen human nature will assert itself to perpetuate the present regime of strikes and riots with their consequent financial disaster. There is a good time coming, however—though it may be far in the future—when peace will reign on earth as the result of righteousness and love dwelling in the human heart and manifesting itself in the life.

Train Robberies.

Within the past few days three train robberies have occurred in different parts of the United States—one in California, one in Virginia and one in Texas. In each case a large sum of money was secured. In Texas not only the express company, but also the passengers were robbed. In Indian Territory brigandage of this description has become so common that the express companies have ceased to handle money for the public at all. Banks also are now refusing to issue drafts without payment of a heavy bonus. That such a state of things should exist in the midst of what is supposed to be the highest civilization the world ever saw is marvelously strange. Can it be possible that we are approaching a period when every railroad train will have to be guarded by a band of armed soldiers?

A New Book.

LETTERS ON BAPTISM. By Rev. Edmund B. Fairfield. Boston and Chicago: Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society. Price, 75 cents.

The author of this work was a Baptist minister for twenty-five years. Some years ago he was engaged by a Baptist publishing house to write a four-hundred page volume in defense of Baptist views. The story of his labors in that direction we will allow the author to tell in his own words. "I accepted this appointment with the fullest assurance that an argument could be made in that compass that nobody could fairly answer. In order to do it I determined to go over the whole ground from the beginning; so that when the work was finished the honest and intelligent reader of my book would be constrained to admit that it was unassailable. I fully believed that immersion was the only water baptism, and that it could be made so to appear to every candid inquirer. My disappointment you can imagine when I tell you that, as I prosecuted my study of the subject, I found tower after tower of my Baptist fort tumbling down. Most laboriously did I strive to repair them. Month after month for more than two years did I labor to maintain my old ground, but to no avail. There were too many hard and solid FACTS against me. Having studied the subject through and through on both sides, I was convinced of my error. Immersion was not the only baptism. The word baptizo did not mean immerse in the New Testament. I saw it clearly. I could not have been an honest man and continue to profess to believe what I did not believe. With the facts now before me it was impossible for me to remain a minister of the gospel in any Baptist denomination."

The facts which led him to change his views and his ecclesiastical relations are set forth by the author in the above-named book. It is an able and very timely publication. We recommend it to all our preachers as a most excellent treatise to put into the hands of Methodists who have become, or are likely to become, unsettled in their faith by the arrogance and pretentiousness of Baptist proselyters. The work is for sale by Rev. W. B. Palmore, editor and publisher of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, 1414 Lucas Place, St. Louis, Mo.

Rev. Samuel Woodbury, the oldest member of the Florida Conference, died at his home in Quincy, Fla., on Sunday last. He was eighty-one years of age, and had been preaching more than fifty years.

BOOKS.

Prof. William H. Goodyear, in his second volume of art history, which is just issued by the Chautauqua-Century Press under the title of "Renaissance and Modern Art," has made a valuable and attractive addition to popular literature on this subject. Prof. Goodyear's treatment is simple, clear, and descriptive, rather than technically philosophical. The illustrations of the volume, over two hundred in number, are widely representative and include reproductions of many of the more prominent art treasures which were exhibited at the World's Fair.

Europe in the Nineteenth Century is a brief, comprehensive, and interesting narrative of the political and social development of Europe since the beginning of the present century, by Prof. H. P. Judson, of the University of Chicago. It includes the period from the outbreak of the French Revolution to the present time. The method of treatment is clear and luminous; the continuity of the narrative is never broken, and while the attempt is merely to offer an outline of the century's activities in all departments of life, the picture is quite complete and satisfactory. The book is profusely illustrated with portraits, reproductions of political caricatures, fashion plates, means of transportation by sea and land, and other material of an equally interesting nature.

Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi, well known in temperance circles throughout the Southwest, is lecturing to large audiences in Delaware and Maryland. She lectured a few days since at Towson, Md., in Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church.

James Anthony Froude, the historian, died in London on the twentieth. Although unreliable as a historian, such was the brilliancy of his style that his historical works have had an immense sale, and will doubtless continue to sell for years to come.

Sam Jones has become associate editor of the Tennessee Methodist. His salutatory appears in the last issue. It is just such a production as would be expected from the unique, original evangelist. His editorial duties will not diminish his evangelistic labors.

A non-denominational tabernacle of large dimensions has been erected in Monroe, La. It was dedicated on Sunday last, the dedicatory services being conducted jointly by Rev. B. F. White, of the Louisiana Conference, and Rev. J. B. Searcy, of the Baptist Church.

Thirty years ago a visitor to Rome was not permitted to enter the wall of the city with a copy of the Bible. Now thirty Protestant chapels are dotted about the city and almost everywhere can be heard the voice of the preacher. Everything that could be done has been done to stay the onward march of the gospel by both Pope and cardinals, but all to no avail.

Our friend, Judge J. T. Fant, of Holly Springs, Miss., has gone to San Antonio, Texas, to spend the Winter on account of his health. We hope the salubrious climate of that region will speedily restore him to perfect health, and that he will not become so enamored of the Empire State as to take up his abode there permanently. Mississippi Methodism can not well spare men of the type of Judge Fant; they are too scarce.

A vigorous crusade against gambling is in progress in many of the cities of America, notably in Chicago and in Richmond, Va. The movement in Richmond is headed by Rev. Asbury Christian, and has the vigorous support of Dr. W. V. Tudor and many other prominent and influential ministers.

East Mississippi Female College now has an enrollment of one hundred—an increase of twenty-five per cent. over the enrollment at the corresponding date last session. President Holloman and his faculty are to be congratulated. If the Methodists of East Mississippi will give this institution their patronage, it will flourish like a green bay tree.

The Methodist University in Washington City will soon be an accomplished fact. One man, who prefers not to have his name made known, has contributed the amount necessary to construct the first building—about $250,000. A score or more of other buildings are to be erected after a time. Work will begin next Spring.

Rev. E. G. Cook died at his home in Hazlehurst, a few days since. Bro. Cook was more than eighty years of age, and had been a local preacher for a great many years. He was a highly cultivated Christian gentleman—a noble type of manhood. As a preacher he was quite unique and original. We experience a sense of personal bereavement in his death, as we had enjoyed his friendship for more than a quarter of a century. A suitable tribute will doubtless be prepared.

A Presbyterian synod in a session recently held at Brookfield, Mo., adopted resolutions against the liquor traffic as follows:

Resolved, That it is the duty of every church member to ever and always speak and pray and vote against the liquor traffic, and that it is the sense of this synod that while it is not the province of the church to dictate to any man how he shall vote, yet the synod declares that no political party has the right to expect the support of Christian men so long as that party stands committed to the license policy or refuses to put itself on record against the saloon.

Gov. Stone, of Mississippi, has publicly announced his endorsement of the Anti-option Convention to be held in Vicksburg, Nov. 20. He will attend the convention and use the tremendous weight of his personal influence towards securing a rigorous anti-option law from the next Congress. Let every would-be congressman in Mississippi and (shall we say) Louisiana follow his noble example. There is music in the air. The option gamblers do well to be alarmed, as they unquestionably are.

The Texas Advocate announces the death, on the twelfth, of Dr. Homer S. Thrall. Dr. Thrall was one of the oldest Methodist preachers in the State. He went to Texas before the division of the church in 1844, and has been thoroughly identified with Texas Methodism ever since. He was a leader of our hosts in Texas, having filled many prominent positions. He was the author of a history of Texas, and a history of Texas Methodism. Having personally taken part in the making of that history from the beginning, he was better fitted to write a history of Texas Methodism than any man in the State. He was a man of most excellent Christian character.

A meeting of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society for the New Orleans district was held at Dryades Street Church on Thursday night, Oct. 18. The president, Mrs. J. J. Lyons, gave an entertaining account of her recent visit to Nashville and of the results of the Conference held there. Mrs. S. A. Montgomery read an admirably prepared sketch of the operations of the industrial school recently established by the society in connection with Tchonpitoulas Mission. Miss Burbank gave an interesting report of her labors as missionary during the past few months. Rev. F. S. Parker delivered a very instructive address on "New Orleans Methodism as the Result of Home Mission Work."

A private letter from Dr. C. G. Andrews, of the Mississippi Conference, contains the following sentence:

Permit me to commend most heartily the point and spirit and efficiency with which you go for the political violators of the Sabbath, the gamblers in futures and the patrons of glove contests in your three editorials of Oct. 18.

Although the above was not written for publication, we are sure our good friend, Dr. Andrews, will pardon the liberty we take in making it public. We have made up our mind to wage relentless war upon these evils. We expect to encounter opposition even in the church. The whole tribe of Methodist gamblers and political Sabbath breakers will soon be crying out "too political;" and we do not doubt that many very good people of the old-school described as "namby-pamby saints" will join in the cry. We are glad, therefore, to have the endorsement of such a man as Dr. C. G. Andrews.

Meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Millsaps College Endowment Notes.

Dear Brother: Among the Millsaps College endowment notes yet unpaid, I find your note for $ —, due ——, 189—, with — per cent. interest from maturity. The college is very much in need of the amount of these notes, and they ought to be paid. Please forward the principal of your note at least.

The third session of the college has opened finely, and we now have two hundred and ants enrolled, among whom are thirty-four young preachers. The faculty has had to be enlarged, and increased accommodations are needed. This great work of the church should not be impeded for the lack of means.

The claims of this institution are the sacred claims of the poor young man of Mississippi. Please make a sacrifice to pay your note at once.

Forty Barrels a Day.

Harris & Buquo., Erin, Tenn., manufacturers of the celebrated Erin Lime, say they have great faith in Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. One of their principal coopers was laid up with Rheumatism until induced to take Drummond's Lightning Remedy. After taking two bottles he went to work, and has since been making Forty Barrels per day. If you want this remedy, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address two large bottles—enough for one month's treatment. Agents wanted.

Preachers of the Mississippi Conference.

Brethren: Will you please send me your church extension money by check or money order on Vicksburg, or draft on Jackson or New Orleans? There is no necessity for taking it to Conference. Having to collect at Conference delays the Board in the transaction of its work, and renders it very laborious to the treasurer.

The Poisonous Acids

In the blood should be taken up and removed by the Liver and Kidneys, but these organs get out of order—fail to do their work—and the result is Rheumatism. There are a thousand remedies for the Liver and Kidneys, but there is only one cure for Rheumatism, and that is Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. If you have the disease, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address two large bottles—enough for one month's treatment. Anyone who is having an argument with the Rheumatism will feel fully repaid by the first dose. Agents wanted.

To Students of Millsaps College.

I have moved to Jackson to educate my only child at Millsaps College. In order that I may be able to do this, I must have a few boarders, and, as a special inducement to students to come, I will board the first six who come, at only ten dollars (each) per month; give them nice, comfortable rooms, and do all I can to promote their happiness and make them feel at home. They furnish only such things as are required by the boarding-houses at the campus. My home is very retired and quiet, a considerable distance from the business part of town, and only a pleasant walk from the college. MRS. M. M. LOWRY,

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

SIN FINDS OUT THE SINNER.

(Num. xxxii, 23; Job xxxiv, 22; Jer. xxiii, 24; Amos ix, 2-4)

1. Sin—the blackest word in the vocabulary! Its deadly nature is understood when we realize that it required the death of the Son of God to undo its effect. Sin, hydra-headed, is multiform in its exhibitions.

(1) Sins of omission and commission.
(2) Sins of affection, thought, utterance, action.
(3) Sins, great and small—damnable all.

2. The effects of sin will soon appear. "Your sin will find you out." Hidden, it will come to the surface.

(1) Drunkenness: Delirium tremens.
(2) Gluttony: Dyspepsia.
(3) Voluptuousness: Failing health.
(4) Slothfulness: Failure in life.
(5) Prodigality: Indigence.
(6) Covetousness: Enslavement by money.
(7) Prevarication: Confidence lost.
(8) Envy: Bitterness of heart.
(9) Vanity, pride: Chagrin, disgust.
(10) Dishonesty: Isolation. Man fearing to have intercourse with us.

3. In repentance, specially, our sin finds us out. Before repentance, sin appeared trivial, but now it seems heavier than mill-stones, more nauseating than gall, blacker than night.

(1) Now 'tis no longer "their" sin, nor "your" sin; but "my" sin. I have sinned.

(2) Now sin makes wretched beyond degree. Hell opens its colossal gates to receive us. Hear the malicious laughter of devils, because of our discomfiture. "Ha, ha," they sneered, "serves him right."

(3) Confession of sin is now in order. Stammeringly we enumerate one, two, three sins. Finally the dreadful catalogue of our transgression finds expression.

(4) Yes, our sin found us out when God, in mercy, forgave us our trespasses.

4. In heaven our sin will not find us out. By a miraculous alchemy there is an entire obliteration of our sinful antecedents. Said Isaiah: "Thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back." Remembered against us no more forever. Glory!

IT PAYS.

It pays to wear a smiling face
And laugh our troubles down;
From all our little trials waft
Our laughter or our frown.

Beneath the magic of a smile
Our doubts will fade away,
As melts the frost in early Spring
Beneath the sunny ray.

It pays to help a worthy cause
By making it our own;
To give the current of our lives
A true and noble tone.

It pays to comfort heavy hearts,
Oppressed with dull despair,
And leave in sorrow-darkened lives
One gleam of brightness there.

It pays to give a helping hand
To eager, earnest youth;
To note, with all their waywardness,
Their courage and their truth;

To strive, with sympathy and love,
Their confidence to win.
It pays to open wide the heart
And let the sunshine in.

Johnnie was a naturally generous, unselfish boy, but had also been taught to share every bit of candy and cake with his little sisters and brothers, so that he did not enjoy going off by himself and eating things. Now, I suppose you would rather live with a boy like that, and go to school with him, and have him for your friend, than with boys or girls who think only of themselves

Some children make me think of a chicken, which will seize a choice bit and run off to some safe place and gobble it up. You never saw a chicken or a pig share anything peaceably, did you? But, if you notice, it is the little boys and girls who love to share everything, who divide their apples, and nuts, and candy, who are the favorites, and whom everybody likes, and not a few love dearly; and we all like to be loved.

A very old book says: "He that would have friends must show himself friendly."

Try and see.—Selected.

The Critic in the Home.

There are some people who seem possessed by the idea that it is a mark of superior culture and refinement to regard with captious criticising and deprecating observation the things that surround them in any every-day life. Circumstances, people and material surroundings are all the object of their frequent or habitual animadversion. To hear them speak in praise of anything or anybody is unusual; while to hear them complain and object and denounce is the unfortunate necessity imposed upon their companions and associates. There can scarcely be a more disagreeable, tiresome and devitalizing companion than the person who sees something to object to in everything and everybody; who can pick out flaws and discover defects with an ingenuity and alacrity that grows and becomes skillful by practice. Usually such a disposition is accompanied by the habit of impersonal scolding about circumstances and things in general, which creates a disagreeable personal atmosphere, calculated to make one shun and avoid such people as they would eating green persimmons or staying in a room with a smoky chimney.

On the other hand, it is a real comfort in this work-day world to meet with or have for a companion one who can see and appreciate whatever is good, especially in common things. The truth is, that the best things of life are the common things. In the domain of intellect and morals we know that the great truths of life are simple truths. In the material things of life the common possessions are the best and most beautiful. Water, air, sunlight, the natural, unspoiled appetite, bread, food, sleep, health, the universal grass, the ubiquitous birds and the infinite sky—why, the tongue of man can not sufficiently express their riches and beauty! Then the natural relations of human beings—the most precious are the most common. The millionaire going home to his wife and children, if he loves them, is no richer in his affections than the grimy laborer who is also greeted on his return by his good and faithful, though perchance toil-worn and faded wife, and the joyful faces and eager welcomings of his little ones. If he have the discernment to appreciate and prize these at their true value, he stands on the same plane with the richest and noblest of earth; his happiness is of the same fine and precious quality as theirs. Here truly the rich and the poor meet together. Appreciation and recognition of the essential good is the main thing. To depreciate and belittle and complain at trivial and incidental surroundings and circumstances is the mark of inferiority and of a weak and incompetent nature.

It is a truth which should be more frequently presented by teachers and moralists, that a cheerful and appreciative disposition toward life and people and circumstances can be and ought to be cultivated. The fact ought to be brought to the attention, especially of the young, that cheerfulness and kindness of feeling are helpful, not only to others, but to ourselves. Nothing is more depressing and enfeebling than to cherish a complaining spirit, or to dislike people and things; while to hate anything or anybody is positively exhausting. Love of people, love of life, love of work, love of common things, is the best, the only true inspiration of a happy and satisfying life.—Interior.

Good Homekeeping and Good Housekeeping.

There is great danger in these days of so-called higher education, that our girls will neglect those very essential acquirements of good homekeeping and good housekeeping.

Good homekeeping, presided over by sweet, loving ones who have made a paradise of the home by love's labor, has a powerful influence for good over the tired, perplexed business man when he enters the door at the close of the day. And good housekeeping! What a panacea of strength and healthfulness is the well-cooked meal, served in a tempting manner by loving hands. How sweet the words from the daughter's lips, "I made this bread, papa," or "I broiled this beefsteak." Papa is justly proud as he looks up with a bright face to show his appreciation. Housework is a healthy stirring about of nerve and muscle, better in its results than athletic games that have no definite purpose in them except the pleasure of the hour.

Good homekeeping and good housekeeping combine a business that needs all the acquirements of other kinds of trade.

"Cutting your garment according to your cloth," needs a wise, prudent head as well as hand—it needs close calculation, accurate measurements, and is really quite a study to be mastered. It is very well to talk of "higher education," but unless it includes the successful administration of homekeeping affairs, it fails of being the practical knowledge every girl needs for daily living

It is just as much of an achievement for a young girl to be a good homekeeper and housekeeper, looking well after the comfort as well as the sanitary necessities of the home, and providing helpful food that will not only be appetizing, but will put new strength of muscle and plenty of good blood in the loved ones who eat it, as for her to have honorable mention as a fine artist, or even have her name recorded as a president of a college. A tall man looking over my shoulder, bends low to tell me that the good homekeeper and good housekeeper has really the best record of all. We can live without fine pictures, and colleges are not an absolute necessity; only a minority are benefited by them. But a sunny face with an eye full of love light, meeting the tired home comer at the door, takes all the weatherbeaten marks out of a man's face and heart. And the food the hand of such an one offers, which has been prepared in a manner that the best results can be gotten out of it, is truly life-giving. Such a woman is an absolute necessity. So, girls, learn these wonderful methods of making the home peaceable, pure, and so near akin to the heaven above as you can.

If you are not enabled to enter the schools of higher education at this opening term of the collegiate year, don't be cast down over the disappointment.

The highest education of true womanhood is to learn the best ways and means of making the home the dearest, most soul-inspiring place on earth. "It was not my mother's preaching, but her practicing that brought me to the Savior," said a young man.

So, dear girls, it is not by preaching, but by practicing those beautiful influences of the spirit—love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness and faith—that you will be enabled to do those sweet ministries that will lead all who come in contact with you to "live after the Spirit and to walk in the Spirit."—Susan Teall Perry, in Christian Work.

Does He Work?

Let it be said again that genius is nothing more nor less than the capacity for work. Ruskin said wisely: "When I hear a young man spoken of as a great genius, the first question I ask about him always is, Does he work?"

God knows what we need; we only know what we would like to have. That is why your prayer and its answer did not seem to fit like a ball in its socket.

appreciate the award to them of highest honors at the Exposition. The significance of the compliment, the splendid character of the indorsement, cannot be underrated. It stamps Dr. Price's as without a peer among the baking powders. The jury of awards, an exceptionally intelligent body, was headed by the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture. They found Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder strongest in leavening power, perfect in purity, and of uniform excellence.

HYGIENE.

Overwork vs. Overeating.

An abuse that tends to the injury of brain workers is excessive eating. I recall to mind several brain workers who suddenly broke down and fancied that it was due to brain fatigue, when, as a matter of fact, it was due to overstuffing on their part. The furnace connected with their mental machinery became clogged up with ashes and carbon in various shapes and forms, and as a result disease came, and before the case was fully appreciated a demoralized condition of the nervous system was manifested, and they laid the flattering unction to their souls that they had indulged in mental overwork.

Hard work, mental or physical, rarely ever kills. If a mild amount of physical exercise be taken and a judicious amount of food be furnished, the bowels kept open in the proper manner, the surface protected with proper clothing, and the individual cultivates a philosophical nature and absolutely resolves to permit nothing to annoy or fret him, the chances are that he can do an almost unlimited amount of work for an indefinite length of time, bearing in mind always that when weariness comes he must rest, and not take stimulants and work upon any false capital.

The tired, worn-out slave should not be scourged to additional labor. Under such stimulus, the slave may do the task, but he soon becomes crippled and unfit for work. The secret of successful work lies in the direction of selecting good, nutritious, digestible food, taken in proper quantities, not eaten as a "gourmand," the adopting of regular methods of work, and the rule of resting when pronounced fatigue presents itself, and determining absolutely not to permit friction, worry, or fretting to enter into his life, and the cultivation of the Christian graces—charity, patience, and philosophy.—Medical Mirror.

Sleep.

That the amount of sleep required by different individuals is decidedly different has almost passed into an axiom. Persons who are very energetic naturally require a great deal of sleep, and children and young people who are growing require at least nine or ten hours of sleep. Invalids or people advanced in life should sleep as long as they can, as there is no restorer of tired nature like sleep. To get a refreshing sleep the brain must cease to act. It would be curious to trace how many cases of irritability, or of functional disease of the nerves, are due to lack of proper sleep. Little children should literally go to bed with the chickens. They should have an early supper at half-past five, and be put to bed directly after. This should be kept up until the child is seven or eight years old when the bed-time hour may be changed from five o'clock till seven. A growing girl should certainly go to bed as early as eight o'clock. The old Norman law which commanded that all fires should be covered and lights put out at the ringing of the curfew bell, though looked upon as a tyrannical measure, was from a hygienic point of view a wise one. —Babyhood.

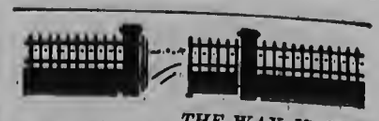
THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

BOILED ICING.—Put one and one-half cupfuls of white pulverized sugar with two tablespoonfuls of boiling water in a small tin basin. Set it on the stove where it will boil slowly, for it scorches easily. Let it boil until it will string when dripping from the point of a spoon. Then pour it over the beaten whites of two eggs, and stir until cool enough to use, This is good to use between layer cakes and as a basis for other than plain white icing.

ICING FOR FRUIT CAKE.—Use boiled frosting made in the proportion of one half cupful of water to three cupfuls of white sugar. Add one cupful of blanched almonds, chopped fine, and one-half cupful of seeded raisins chopped fine, a little finely-sliced citron, and lemon extract. This is sometimes called "Tutti Frutti frosting."

Cabbage is served in a variety of salads. It may be combined with chicken, meat, or almost any vegetable. Chopped raw cabbage with a cream, French, or mayonnaise dressing, forms as appetizing a relish as one could wish.



THE WAY IS OPEN to health and strength, if you're a nervous, delicate woman. The medicine to cure you, the tonic to build you up, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. You can depend upon it. The makers say it will help you, or cost you nothing. They guarantee it.

As a safe and certain remedy for woman's ailments, nothing can compare with the "Prescription." It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing, strengthening nervine, perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system.

It's a marvelous remedy for nervous and general debility, St. Vitus's Dance, Fainting Spells, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, and all the nervous disorders due to functional derangements. It has often, by restoring the womanly functions, cured cases of Insanity.

JONES—LUCY MINERVA JONES, daughter of Maj. Joseph C. Cotton and Elisabeth Hunter, was born in Memphis, Tenn., March 31, 1829. In that city, at a Methodist school, she received her education. There in her girlhood she professed religion, and became a member of the church. Some years afterward the family removed to East Baton Rouge parish, La., where on June 7, 1855, she was married to Rev. John A. B Jones, of the Mississippi Conference. Thenceforth her life, following the fortunes of her husband, was intimately connected with the itinerant ministry in Mississippi and Louisiana, beginning with Holmesville circuit in 1855, and ending at Bolton, Aug. 24, 1894—that day inexpressibly sad to her friends, but glorious to her, when she passed out of their sight into the regions of everlasting life and peace. Her infant son and only child died at the parsonage at Bethel, Wilkinson county, May 20, 1856.

As we look back upon the life that has gone from us we see that nature and grace, beautifully blending, formed a character which could not fail to attract all who knew her. It was a happy thing for her that she found in the home of her childhood a beautiful and consistent example of piety in the person of her mother, who was one of the saints of God, daily walking with the Savior. Upon the religious character of the daughter her mother made the deepest impression of all, and under that gentle influence she grew up and learned to love her mother's Savior. In early life she was a deeply interested and successful worker in the Sunday-school. Always she was devoted to the church, and her husband found in her an earnest helper in his pastoral work Her religious experience from the first and all through was clear and certain, causing her to be unfaltering in the faith and always abounding in the work of the Lord. It may be truly said of her that she had the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. a spirit which was a joy and blessing to all about her. Her religion was something that went with her through the whole day, inspiring every duty and transfiguring her entire life. It was the law of her life—a law willingly obeyed, lovingly followed. Sympathy and considerateness marked her life, and made it an untold benediction to the world.

She loved all things pure and beautiful, and those who were privileged to enter her home know how she found friends in birds and flowers.

A marked feature of her character was her friendliness. Her friends could be counted only by the number of her acquaintances, and when once made they were hers always. Wherever she lived she drew to herself many who saw at once her admirable traits, her unselfish disposition, and learned to love her. Her interest in young ministers was great and genuine. Children and young people were drawn to her. A lady of Claiborne county writes: "Shall I ever forget what a dear friend she was, and how she made the young people love her! When a girl I would rather spend an evening with her than to go with my young friends. I do not remember when I did not love Mrs. Jones." Another friend, who knew her long, says: "The announcement of her death brings up many sweet and sad thoughts of the old home near Baton Rouge, and of the pleasure which the coming of Mrs. Cotton and 'Miss Lucy' always brought to us. Where will we find among the good women of these later times one who lives so constantly and consciously in the atmosphere of heaven as did Mrs. Cotton, and who is left among us as kind and good as Miss Lucy?" Thus sympathising friends write from many places far and near.

Sister Jones was given to hospitality. Her home was always a charming place, to which you were welcomed by a pleasant tone and a warm handgrasp.

These were some of that cluster of virtues that shone so brightly in her character—a character beautiful with all natural qualities, but also refined and heightened by the touch of the Divine Spirit.

It was through weeks of sickness and suffering that Sister Jones came to the end of her life; yet these were not so great as to entirely forbid the kindly activities to which she had been accustomed, nor had she wholly lost the natural love of life. Life was sweet and beautiful to her; for, happy in her place and lot, she served God in thankfulness and joy. But in faith she looked forward to the blessed world above. Through near forty years two lives had daily grown into one, two persons had walked together in an inseparable union, mingled their best thoughts and hopes, and striving for the noblest things, until one was called and the other was left. While we sorrow at the passing of such a life, we rejoice at the grace of God displayed therein, at the virtues that appeared, and at the rich harvest of good that she wrought. In a higher sphere there will be found scope for the activities of her being, work for the willing hands to do, room and exercise for the large sympathies of her nature.

WOODS—JULIA A., little daughter of Bro. J. T. and M. E Woods, was born near Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., Oct. 17, 1889, and died Sept 5, 1894, being at the time of her death four years ten months and nineteen days old.

Little Julia was a sweet little girl, and much loved by her parents, brothers and sisters, kinfolks, and all who knew her. She was too pure and sweet to remain on earth, and so the precious Savior called her to his own beautiful home in the skies.

Dear parents and relatives, weep not for little Julia, for she is now with the angels singing around the throne above. May God graciously bless her parents and loved ones, and help them to meet her where parting will be no more, for, doubtless, she will be waiting and watching at the beautiful gate for them!

BLACKSHEAR—D. A. BLACKSHEAR was born in Conecuh county, Ala., Jan. 20, 1826. After a severe and protracted illness he died Sept. 9, 1894.

I was with him frequently during his long sickness, and he often spoke of his abiding faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Romans v. 1, was the stronghold of his Christian confidence. When I read it for him he would say: "That is sufficient. I rely upon that It has been very comforting to me."

He was a cultured gentleman, an alumnus of LaGrange College. Through life he was a consistent and omniverous reader. As a Christian he was firm in his faith, but never demonstrative. He professed conversion and joined the M. E. Church, South, while at college, and remained in her communion until his death. He was a very charitable man. At one time seven poor families were living on his plantation without paying rent. He sent a young man to Centenary College to prepare for the ministry, who lived a short, but very useful life in his chosen work.

He came to Louisiana in '48. During the war he was a purchasing agent for the Confederate government, with the rank of major. The five years immediately following the war he spent in the commission business in New Orleans. For several years previous to his death he lived with his son-in law, Maj Hollingsworth, of Natchitoches, La. He was married, Dec 23, '47, to Miss V. C. Jordan, who died Jan. 3, '65. He leaves two children. N. E. JOYNER.

SCOTT—JOSEPHINE B. LANE was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., July 27, 1847. At the age of fourteen she joined the church at Florence, Ala., under the ministry of Rev. John Matthews. On May 4, 1869, she married Mr. Geo. M. Scott. Walter L., Percy, Mary E., George and Eugene, children of this marriage, survive, one dying in infancy. Mrs. Scott died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Dr R. M. Tyndall, at Okolona, Miss., on Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1894, at 10.15 P. M., and was buried at the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, that place, the next afternoon. Her whole life was one of devotedness to God and love and gentleness to her fellow-creatures.

For two years she suffered from the cruel malady which caused her death, living most of that time under the assurance that her illness was necessarily fatal. But through divine grace she was full of patience to the end, and often in sickness she rejoiced in the conscious love and presence of God. The extreme agony of her last days wrung the hearts of her loved ones. But at last the end came, and in peace she rests from her suffering in the presence of the Savior, to whom her life was given.

ROBINSON—THOMAS DEAN ROBINSON, son of H A. and Sallie D. Robinson, was born in DeSoto county, Miss., March 22, 1885, and died in the same county, Sept. 14, 1894.

For several months he had been a great sufferer and demanded the constant attention of his father, brothers and sisters.

The first week in August, at a meeting conducted by the writer, he came forward and united with the Methodist Church. How touching was that scene to all who witnessed it! That he was soundly converted, and had an intelligent Christian experience for one of his age, I have no doubt.

Just before his death he said, "I must pray." So saying, he got out of the bed, and on his knees, in an earnest prayer, committed his soul to God.

Loved ones, weep not for him. He has simply gone up to live with God.

G. W. GORDON.

LONG—Miss EMMA LOUISE RANDLE was born Jan. 19, 1874. She joined the Methodist Church in Starkville, Miss., in 1886; was married to J. T Long, of Carroll county, Miss., Sept. 20, 1893, and died Oct 2, 1894

She died in the faith.

Humility is truth, and Pride a lie; the one glorifies God, the other dishonors him. Humility makes men to be like angels; Pride makes angels to become devils.—Taylor.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar: Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Faith and works are as necessary to the spiritual life of the Christian as soul and body are to our life as men, for faith is the soul of religion, and works the body.—Colton.

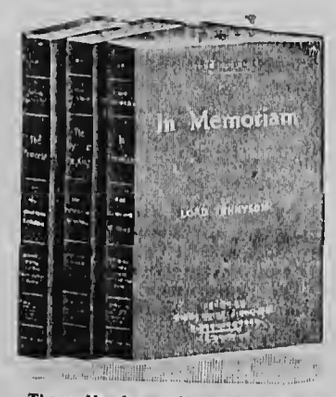
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM.

IDYLLS OF THE KING.

THE PRINCESS.



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the art-motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January, '96. This offer not available to those who have had the benefit of other premium offers. Those who desire a cloth-bound edition are referred to our advertisement headed, "15 Poets in Library Cloth—Poet's Popular Edition." Address

U. S. Gov't Baking Powder Tests.

The report of the analyses of Baking Powders, made by the U. S. Government (Chemical Division, Ag'l Dep't), shows the Royal superior to all other powders, and gives its leavening strength and the strength of each of the other cream of tartar powders tested as follows:

	LEAVENING GAS. Per cent.	Cubic in. per oz.
ROYAL, Absolutely Pure,	13.06	160.6
The OTHER POWDERS TESTED are reported to contain both lime and sulphuric acid, and to be of the following strengths respectively,	12.58	151.1
	11.13	133.6
	10.26	123.2
	9.53	114.
	9.29	111.6

These tests, made in the Gov't Laboratory, by impartial and unprejudiced official chemists, furnish the highest evidence that the "Royal" is the best baking powder.

Atlanta wants the governors of the several States to appoint each eight women to represent their States at its Exposition.

Hugh J. Grant has been named as Tammany's candidate for mayor of New York City, vice Nathan Straus, withdrawn, at the meeting of the Executive Committee in Tammany Hall.

An express train was held up in Texas, near Gordon, on Oct. 19. The robbers, after going through the express company's safe, proceeded to overhaul the purses of the passengers.

Unlike the other leading agricultural products, rice is selling at paying prices this season. Were it certain that the crop would be a full one it might be safely assumed that the industry would experience a prosperous year.

A train in the Indian Territory was held up by robbers, on Oct. 20, but they secured but $500 belonging to the railroad company, as no money was carried by the express messenger. They proceeded to rob the passengers, but were frightened away by the approach of a freight train.

The electric locomotive seems to be the coming thing in railroading. The Baltimore and Ohio is the American pioneer in this sort of thing, and has just had completed several large and powerful machines which it will use in the long belt line tunnel which gives access to the heart of Baltimore.

Major William McKinley, governor of Ohio, one of the leading Americans, and the father of the bill typifying the Republican party's doctrine of protection, spoke in New Orleans, on Oct. 21, to an audience numbering 8,000. He confined himself to the general party doctrine, and said very little of the sugar question, except that the bounty contract should have been kept. A magnificent ovation was given the distinguished guest.

The United States Census Bureau has at last issued a bulletin of the statistics of farms, homes and mortgages in Louisiana. The figures are to the effect that of farms and country homes, 44.49 per cent. of the people own the land they cultivate, while 55.51 per cent. are renters. When the residents of towns and cities in Louisiana are considered, the situation is far less satisfactory. Only 20.72 per cent. of the town families own the houses they live in, while 79.28 per cent. are renters. New Orleans shows up as one of the worst examples of landlordism in this country. Of its 250,000 people, only 21 per cent. own their houses, while 79 out of every 100 families live in rented houses.

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re adjust same.

A HYMN.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

"Lord of all being! throned afar,
Thy glory flames from sun and star;
Center and soul of every sphere,
Yet to each loving heart how near!

"Sun of our life, thy quickening ray
Sheds on our path the glow of day;
Star of our hope, thy softened light
Cheers the long watches of the night.

"Our midnight is thy smile withdrawn;
Our noontide is thy gracious dawn;
Our rainbow arch thy mercy's sign;
All, save the clouds of sin, are thine!

"Lord of all life, below, above,
Whose light is truth, whose warmth is love,
Before thy ever-blazing throne
We ask no luster of our own.

"Grant us thy truth to make us free,
And kindling hearts that burn for thee,
Till all thy living altars claim
One holy light, one heavenly flame."

Selections.

From Nara to Nikko.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

In this strange land every day brings new revelations and every evening changed meditations. When one judgment is about formed, something is seen or heard which compels a modification of the conclusion. So widely different are the classes from each other that it is exceedingly difficult to reach any adequate estimate of the whole people. Some general characteristics, mental and social, they all have; but the extremes are too far removed for the stranger of a few weeks, or the resident of a few years, to bring them together in a satisfactory generalization. From the count to the coolie there is a long distance, and between them is a great gulf fixed. But in one thing they are heartily agreed—in ardent and aggressive love of country. Above his highest personal ambition the Japanese places the honor and glory of his nation. This makes it easy in the present war to mobilize an army. I have heard of great eagerness on the part of hundreds to enlist in their country's service. And they have unbounded faith in themselves. To the possibilities of Japanese conquest they set no bounds. Already they are beginning to discuss how to dispose of the immense subsidy they will surely get from China when the Celestial Empire shall have been conquered. One man told me on the cars a few evenings ago that Japan could easily whip the coolie army of China and capture the whole country. Though extravagant, this is not an unworthy national sentiment, and, properly directed, will speed the higher development and purer civilization of a heaven-favored land. I am profoundly impressed with this country as a strategic point for Christian missions. Once explored for the Lord Christ, and the conquest of great Cathay, and the greater East, will be comparatively easy.

From Nara and Kioto our trip northward by rail gave opportunity to see the agricultural industries of Japan, and enjoy some very beautiful scenery. Like the farmer in other countries, the Japanese farmer is poor. He works hard, fertilizes his land constantly and sumptuously, irrigates industriously and skillfully, rotates his crops in quick succession, but doesn't prosper. The land is heavily taxed, and so are the products of the soil. When these are paid to support the government, the farmer is almost left, with "cleanness of teeth." Over the fields of rice, millet, cotton, etc., I saw tall, bare poles—a very forest of them. They are used to draw water from shallow wells for irrigation. By means of a cross piece, with a heavy weight on one end and a bucket attached to a bamboo rope on the other, water is poured upon the rice fields. Another curious device was a large wheel in a ditch, on top of which a man (or woman) kept a ceaseless step, and by whose revolutions water was lifted to a flume and distributed over the thirsty land. In the crudest way the soil is irrigated and crops cultivated, and then are sold for a song. One poor old farmer asked a missionary about the progress of the war, declaring himself as heartily in favor of it, because it would raise the price of rice. The city coolie, on the other hand, favored the war because it would make rice cheaper. Farm laborers here get about ten cents a day.

All labor is cheap. A large cotton manufacturer, who speaks English well, said he paid from eight to thirty cents a day to the operatives in his mills. Locomotive engineers get about eighty cents a day, and other railroad employees much lower figures. No wonder manufacturing and railroading are productive.

At Nara and Kioto we saw men in pilgrim dress, with a turban, or sort of inverted basket, over head and face, and stopping before houses while they played monotonously on a flute-shaped instrument. They are mendicants and penitents, roaming over the country, homeless and friendless, because of some crime or sin committed, and devoting themselves to penance and beggary. Judging from their unusually neat appearance, they must find it more profitable to beg than to work.

Another class is seen in all the cities and villages—the blind. They are many, and seem to receive tenderest consideration. A jinrikisha-man, however reckless, will never run against one. They walk the streets alone, playing on some instrument, and most of them are self-supporting. By a sort of unwritten law they have almost a monopoly of the shampooing and massage business. The Japanese are very fond of rubbing as well as bathing, and must suffer not a little from rheumatism. Massage is a popular treatment, and the blind are most skillful manipulators. By this means they are self-sustaining, and become physicians to the ailments and infirmities of others. As one passes down the narrow street, blowing his flute, he is called in if there be need for a joint to be rubbed or a head shampooed. I watched the process on several occasions, much to my amusement and entertainment.

Both in Nara and Kioto we saw in several temples a very popular Japanese deity, with an ugly face and a hard name. He is the God of Health—cures all kinds of disease, and relieves all sorts of pain. Prayers are presented, and that part of the image touched where the suppliant suffers. Judging from the worn places on the old god, I should conclude that these people are afflicted most with colic and headache. Not having any special malady, I did not test the virtue of the Buddhist saint. But thousands do believe that folly, and die because of it. Medicine, however, is a progressive science in Japan. Already she can claim some distinguished men in the profession. One of the famous bacteriologists of the world, I am told, is a native Japanese. So the old, rubbed and weather-worn god and his shrine will soon be forsaken.

The first pagoda of any size yet seen was at Nara. It occupies a commanding summit, is five stories, 150 feet high, dates back to 770, and contains four Buddhas.

I failed to mention in my last letter an interesting fact connected with one of the great temples in Kioto—the Nai Hon-gwan-ji. In the courtyard, and very near the venerable structure, is a large, irregularly-shaped tree, with immense lateral branches sustained by props, and leaves much resembling the camphor tree. The tree is sacred in the eyes of the faithful, as in case of fire it is supposed to emit showers of rain for the preservation of the temple—a sort of divine, self-acting fire department appointed to save the abode of the gods and the trysting-place of the saints. Alas! alas! for such blind superstition. With a heavy heart I turned away, and said, "How long! O Lord! how long!"

Leaving Kioto in the early afternoon, we started northward, and reached Nagoya, the fourth city of the empire in population, about eight o'clock. Rev. A. R. Morgan, president of the Methodist Protestant Conference in Japan, and Dr. Wainright were at the station to welcome the strangers, and supply any lack of colloquial Japanese. Soon we were dashing up the wide and brilliantly-lighted street, with its attractive bazars on either side, and in a few minutes our spirited jinrikisha-men stopped in front of Mr. Morgan's gate. Here we found a royal North Carolina welcome, and spent a delightful night. Other missionaries came in for the evening, and the hours went swiftly by. How we talked of the Old North State, and the noble preachers dead and alive! I had occasionally to take my longitudinal bearings to be reassured that I was on the other side the world from that goodly land of my fathers. Mrs. Morgan was a Miss Bryan from near Goldsboro. Mr. Vandyke, one of the Methodist Protestant missionaries, gave us a very thrilling account of the destructive earthquake which occurred there two years ago. In escaping from the large schoolbuilding, a piece of tiling fell upon his head, crushing the skull, and came near taking his life. Many were the injured, and hundreds of houses were piled up in horrid heaps.

The next morning I attended the Conference of that church, and by request spoke a few fraternal words. The greetings of Southern Methodism had been appropriately expressed the day before by Dr. Wainright and Bro. Tenaka. Mr. Morgan is president of the Conference by appointment of the Board of Missions, and is charged with the responsibility of stationing the preachers.

On the trains and elsewhere I have heard much of what the missionaries and foreigners call Japanese "honorifics"—and the greatest difficulty of the language. Together with their profound bowings, they use forms of expression which indicate extreme politeness—these are honorifics. They speak in complimentary phrase of others and their possessions, and most depreciatory of themselves. For instance, it is polite to speak more respectfully of another's dog than of your own son. A man will say, "Your august wife," and "My fool wife." He applies these terms to everything belonging to another—as "your honorable cat." The cook at Brother Davis', in Arima, came in response to the bell when we were eating dinner, and said to Sister Davis: "What is the honorable business?" When two persons meet for the first time one will say (literally rendered): "This is the first time I have hung in your honorable eyes." The word "O," honorable, and "go," august, are prefixed to nouns denoting objects belonging to others—as, "O kuni"—your honorable country. O Tomrai—honorable funeral. O Tsuki summa—the moon, literally, Hon. Mrs. Moon. His own things, on the contrary, are depreciated, as, kusai, my wife—literally, "my stupid wife."

We arrived at Tokio Saturday night, spent a profitable Sabbath, and went up to Nikko on Monday morning. Of "the Mikado's capital and Nikko the Beautiful," I will write in my next.

The Japan Mail, of Saturday, Aug. 18, contained this death notice: "We regret to announce the death of his Imperial Highness Prince Toruhito. The little Prince began to be indisposed about the 20th of June, and on the 26th was sent to Miyanoshita for change of air. On the 10th inst. his malady grew rapidly graver, and the physicians' reports became so disquieting that the Emperor issued orders for the Prince's immediate return to the capital. His Imperial Highness reached Aasha Palace at 12:25 A. M., on the 17th, and expired at 3 o'clock. The Prince was born on Nov. 30, last year. He was the Emperor's fifth son. Of his four brothers only one survives, Prince Yoshihito, the heir apparent."

A short paragraph suffices to announce this death in the royal family. Possibly absolute silence would have been more becoming; for, according to public statement and general knowledge, the little Prince is not the son of the Empress, nor is the surviving Prince Imperial. And yet the Imperial Diet last Winter passed congratulatory resolutions and presented them to the Emperor on the occasion of the birth of his fifth son. Which one of ten or twelve is his mother has not been made public.

Educate the Ministry.

That one of the great needs of our church to-day is an educated ministry few will deny. In order to lead the people, and command the respect and influence which rightly belong to a minister, our preachers should be trained in all the learning of the schools. Time was when men of culture were unfrequently met with; but within recent years schools have so multiplied, and so widely has education extended her enlightening influence, that such is no longer true. The time has passed when even the masses will contentedly follow the lead of an ignorant, uncultured preacher. Let us not be deceived because people rush in great crowds to camp meetings, and to special revival services, to hear outpourings of slang and invective, and to be entertained by strings of anecdotes. The preachers who deal out this sort of stuff would not be tolerated for any length of time as pastors. Already the public is beginning to be surfeited with such preaching. If Southern Methodism would retain her hold upon the better classes of society, she must fill her pulpits with consecrated men, hut men of culture and refinement. The ministry of the Apostle Paul was none the less effective because he was scholarly and courteous.

Although the thrust is sometimes made at us that our ministry does not rank, in point of education, with that of some other Protestant denominations, it can not be said with truth that our church discounts the value of an educated ministry. While in many cases we do send poorly equipped men into the field, our leaders are by no means content with this state of things. A preacher may be as pious as David, and yet, if he is lacking in education, his usefulness is sadly impaired. If he has pluck, however, by hard study he may overcome the difficulty. The founder of Methodism, as every well-informed Methodist knows, was a university-trained man. So was Charles Wesley. Nor is it conceivable that, without such thorough education, these men could have accomplished the great work they did accomplish. "Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds." Peter and John and the other disciples, though in a sense "unlearned and ignorant men," had the greatest privilege that ever fell to any student—that of receiving instruction from the Master himself.

There is little danger at present that our ministry is being so highly educated as to put it out of sympathy with the common people. Whatever may be true in other quarters, Southern Methodism is not suffering from the presence of too many scholars. On the contrary, we have too few. We live in an age of specialization. Excepting geniuses, of course, the lawyer or the teacher who would achieve the highest success finds it necessary to spend two or three years, or even longer, in special training at some university after having received his collegiate training. Physicians are, in some States, required to do so by law. While general culture counts for more, perhaps, in the ministry than in any other profession, those who have had special theological training start out with a decided advantage. If the work of training young ministers is to be done at all, it should be done well. There is such a thing as sham education. Let there be none of it in the ministry. Each young man looking toward the ministry should resolve to have the best education, general and special, obtainable. Our theological seminary at Nashville compares favorably with any other institution of the kind in the land. It is splendidly equipped and officered, and the student who enters its portals will ever after find the instruction received helpful, and his association with teachers and students a source of inspiration. Lack of funds need deter no one from entering. Indolence, rather than lack of time, we fear, sometimes keeps young preachers from taking a finished education. Pity that it should be so.—Preacher, in Nashville Advocate.

Rome in Politics.

"That the Catholic Church is guided by men of ability, devoted to its political success, who are determined, by fair means or foul, to secure office for its own men at the expense of Protestant applicants, it is needless to deny. Take, for example, Senator White, of California. Of the sixteen appointments made by him, just six teen are Catholics. Now, multiply this number by the number of subordinate employees, and we have the number of men preferred because of their religious belief. To further substantiate the fact that Catholics vote as a unit, take the city governments where they are an appreciable number in the population, and see the effects. Their percentage of office-holding is enormous, and is most objectionable when applying to federal offices, because of the many minor positions, which, as in the case of Mr. White, of California, are invariably Catholic. Chicago's collector of port and United States marshal are both Catholic; also her mayor, chief of police, chief of fire department, postmaster, State's attorney, the clerks of all the courts, except State court of records, a number of judges, forty-five of the sixty-eight aldermen, ninety per cent. of the police force, eighty per cent. of the members of the fire department and sixty-seven per cent. of the school teachers. Catholics are very far from being a majority of the voting population, so Protestants are responsible for the present state of things. If the American Protective Association, that was organized in '87 and now claims the control of 2 000 000 votes, will simply turn on the light without stirring up strife, it may yet do the American people a service that the more conservative elements have been slow to accord it."—Exchange.

Food and Drug Adulteration.

Few persons realize to what extent food and drugs are adulterated. Alexander J. Wedderburn, of the Agricultural Department, who has been making an exhaustive investigation of the subject, has issued a report, in which he says: That almost every article of food and drug used in our country is adulterated is proved most conclusively by a vast amount of information gathered by the department. He finds that the amount of adulteration reaches the immense sum of $1 014 000,000, and that at least 2 per cent. of the whole is deleterious to health. The United States is shown to be one of the few countries that fail to require the proper branding of manufactured foods and drugs, and this fact is taken advantage of by foreign competitors, while at home adulteration is proving a serious drain upon the resources of the people, as the general character of food adulteration is principally commercial fraud. The effort to check the evil by means of State legislation has proven a failure, and Mr. Wedderburn strongly urges the passage of a national food and drug law. This is a matter in which every consumer is vitally concerned, and it should receive from the next session of Congress the attention it deserves.—N. W. Advocate.

The Munificence of Wealthy Men.

The munificence of the wealthy men of this nation in behalf of higher education has excited the surprise and admiration of the people in the Old World. The last quarter of a century nearly $75,000,000 have been given for this cause. George Peabody left $6,000,000 of his estate to the cause of education; Isaac Rich, $2,000 000 to Boston University; Johns Hopkins, $3,140 000 to found a university in Baltimore which bears his name; Asa Packard gave $3,000,000 to Lehigh University; D. B. Fayerweather left a bequest of nearly $3,000,000 to various colleges; Cornelius Vanderbilt gave $1,000 000 to the Vanderbilt University; John C. Green gave $1,500 000 to Princeton College; Asa Stone, $600 000 to Adelbert College; G. I. Seney, $450,000 to Wesleyan University; Matthew Vassar, $800,000 to Vassar College for Women; J. D. Rockefeller's gifts to the Chicago University aggregate $4 500 000; and Leland Stanford's estate will yield from $15 000,000 to $20 000,000 for the university that bears his name on the Pacific coast. These men, and a host of others, will be remembered through succeeding generations for their generous liberality. The wisdom of these noble benefactions commends itself to the enlightened judgment of all good citizens.—Exchange.

The Ebb Tide of Migration.

For a long series of years the tide of migration has set steadily and strongly towards America. The ebb seems now to have begun. For the six months ending June 30 the arrivals of immigrants were but 66 per cent. of the departures. This excess of emigration over immigration has never happened before since 1820. The largest exodus was from the coal mines of Pennsylvania, where the men during the past year had been able to earn but 84 cents a day. Small wages are clearly the cause of the return. In the last half year 20,000 families have left our ports, making 100,000 individuals, and of these 65 000 have left since April 1. The shutting down of so many mills has essentially swelled the number of departures. There is little money now sent back to aid relatives to come; letters are constantly going to Europe begging help for the return voyage. Labor in the East rejoices in this influx, while in the West there is a demand for increase of population.—Exchange.

The Revival Needed.

The revival most needed at this hour is a revival of interest in, and loyalty to, our Methodist press. Wesley was never wiser or more practical in his counsel to his ministers than when he said to them, "It is impossible for a people to grow in grace unless they give themselves to reading." The Methodist weekly best supplies to our people the intelligence and inspiration which they ought to receive; and yet only in a pitiably small minority of our homes—one of the Advocates says in only one out of ten—is any Methodist paper taken. A large proportion of the efficiency of our churches do not subscribe for any religious paper. The results which are so much desired in spiritual quickening and in larger usefulness can not come save as this lamentable condition is changed. Will not the preachers lead a general reform in this matter?—Zion's Herald.

There are thirty-four self-supporting Methodist Churches in Toronto, which, for a city of only about 200 000, is a great showing. A stranger is sure to be impressed by the manifest devoutness of the congregations. As the people take their seats in the house of God they all bow the head in prayer. A great many of them follow the pastor in the reading of the lessons. After the sermon is over, instead of the instant rush for the door, there is a brief interval of silent worship. Forms, I know, are not everything; and yet they are more than some people imagine.—D. Hess.

In the Living Present.

Presiding elder to boisterous preacher, "Could you not carry on your meetings with less noise?" adding that Solomon's temple was built without sound, not even of a hammer. Replied the clamorous preacher: "We are not building a temple; we're blasting rocks."

Will not our republic follow in the wake of those in Greece and Rome? Are there no signs of impending collapse? No. There are factors at work here which the ancients discarded. We have (1) religious toleration, (2) universal education, and (3) a better family life prevailing among us than in the defunct republics.

Said Victor Hugo, "He who opens a school, closes a prison." In London in 1870, 1 500 000 children attended school. Now that attendance reaches 5 000 000. At the same time the number of prisoners has fallen from 14 000, in 1870, to 5 000 to-day. The English schools not only impart intellectual instruction, but also afford moral training. A rare excellence.

To traduce the pastors of congregations is the principal "stock in trade" of the average evangelist. This abuse never fails in making him popular with the thoughtless and wicked masses. It seems that some of our Sunday-school workers are trying to imitate the evangelistic caterer of favor. At the close of the New Orleans Parish Sunday-school Convention, held at the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, Oct. 23, certain speakers treated the preachers very roughly for supposed dereliction of duty.

Far from his home in St. Petersburg, at Livadia, Crimea, the Czar of Russia is in the throes of death. The attending physicians differ as to some minor points, but all agree that kidney disease is laying the mighty low. The invalid is only fifty years of age. The prevailing sadness is intensified by the rapid decline of his son George. Lung consumption will carry him off. Besides this, the Czarina, exhausted by long vigils, has succumbed to hysteria. It is the wish of the dying Czar that his oldest son and heir apparent shall marry his betrothed, Princess Alix of Hesse Darmstadt, before his demise. She has already arrived at Livadia.

Lafcadio Hearne, long a resident of Louisiana, subsequently in the West Indies, has published a work of two large volumes, called "Glimpses of Unfamiliar Japan." He furnishes much useful information; but in doing so he extols Japanese civilization overmuch, and looks with pessimistic eye on everything in the far West. Among other extravagancies, he says: "Japan has nothing whatever to gain by conversion to Christianity, either morally or otherwise, but very much to lose." We suppose Mr. Hearne had already embraced Confucianism. But with all that—

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run."

GIVE A KIND WORD WHEN YOU CAN.

Do you know a heart that hungers
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us;
It may be that one is near.
Look around you! If you find it,
Speak the word that's needed so,
And your own heart may be strengthened
By the help that you bestow.

It may be that some one falters
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you might save him—
Help to make the tempted strong.
Look about you, O my brother!
What a slo is yours and mine,
If we see that help is needed,
And we give no friendly sign!

Never think kind words are wasted—
Bread on waters cast are they,
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back to us some day;
Coming back when sorely needed
In a time of sharp distress;
So, my friend, let's give them freely;
Gift and giver God will bless.

A Call to Young Women to Missionary Work

BY MISS J. THOBURN.

"A call for missionaries, from whom? "From the millions who have never heard the name that to us is above every name. We say millions, and the word passes out of our mind as easily as its liquid sound is spoken, leaving little realization of its full significance. There are more than ten hundred millions in the world who are without the gospel, and yet are included in the 'every creature' named in the Lord's farewell commandment to his disciples.

"The call is from each and all of these, but especially to you, my sister, for the women among them, to whom only you can go. They are in harem and zenana; they are field-laborers and burden-bearers; they are caste-bound and foot-bound and soul-bound in a bondage which you, who breathe this free air, can not understand. They suffer in body and soul. If some one were sick and dying in your street, and without care, would you not go to help?

"Across the sea has come to be across the street in these latter days, and millions there are sick and dying, and in the prison-house of ignorance and superstition; millions are in poverty that reaches down to famine. They need you; they are within your reach. Will you go and tell them of the world's Savior and of woman's best Friend?

"The call is from your divine Master, who knows and cares for all his creatures, and whose last words on earth committed this care to his disciples. Are you his disciple? Then to you he has spoken, and speaks to-day, with the pleading that stoops to patience with our slow obedience, and with the authority of a king's command. But you say, 'All of his disciples can not go, and how am I to know that I am chosen?' The answer is a simple one, Ask him. Ask, 'Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?' and if you wait before him with a willing heart, he will surely answer in some way. You may be shown a disability—such as poor health, a necessary home duty, a want of adaptation to new work, a lack of education that can not be made up. If any of these things are in your way, you can readily read that you are among those whose duty it is to send instead of go. You will always work more faithfully in sending if your heart has been stirred to ask if you may go. The most active workers are those who would have chosen to go themselves if they had had the privilege.

"Do not consider it a necessary home duty that you are a successful teacher here. Twenty other young women would do your work as well, and be glad of the opportunity. There the work will not be done at all unless you go, and they ask for the teachers who succeed here, and want no others. The fact that you are useful only makes your call more apparent. The most difficult places require the highest talent and the best preparation and the most experience. If you have these, take them where you have widest use for them.

"Do not stay because you have some gift with your pen, and a literary life allures you. The literary world is alive with pens and brains as gifted as yours that can well fill all the room you leave them. Take yours to those who have no one to plead for them, and who have nothing to read. There is wide room for your talent in the future churches of Asia.

"Do not refuse to go because you are a musician. That talent, too, can now be more used to the glory of God in Japan and in China, Brazil and Mexico than in America. Take it with you, and all the cultivation bestowed upon it, and be thankful that it is yours to use for Christ where his little ones are learning to lisp the new song, instead of folding it in the napkin of self-culture in some social club or paid choir.

"Do not stay for the sake of friends unless they require your service. I write these words solemnly, for I know they may mean that you can not stay even for a mother's sake. Did not the Lord's words mean that? As long as your own flesh needs you for service, there is your duty, but only for service, not for pleasure, not for the comforts of sight and touch and dear companionship; for then he who left his Father's home for you may say you are not worthy of his love.

"You may say you are not ready. Perhaps; but you can begin to prepare. You need education in the fullest meaning of that word—a knowledge of books and things, and of their uses—especially of the Book—a knowledge of people (yourself among them), the divine art of winning souls, and of leading forward in Christian life those you have won. You can not be too well prepared; but with schools and colleges everywhere, with the advice and help of Christian friends, and now with the advantages of a training-school established for the purpose, the preparation is assured if only your will is assured. You may have no money, but you can make it. Any brave girl can in these days, and the lessons you will learn meanwhile will be a large part of your preparation. It may require time, but you need time. There is more danger in going too young than too old. If you are called and consecrated to the work, you will find a way for the preparation.

"If you obey the call to live, not for yourself, but for others, and to go for Christ's sake to work where you are most needed, he will lead you out into a large place and give you more than you can ask or think of all good gifts. Instead of going into exile, you will find home in the hearts of the many who will love you.

"Instead of going into an unknown, obscure place, you will climb a hill-top and find the world at your feet. Instead of the little aims that attract, but never satisfy, you will have purposes and sympathies as wide as the lands in which you labor. The servant is not greater than his Lord, and you will not fail of sore trials, heart-sorrow, disappointing delays; but as you are a joint-heir with Christ in these things, so are you in the joy that was set before him. Go for Christ's sake, abide in him, and the joy of the Lord will be your strength. Even in tribulation you will thank him for giving you a part in such a blessed service."—W. F. M. S., M. E. Church.

After a careful reading of the above appeal, let's remember our watchword, "Am I doing what I can?" and have a season of fasting and prayer, and ask our heavenly Father what he would have us to do. Each of us have special duties that no one can do for us.

Auxiliaries should not forget to furnish their respective pastors with written reports, including all money raised and expended since the report to them last year, in time for their report to the fourth Quarterly Conference.

MRS. E. D. JONES,

Millsaps College.

Millsaps College had during its first two years unquestionably one of the most efficient corps of teachers ever assembled in Mississippi. At present the faculty is the same with three exceptions and the addition of a new man. The chair of mathematics is now filled by Dr. Moore; that of sciences is temporarily filled by Mr. Hanner; the principal of the Preparatory Department is Prof. Ricketts, Mr. Bailey being his assistant. All of these gentlemen came to us with the finest recommendations in respect to acquirements, character and ability to teach.

As might be supposed, the curriculum here is high, comparing favorably with that of the best colleges of the land. In fact, in some branches we take the lead. In mathematics, for instance, we claim the highest compulsory course of any school in the State, if not in the South. Such a faculty and such a comprehensive course of study could not in the beginning and can not now fail to make their impress on the people, and the sequel was that the college commenced its career with a large student body.

The first week of the first session saw one hundred names enrolled, Mississippi and Louisiana being represented; the last saw one hundred and fifty. The first week of the second session saw one hundred and twenty-five names enrolled, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama being represented; the last saw one hundred and sixty. The first week of the third session saw one hundred and ninety names enrolled, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia being represented; the last will see two hundred and fifty. Now, since by mathematical calculation we will have two hundred and fifty boys on our hands by June the first, I think this is the proper place to tell how we will take care of them and do take care of the hundred and ninety.

Beautifully located on the spacious college campus are Asbury and Williams Halls—two elegant homes for students, and so conducted that the same restraining, the same refining and elevating influences are thrown around a boy here as at home. Board and lodging, including lights and fuel, can be had in these two homes for the modest sum of twelve dollars per month. Just behind Asbury and Williams Halls, ranged on the brow of the same hill, forming a picturesque group, are six neat, cozy cottages for students of maturer years. Here the student makes his expenses what he pleases. To the more fastidious, private families around the college and in town offer accommodation, guaranteeing satisfaction even though he be of an epicurean cast. We have ample accommodation for seven hundred students.

Just here I should like to mention some of the advantages and attractions that exist here outside of the regular college courses. First is the nucleus of a "College Museum," containing not only local, but also some foreign curiosities. There is an especially good collection from China and Japan, such as ancient armor and weapons, garments of the peasantry, a number of gods and goddesses. These were presented to the college by Rev. G. H. Hawkins. Second is the Y. M. C. A., having, I suppose, the largest per cent. membership among the students of any similar organization. Here faith is exalted above science, and Christian character above intellectual training, and the student is taught there of an all-wise and benevolent God and that the soul is immortal. Third is the two "Literary Societies," named Lamar and Galloway, after Mississippi's most honored and best-loved sons. They hold their meetings weekly, at which current and historical questions are discussed. It is within their classic walls that the germ of oratory is fostered and the embryo statesman developed. Fourth is the "College Library," under the supervision of the professor of Latin and Greek. The books are systematically arranged according to the subjects of which they treat. Of these subjects there is a "Library Index," showing the different works on each, and their number, shelf and tier. The room itself is well lighted and ventilated. Extending nearly across this room is a heavy oak table on which is spread some of our best dailies, magazines and periodicals. By means of these the students are enabled to keep posted on topics of the day and to keep in tone with the outer world. Near at hand, for convenience of reference, may be seen: "Webster's International," the "New English Philological Dictionary," "Encyclopædia Britannica;" "Cyclopædia of Political Science, of Political Economy, of United States History," "Greek and Latin Lexicons," "Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities," "A Classical Dictionary," "Skeats' Etymological Dictionary," and statistics on all subjects. These attractions tend to make schoolife the halcyon days they are commonly reported to be.

Are not these facts mute prophesies of a bright and useful career? Is not the future of this two-year-old protege of the church—born of sacrifices and prayers, ministered to by priests and high priests, fair of form and figure, the pet and pride of eighty thousand Mississippi Methodists, having a rich individual inheritance with a man's intellect and capacity to do—strangely and strikingly manifest?

FRANK M. AUSTIN.

Partial Regeneration.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

Mr. Wesley, in his sermon on "Sin in Believers," cites six passages of Scripture to prove the doctrine of the "Residue" theory of partial regeneration.

Says Dr. Crane, of the New Jersey Conference: "Not one of these passages seem clearly to prove the doctrine. He quotes I Gal. v, 17: "For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye can not do the things that ye would." Mr. Wesley says that in these words Paul is "speaking to believers, and describing the state of believers in general." How can this be when the very first remark he makes to the Galatians is that he "marvels that they are so soon removed from him that had called them into the grace of Christ, unto another gospel?" Paul calls them foolish, speaks of their biting and devouring one another, and tells them that they are fallen from grace. They were not all alike fallen; for Paul adds: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such a one." The church in Galatia was evidently in a very bad condition; many of the members seem to have departed wholly from the faith and there were grevious sins among them. Paul hoped the church might be saved from utter wreck, but was not sure of it. It is safe, then, to take a remark, made to describe such a motley company, as a correct description of everyone who is "born of God"?

Mr. Wesley next quotes I. Cor. iii, 1, 3, 4: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. . . . Ye are yet carnal, for whereas there is among you envying and strife and divisions, are ye not carnal and walk as men"? Paul called them "carnal" because of their envy, strife and factions. Consequently, the term applies only to those who were guilty of envy, strife, and faction. And did Paul allude to temptations simply, or genuine, open sins, known and read of all? He wrote with anguish of heart and many tears, rebuking wickedness, visible, palpable, and shameful, and not describing the moral condition of those who, as Mr. Wesley says, in this very same sermon, "have power both over outward and inward sin, even from the moment they are justified."

Mr. Wesley cites the Second Epistle to the Corinthians vii, 1: "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Mr. Wesley says: Paul "plainly teaches that those believers were not yet cleansed therefrom." But what does Paul teach about himself? He says: "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit." He certainly includes himself. Does Paul, "the aged, the inspired apostle of Christ," in the twenty sixth year of his ministry, and only six years before his martyrdom, confess that he is not yet cleansed? And how shall we interpret numberless other exhortations which assume the same shape. This for instance: "Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering, and wantonness, not in strife and envying." (Rom. xiii, 13.) Does Paul here plainly teach that the Roman Christians were "not cleansed therefrom," nor he himself? These exhortations of Paul were but strong appeals to believers to continue in the love of God, with all fidelity, serving him with a "perfect heart and willing mind."

Lastly, Mr. Wesley quotes what the Spirit saith unto the church of Ephesus, Pergamos, and Sardis. These admonitions were addressed to the ministers of the several churches named, as the representatives of the flocks to which they ministered, and they are not to be construed as merely descriptive of the pastors themselves. But Mr. Wesley construes the passage as if it were addressed to the pastors only. He says, "Who can doubt there was faith in the angel of the church at Ephesus when our Lord said to him, 'I know thy works, and thy labor and thy patience'"? But was there, meantime, no sin in his heart? Yea, or Christ would not have added, "Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." This was a real sin which God saw in his heart, of which accordingly he is exhorted to repent; and yet we have no authority to say that he had "no faith." But was that of which he was reminded simply a temptation, involving no condemnation? If it was, why summon him to repent of it and "remember whence he had fallen, and to do his first works lest God should come quickly, and remove the candlestick out of its place." Moreover, this rebuke came upon the Ephesian pastor, if we construe it as Mr. Wesley does, because he had left his first love. What, then, was his religious state before he left his first love? How can a rebuke, administered to a man because he has fallen, prove anything in regard to the religions of those who do not fall?

The angel of the church of Pergamos was also exhorted to repent, or else God would "come quickly and fight against him." Nothing but overt sin could provoke such a threat against him. The angel of the church of Sardis is exhorted to "strengthen the things which remain that are ready to die." How does the state of a church, or of a man, whose piety is at the point of death, prove that there is a residue of depravity left in one who is born of God, who has not been unfaithful? These, then, are the Scripture proofs of the doctrine that "this infection of nature doth remain, yea, in them that are regenerated."—Extract from Dr. J. T. Crane's "Birthright of All God's Children."

Transferred Appointments.

MR. EDITOR: In regard to the filling the appointments in Louisiana lately transferred from the Mississippi to the Louisiana Conference, I suggest that, as far as possible, the preferences of the preachers be regarded. I am sure some of the preachers in the Louisiana part would prefer to be in the Mississippi Conference, and some now in Mississippi would like to go to Louisiana; so I think if the Bishops and presiding elders interested could only be informed, that part of the Louisiana Conference could be filled by preachers there now, and who wish to stay there, and by some who are now in Mississippi who were reared in Louisiana, and whose interests would naturally carry them that way.

The Question

Is not, "Wesley and Watson, or Jesus and Paul?" but, "Walker and Parker, or Wesley and Watson?" And "as for me and my house, we will follow" the construction put by Wesley and Watson and Fletcher and Adam Clarke on the words of our blessed Redeemer and of his inspired apostles, rather than the construction of men of less scholarship. These fathers of Methodism have ever been safe leaders.

Cloudy Christians.

An excellent man declared in prayer meeting the other day, that he had somehow lost the joy he once possessed in the Christian life. God, he said, had withdrawn his approval of him and left him in a miserably unhappy state. He wondered what his particular sin was, and how he could get into the pure sunshine again. He still clung to his faith in God, like Job, and hoped that his case would have as happy an issue as did that of the old patriarch.

It is not at all certain that this man had committed any particular sin, on account of which God was withdrawing his presence. Such thoughts often come to those who depend more or less upon their emotions as a guide in spiritual matters. Emotions are transitory and uncertain, and he who measures his Christian life by their fullness will be the victim of varying moods, now on the mountain top, now in the valley, now singing hallelujahs, now groaning out lamentations.

A little thought will make it evident that it is unreasonable to expect to be constantly in one frame of mind, to have the feelings always expressive of one state, and to bask continually in the sunshine. It is not so in nature, and nature shows the wisdom of God. It is not always day; the night is equally welcome. It is not always the sunshine; the clouds bring the refreshing coolness and the vivifying showers. The joys of conversion are not and ought not to be lasting. Conversion is only one experience. The active growing Christian should have many experiences, and these can not all be of a joyous nature. Sorrows come, disappointments are inevitable, temptations and trials of all kinds are in the lot of all. Are we not told that God scourgeth every son whom he receiveth, and that those who are not chastened are not sons? These chastenings "are not joyous, but grievous." These are the clouds which the heavenly Father has thought it necessary to send, and they should not be interpreted as meaning his withdrawal. They are rather the sure signs of his presence.

Christ was on the mountain top when he was transfigured. But he descended to the plains. He had his hours of exaltation and his season of depression. When he turned sorrowfully away from the place where he had been unable to do any mighty works because of the unbelief of the people, it was with a sense of failure, of disappointment and discouragement. He had not accomplished what he wanted to accomplish. This, of course, was not the result of sin on his part, but of sin and perverseness on the part of the people. But it brought the clouds into his personal sky. His disappointment over the waywardness of Jerusalem was so keen that he wept. He regarded it as one of his failures. We speak with all reverence when we speak of the failures of the blessed Master; but failures there were. Judas was one of them, and there were many others, for which no shadow or fault could be imputed to him.

We must not misunderstand our experiences. We may easily be led to be too sensitive in the interpretation of our emotions, and imagine when the sky is overcast that God is shut out, and that it is some heinous sin in us that has hidden his face from us. The dwelling on such thoughts makes a gloomy Christian, and a Christian dwelling perpetually in clouds and darkness comes, sooner or later, into a state of doubt. Let us ever remember that "behind a frowning providence he hides a smiling face."

The soldier does not expect always to march in dress parade. Doubtless such military displays are occasions of exultation; but that is not what men become soldiers for. The fatiguing march, the exposure, the deprivation, the terrible battle, with wounds and death momentarily threatening, are the services for which he has enlisted. He who endures them is a good soldier. So a good soldier of Christ must be able to endure hardness and must expect it. Paul learned how to suffer, and we account him a hero, because he did not murmur nor charge God foolishly, nor abate one jot of his faith. His faith was steadfast; trial did not weaken or alter it. His emotions were changeable, but his faith was fixed; and he went through all his sufferings in a spirit of triumph because his faith was so strong.

After the transfiguration came the crucifixion; that was the blackest of darkness. Later came the ascension; that was the brightest of brightness, the triumph of triumphs.—Independent.

The Lost Boy.

One Sunday, Mr. D. L. Moody was preaching in the big circus-tent near the Columbian Exposition in Chicago from the text, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." After he had finished, a little boy, with handsome face and form, was brought to the platform by an officer, who said he had found him wandering in the crowd, evidently lost. Mr. Moody took the little fellow in his arms, and, standing before the great throng, asked the people to look at the lost child. "This boy has a father who is, no doubt, at this moment looking for him with anxious heart;" said the preacher. "The father is more anxious to find his boy than the boy is to be found. It is just so with our heavenly Father. He is seeking us to-day; seeking us with unspeakable solicitude. For long years he has been following you. O sinner! He is following you still. He is calling you to-day."

At this instant a man with blanched face and excited eye was seen elbowing his way towards the platform. As he reached it, the little boy saw him, and, running quickly over the platform, threw himself into his father's outstretched arms. The multitude witnessed the scene with breathless attention, and then broke out into a mighty cheer. "Thus," cried Mr. Moody, "will God receive you, if you will only run to him to-day. 'The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.'"—Christian Intelligencer.

Life is large. We can not possibly grasp the whole of it in the few years we have to live. What may we let go? We may let go all things that we can not carry into the eternal life. We may drop pretense; eternity is not good for shams. We may drop worry; the eternal life is serene. Discontent: In all the eternal years there is no word of murmur from any restless heart. As for our opportunities, we can make a heroic life out of whatever is set before us to work with or upon; taking loyal hold of time, work, present happiness, love, duty, friendship, sorrow and faith, let us so live as to be an inspiration, strength and blessing to those whose lives are touched by ours.

The most of the things that trouble and worry us in this life are "trifles light as air." We fret away an immense amount of nervous force and moral energy over affairs that ought scarcely to give us a moment's thought. That rational beings should be guilty of such folly is amazing. It can only be explained on the supposition of temporary insanity or spiritual blindness.—Exchange.

The call to Christian laymen to work for Christ is not less earnest than that which summons men into the ministry. The churches suffer for want of lay leaders who passionately desire the prosperity of God's house. New methods of worship and work, new organizations and new views of religious life are taking possession of the churches. Often there is a transient zeal without guidance, and spiritual indifference follows. Men of independent convictions and consecrated purpose can exert immense influence now. The people blindly follow skillful leaders into disaster and reckless destruction, of which the recent strike is an example. Wise, upright men, whose loyalty to the interests of the people has been tested, they are ready to follow with implicit confidence. Did laymen who wish to spend their lives in building up God's kingdom and righteousness ever have larger opportunities than are offered to them in this country to-day?—The Congregationalist.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they have now, and all they expect to have.—Edward Everett Hale.

All truly consecrated men learn little by little that what they are consecrated to is not joy or sorrow, but divine idea and a profound obedience which can find their full outward expression not in joy, not in sorrow, but in a mysterious and inseparable mingling of the two.—Phillips Brooks.

"I fell into the habit years ago," says Horace Bushnell, "of talking with God, and it becomes so natural that all my open spaces that I do it without thought. I talk myself often to sleep at night and open the morning as if I were. It is not supplication or confession or adoration, but a friendly way of contemplation and personal intercourse."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Percy's Creek charge: "Our meeting here resulted in much good, we trust. There were several accessions, some genuine repentance and spiritual quickening. Rev. K. S. Enochs gave us ten good sermons."

Rev. John B. Kent, P. C., Bayou Chicot charge, Louisiana Conference, Oct. 22: "Closed a twelve days' meeting at this place last night, with 15 accessions on profession of faith, a number of reclamations and a general good work done in the church. We are indebted to Bro. A. W. Turner for four soul-stirring sermons, and to Bro. F. White, L. E., for one. Praise the Lord!"

Rev. N. B. Norwood, P. C., Daisy, La., Oct. 19: "I just closed a most wonderful revival meeting at Wesley, Lower Coast Mission. Bro. W. T. Currie, of Ponchatonla, began the meeting two weeks since, and preached a full salvation from sin as our Bible and standards teach it. Bro. Van Valkenburgh, of New Orleans, came to us the second week and did the same. Results: Some joined, saints were made happy, converted people; some 15 in number were sanctified; unconverted men brought into peace with God. The devil howled, but no one was afraid. Glory be to God!"

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rosedale, Miss., Oct. 22: "Rosedale and Beulah charge is doing well. Rev. L. M. Broyles did a good work here the first part of the year, but ill health forced him to leave in June. The 'Bishop' of the Greenville district ordered me here to round up the year's work. Congregations are good, the Sunday-school interest encouraging. Rosedale is a sober town. Some signs of improvement are visible. A large factory is soon to be erected by some Chicago men. Business men are stirring, and the church is early astir striving to do her work, that she may be found blameless."

Rev. I. W. Cooper, Senatobia, Miss., Oct. 22: "For six days I have been preaching for Dr. Cameron. The Holy Spirit has rested on preacher and people. Large audiences. Senatobia is one of the most refined and elegant communities in Mississippi. Gov Shands and Sister Blackburn are greatly missed; but the church is blessed with such brethren as Gill, Taylor, McDade, Hall, Russell, Slayton, and Clanton. There are many elect ladies in Senatobia. To spend a week with Dr. Cameron and his excellent family is an event filled with delightful memories. I am indebted to the good people for many courtesies."

Rev. R. M. Blooker, Lisbon, La., Oct 17: "Our Mt. Zion Camp Meeting has been reduced to a few tents and a small congregation except on Sunday, when it is about 600 people large. We have just closed out our annual meeting of this year. We had several conversions and five additions to the church, and a good revival within the church. Nearly all the people that attend this camp meeting are pious. We had with us Revs. R. S. Collier, J. D. Harper and J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E. They did good preaching and excellent work. This is certainly God's country. I have but little material to work on—but few people out of the church. Revivals in all North Louisiana have been very fine this year."

Rev. J. White Davis, Oakley and Vidalia circuit, Louisiana Conference, Oct. 20: "A most successful meeting was closed last night at Holly Grove. Results: 7 accessions and some powerful conversions. One conversion in particular, that of a lady, deserves notice. Hers was on the old style—conviction that agonized her very soul to cry aloud for mercy. When peace finally came, how great the change! No one doubted her conversion. Many now say they 'know there is such a thing as change of heart.' She did not believe in it, but now she does. Our presiding elder, Rev. H. O. White, preached Sunday morning, and stirred the people up. Rev. R. A. Davis, of Oak Ridge, La., came Monday night, remaining until the close. The five soul-stirring and convicting sermons which he preached will leave their impress upon the minds of those people for many days. Thursday we buried little Emma Starks, and that night her mother gave herself to God and the church. At every service the penitents flocked to the altar, and we did not have to stand and plead with them. There were 22 penitents at the altar when we closed. There has not been such a meeting in that country for years. On the entire work during the year we have had 26 accessions to the church, and baptized 17 infants. The Lord has been with us. Pray for us, brethren."

Rev. O. McDonald, P. E., Forest, Miss., Oct. 23: "We are now about through with our protracted meetings in the Brandon district. We will report at Conference large numbers of accessions this year. Three of the circuits—Carthage, Clarkesburg and Steen's Creek—will report about a hundred each. Our two camp grounds—Lake and Shiloh—are growing in interest every year. There is an advance in church building and parsonage improvement. We have licensed some preachers, and others will apply before we close the fourth round. Our meetings this year have nearly all been spiritual and successful. We are doing systematic and faithful work, and we think our church has a stronger hold on the masses of the people than ever before. We think our financial reports will be better than last year. We bless the Lord for peace and prosperity."

Rev. J. W. Ellison, Cato, Miss., Oct. 19: "The Shiloh Camp Meeting has just closed. I need not say it was a success. There was a good number of conversions. Four were baptized at the close of the meeting, over whom the church rejoiced greatly. In the immediate neighborhood there is scarcely to be found any person out of some church, even down to the children. The preaching was good and scriptural, nothing fanatical for religious cranks. The religion of the community is deep and abiding, as they have learned it. The Spirit of God abounded in brotherly love, Christian friendship and hospitality. It was, indeed, a feast of harvest. Moderate success has crowned our labors on the entire circuit. Seventeen in all received. Good meetings at all the churches save one. Many have looked upon the Bible as never before—as one inspired book, setting forth one religion. Fruit will be gathered some day."

Rev. John A. Miller, P. C., Ruston, La., Oct. 23: "The most gracious revival that ever visited the town of Ruston closed here last Friday at noon. Rev. M. M. Morphis, an evangelist in the Cumberland Presbyterian, of Texhacans, Texas, commenced the meeting on Oct. 6, and continued fourteen days, with most glorious results. All denominations came together and united in the meeting, heart and soul. The most perfect harmony marked the progress of the meeting. It was 'our meeting.' A stranger coming in could not have told who was Baptist, Presbyterian or Methodist. And such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit I never witnessed before, in a ministry of more than forty years. Bro. Morphis preached a pure gospel of peace and love. Old feuds were settled, the hatchet was hurled and the handle was hid out of reach; and such a handshaking in Christian love and friendship the people of Ruston never enjoyed before. Then sinners commenced flocking to Christ for life and salvation. Old men and ladies, young men and maidens, with the dear children, were together at the altar crying for mercy; then the voice of praise was heard from new-born souls. We had three services each day, and at every service there were bright, happy conversions. It was estimated that the number reached over 200 of those converted and reclaimed. There were 92 accessions to the various churches. Of that number the Methodist Church received 47, and some more to follow next Sunday. The precious leaven is still at work, and we are praying that the whole lump will be leavened. Family altars have been erected. The ladies and gentlemen will have a separate union prayer meeting once a week, distinct from the usual weekly prayer meetings. Bro. Morphis is a man of deep piety, possessed of an earnest, sanctified zeal, and full of faith and good works. He has power with God and man. He deals in no slang or vulgarisms. He studiously avoids getting between the pastors and their flock, but labors to draw them closer together. His work is not sensational or superficial. It is all laid in Christ's atonement, and is solid, genuine pure gold. God has greatly honored our dear brother to the great good of this town, and others in North Louisiana. God bless him."

FIELD NOTE.

For the past several days I have been assisting Bro. Randle in connection with my fourth Quarterly Conference at this place in protracted services, which had been begun a week earlier, and the result has been a great outpouring of the Divine Spirit. There have been sixty conversions to date, with a good prospect that this number will run into the hundreds. One young man, French-speaking, and of good education, has been called to preach, and there have been several sanctifications. Some of the most prominent people and hardest cases have become subjects of revival power, and the entire community is stirred. My last Quarterly Conference at Patterson was also protracted, with a number of conversions and sanctifications, Bro. E. T. Denson assisting after my departure.

REVIVALS AND OTHER NEWS.

On Aug. 9 the camp meeting at Bethel began. Dr. Weems, of the Vicksburg district; Revs. C. A. Powell, N. B. Young, N. J. Roberts, P. M. Brown, J. N. Tucker, R. S. Gale, K. S. Enochs and S. B. Beale, with Bro. Geo. D. Parker, a Centenary student, assisted the presiding elder and the preachers in charge, and for ten days we had a grand meeting. The attendance was large, the order fine, the interest deep and sustained throughout; and the results were about one hundred and twenty-five conversions, and much toning up of church life. A number of new tents have been built, and others have been planned; improvements are being made annually by the association, and the prospects are all encouraging. We have no gate fees, no debts, and no disturbances of order; but we have delightful meetings, many conversions and money in our treasury. Much of our success in soul-saving must unquestionably be attributed to the fact that the young people of the church are thoroughly organized for personal work, and from the beginning co-operate earnestly and actively with the preachers. Meetings of these young people for instruction in methods of work are held daily in the church, which stands on the camp ground. This is the third camp meeting held at Bethel on this plan. All have been eminently successful, and the last was the most successful. We do not feel that we need noted evangelists or other great names to draw. We have large audiences and large results without such shifts.

Rev. R. W. Tucker assisted me in a meeting at Woodville, beginning Sept. 30. Bro. Tucker left me at the close of the week, and on Monday following I had to go, on promise, to conduct a meeting at Jackson, La., for Rev. H. R. Singleton, who was sick. Nevertheless, the Woodville meeting went on conducted by the young people. Some dozen or more were converted.

The meeting in Jackson resulted in the conversion of many of the college boys and some others—possibly forty in all.

I was delighted with the upward movement in Centenary College. I was there one year ago, and on both visits was much about the college; hence am prepared to say that the improvement in attendance and in hopefulness of the student body is very marked. I predict that January, 1896, will find two hundred boys at Centenary.

Prof. Monroe, my successor, did not reach us until one week before the opening of his college; hence some of our former boarders had been persuaded away. Nevertheless he opened well, and has been gathering in more pupils ever since; and already the matriculation approximates that of last year. Edward McGehee College is on a good footing, and has indefinite possibilities of usefulness.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Woodville, Miss., Oct. 19, 1894

The subject of temperance should be more frequently presented in our Sunday-schools. The children should be made familiar with the evils of intemperance and the duty of abstinence. We are in danger of thinking that our children do not need to be warned against liquor. The influence of parental habits is deemed enough to protect our children. And yet the children of many Christian parents have become tipplers. When boys grow up and mingle with irreligious companions of respectable social standing, they too often think it manly and independent to throw off the restraints of home. The views of father and mother are deemed old fogy notions, inconsistent with modern liberality. And so they drift down the slippery paths of folly. Would it not save such boys from the influence of evil companions if they had more intelligent convictions of right and wrong in these matters? No one has ever suffered in body or mind by abstaining from liquor. Thousands have been ruined by not abstaining.

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends as a blood purifier and tonic medicine, especially to comrades in the G. A. R.

Seeing the testimony of others as to the efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla in like cases, I concluded to give this medicine a trial, and the result was a thorough cure, no sign of the complaint making its appearance since. I have no hesitation in recommending Ayer's Sarsaparilla for any kind of skin disease."—J. W. DEAN, Moss Point, Miss.

We know of no addresses more suited to the religious spirit of the time than those of the thoughtful author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." He takes his stand on a very broad basis and expounds, earnestly yet logically, the great truths of religion.

Bro. Hailey Again.

Rev. O. L. Hailey desires us to say that the statement about Bishop Galloway, referred to in our last issue, was not published originally in a Baptist paper, but was copied from some other paper in a Baptist paper. He also wishes the readers of the ADVOCATE to know that his articles which we declined to publish will appear in the Baptist Record. This will, of course, be a great surprise to our readers (?).

He thinks we are a very naughty boy because we did not keep our promise to publish his articles. Well, we have an idea that it is better to break a bad promise than to keep it. Wouldn't it have been better for Herod to break his promise than to cut off John's head? Like Herod, we made a silly promise, not knowing all that it implied. SELAH!

Infidel Tactics.

In this age, when infidelity is exhausting its marvelous ingenuity in seeking for points of attack upon Christianity, there is one point which it studiously avoids, viz.: the ethical standard of Christianity. However much men may ridicule some of the doctrines of Christianity, the righteousness of its precepts is rarely questioned. Take the Christian standard as presented in the New Testament, and especially in the Sermon on the Mount and in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, and as exemplified in the life of Jesus of Nazareth, and compare it with the ethical code of any other form of religion or any system of philosophy the world ever saw, and every sane mind is bound to admit its infinite superiority to them all. All the social disorders that afflict humanity are in palpable contravention of its principles, while, on the other hand, it sanctions and encourages every virtue that can adorn human character. Universal obedience to the precepts of Christianity would unquestionably bring about a state of society such as the world has never seen—a state of heavenly blessedness and purity.

A Riot in the Crescent City.

On Friday, Oct. 26, the screwmen of this city went on a strike. The cause of the strike was this: It has been a custom here for some years for white and colored screwmen to work separately, i. e.—certain employers employ only whites, while others employ only colored screwmen. Last week, however, one contractor who has heretofore employed only white men employed several negroes. He did this, not of choice, but from dire necessity. He preferred white men, but after persistent effort failed to secure the requisite number. He needed two hundred and fifty, and could obtain only one hundred and forty. There were several large foreign ships lying at the wharf, depending upon him to load them with cotton. Failing to secure the requisite supply of labor, he was doing a losing business every hour in the day. Under these circumstances he deemed it his privilege to procure labor regardless of race. This caused the strike. Not only the white screwmen in his employ, but all the white screwmen in the city, at once quit work. On Friday night a number of screwmen—probably a hundred or two—went to the wharf where the ships were lying that had employed colored screwmen, and after capturing about half a dozen Boylan police, went aboard the ships and threw overboard all the screwmen's tools that could be found, the entire value of the tools being estimated at more than four thousand dollars. Next morning the stevedores having the contract for loading these ships made arrangements to go on with their work, having first appealed to the city authorities for protection. Work was to be resumed at 1 o'clock P. M. When the hour came only a few colored screwmen were on hand, a great many being too much intimidated by the events of the previous night to put in an appearance. Before work had begun an armed mob rushed upon the would-be industrious colored men, howling, yelling, cursing and shooting in every direction. The poor negroes, frightened almost out of their wits, fled in every direction. Quite a number were wounded. One honest, industrious colored man, who has been sufficiently industrious and economical to procure a home of his own, and who enjoys the respect of all who know him, after being wounded jumped into the river, and is supposed to have been drowned, as he has not been heard of since. Many others escaped the bullets of the would-be assassins by throwing themselves into the river, whence they emerged after the riot was over. The rioting went on for fully two hours. First one ship and then another was boarded, and all the screwmen's tools that had not been destroyed the night before, or that had been since procured, were hurled overboard. Where was the special detail of police all this time? Standing on the wharf with folded arms, viewing the scene as complacently as if it had been a Sunday-school picnic. Not only is this true of the half-dozen or more policemen who were present at the beginning of the riot, but also of a number of others who were dispatched thither in charge of an officer after the mob had commenced its work.

What is going to be done with the rioters and the recreant policemen? Will they be punished? It is possible that a few indictments may be found against the ring-leaders of the mob, but that any adequate punishment will be meted out to them is not believed by many who are familiar with the doings of Crescent City courts. It is but just to say that the Screwmen's Association, as a body, has denounced the riot in strong terms. The strike has been ended by going back to first principles, i. e.—white and colored men are not to be employed by the same contractor.

"The Land of the Free."

The police of Washington and Chicago have recently made some appalling discoveries concerning the doings and the purposes of the anarchists. The assassination of the President of the French Republic, last Summer, was only a small part of the anarchist programme which had been definitely agreed upon at a meeting held in Geneva, Switzerland, about the middle of June. Simultaneously with the assassination of Carnot, or as nearly so as possible, dynamite was to exert its unspeakable capacities for the spread of desolation and death in our own national capital. A number of the government buildings at Washington (precisely how many is not known) were to be blown up. Of course, the Capitol was included; and, of course, the fiends to whom the task was committed would, if possible, have got in their work at an hour when Congress was in session, so as to make the havoc as great as possible. The plot failed partly though the timidity of the agent selected to do the fiendish work, and partly on account of the plot having in some way reached the ears of the Washington police. A foreign ambassador resident in Washington was especially designated for destruction.

It makes one shudder to think of such diabolical plots being rife in our midst. But the worst of the story remains to be told. The authorities at Washington have just received official notification from the French government that seventy immigrants, known to be anarchists, are on their way to this country. One of these days, after a tragedy has been enacted which shall appall the world by its enormity and its magnitude, the citizens of this "glorious land of liberty" will realize the necessity of repressing anarchy with an iron hand. For a time yet we will wait for it to commit some overt act before we deal with it. If it wishes to propagate itself by pen and tongue, that is all right. This is a free country.

An Egregious Error.

"The art of distillation was not brought into Europe before the eleventh or twelfth centuries, and, therefore, the ancients had no liquor stronger than wine. . . . Thus it will be seen that the people of antiquity had no means of destroying their nervous systems with alcoholic liquors and narcotics. Coming forward to the middle ages, alcohol was only a substance known to the alchemists, and did not come to be a beverage in common use for centuries afterwards."—New Orleans Picayune.

This is a very remarkable statement to come from a paper of the standing of our esteemed contemporary, the Picayune. Does the able editor of that journal really expect anybody outside of a lunatic asylum to believe that there is no alcohol in vinous and malt liquors?—and that there was no such thing as drunkenness in the world until the discovery of the process of distillation a few centuries ago? The merest tyro in history knows that England, France and Germany were most grievously afflicted with drunkenness long anterior to the manufacture of distilled liquors; and everyone who has even the slightest familiarity with ancient history knows that this is true of all the great historic nations of antiquity, as well as of many wild, nomadic tribes. Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece and Rome were all cursed with intemperance, and all the hideous brood of woes that follow in its train long before distilled liquors were in existence. And in France, Switzerland, and other countries where wine is now cheap and plentiful, intemperance prevails to an extent that is appalling. Editors are allowed very large latitude, but they should not presume too much upon the ignorance of their readers.

A Pointer.

A few years since Christopho Russo, an Italian residing in this city, renounced Catholicism and united with the Presbyterian Church. He soon afterwards felt constrained to preach the gospel of Christ to his own countrymen resident in Louisiana. For a little more than two years he has been exercising his ministry as a licentiate in different localities in South Louisiana. For the past four or five months he has been operating in the city and has organized a church of about twenty-five members. On Friday night, Oct. 26, he was ordained, the ordination service being participated in by all the Presbyterian clergy of the city. He preaches in Italian.

We call attention to this, not merely as a matter of church news, but chiefly to say that here is a finger-board pointing out the one method by which, in our judgment, South Louisiana can be redeemed from the withering blight of Romanism. South Louisiana needs the gospel as badly as Mexico or Brazil; but English-speaking men can not do the work. The man who reaches and saves these South Louisiana Catholics must use their mother-tongue—French, Italian, or whatever it may be. An educated, consecrated young man, who has the tact which a successful missionary must have, can find a field white unto the harvest almost anywhere in South Louisiana, provided he can speak French. Without a knowledge of the French language, however, he is foredoomed to failure so far as Romanists are concerned. We have men laboring with considerable success among the Protestant, English-speaking people in different parts of South Louisiana; but there are large sections where these form a very insignificant part of the population. We unite with Bros. Parker, Davies, and others, in inviting the attention of our general Mission Board to this region as a mission field. We barely refer to the matter here. We expect to have much to say on the subject hereafter.

THEOLOGY OF PRAYER AS VIEWED IN THE RELIGION OF NATURE AND IN THE SYSTEM OF GRACE. By B. M. Palmer, D.D., LL.D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La. Richmond, Va.: Presbyterian Committee of Publication. 1894.

We can not better state the scope of this work than in the language of the author: "This little volume does not profess to be an exhaustive discussion of a subject which has so many sides, as this of prayer. Our religious literature abounds in treatises which present its practical aspect. But so far as known to the author, there is no book which collects and refutes the various objections urged by different classes of skeptics. Nor is there to be found anywhere a full articulation of prayer in the system of grace. Scattered hints could be gathered here and there, but chiefly stowed away in theological works not generally accessible to the ordinary reader, and not likely to be known except to the professional student. There seemed to be a gap here which ought to be filled, which is all that this essay attempts. . . . In the first part of this essay the subject of prayer has been treated on the plane of natural religion; the main design being to discuss the objections raised by skeptics against it as a universal duty. As these for the most part reject the authority of the Scriptures, it was necessary to meet the question on their own ground; and to show that the argument drawn from the constitution of nature itself, and especially from their own mental and moral organization, scatters these objections to the winds. In the second part the more grateful task has been to interweave prayer in the whole scheme of grace by showing its connection with every part of the office discharged by each person of the Godhead. The entire ground of natural and revealed religion has necessarily been covered, so far, at least, as this particular subject is involved."

From Dr. Palmer, the leading minister of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and one of the ablest of any denomination on the continent, much would naturally be expected on such a theme; and expectation is not disappointed. The work is worthy of the lofty theme and the distinguished author. Higher praise than this it would be difficult to bestow. The work is written, of course, from a Calvinistic standpoint; but the Calvinism appears only here and there, and is presented in such a way as not to be offensive to the most ultra Arminian. This book is worthy to be studied by all who aspire to become familiar with lofty thought upon the very highest themes. Its literary quality is superb. We have marked several passages for publication in our columns at some time not far in the future.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE. A Lecture. By H. L. Hastings, Editor of The Christian. Third million.

WILL THE OLD BOOK STAND? By H. L. Hastings. Third million.

The above-named works are 12-mo. pamphlets of from twenty-five to thirty pages each. The retail price is ten cents each with covers; five cents without covers. They belong to "The Anti-Infidel Library," a series the publication of which was commenced a number of years ago. The series now numbers about forty. The series has had an immense sale both in England and in America. Two of the series—"The Inspiration of the Bible," and "Will the Old Book Stand?"—have had a sale of three millions each—a thing unprecedented in the annals of literature of this class.

The highest encomiums have been bestowed upon this series by scores of men who occupy uppermost seats in the synagogue of Christian thought. Dr. A. T. Pierson says: "I do not know anything in the English tongue that meets the current skepticism as well as these." Similar commendations have been given by such men as Joseph Cook, Joseph Parker, Daniel Dorchester, G. F. Pentecost, Joseph Cummins, O. P. Gifford, E. F. Burr, Ira D. Sankey, Sir George Williams, Canon Wilberforce, and a host of others too numerous to mention. Our own examination of the series enables us to adopt as our own the language above quoted from Dr. Pierson. If there is in existence anywhere on earth a series of publications which meets skepticism on its own ground and routs it so completely, we do not know where to find it. And the series is published at a price which puts it within the reach of all. We heartily commend the series to pastors and others who are troubled by the presence of blatant free thinkers, or who wish to relieve the perplexities of honest doubters.

To aid in the circulation of these valuable books we have made arrangements to send them postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Those who prefer to do so can send direct to the publisher, H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

NOTES.

Nashville has organized a City Board of Church Extension.

A meeting is in progress in Ryan's Memorial Church with very encouraging prospects.

Homer, La., has voted out the liquor traffic. This makes Claiborne a dry parish, as no liquor has been sold in the parish except in Homer for some time.

The Tennessee Conference, at its recent session, passed a resolution disapproving the implied censure of our Bishops in a recent issue of the Epworth Era.

Let everybody be sure to read Bishop Keener's notice in this issue. Both the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences meet on Wednesday—not Thursday.

A serious collision occurred on the Southern Pacific railroad on Oct. 23. Two railroad employees were killed and others injured. Five carloads of cattle and horses were killed.

It is announced from Washington that large pension frauds have been discovered in New Orleans, whereby the government has lost between $100,000 and $150,000. Secrecy is observed for the present as to the names of the attorneys implicated.

We have received from Barbee & Smith a Commentary on the International Sunday-school Lessons for 1895, by Rev. E. E. Hoss, D. D. A notice will appear later. It is a handsomely bound book about the size of Peloubet's Notes, and retails at $1.

An epidemic of diphtheria of a most malignant type is raging in several towns in Southern Illinois and Northern Kentucky. The death rate is exceedingly high, as many as five having died in one family. Those who recover are usually left blind or paralyzed.

An Anti Option Convention, to be held at Vicksburg, on Nov. 20, will be no small affair. It will be attended by representatives from most, if not all, the Southern States and many of the Western States. Gov. Stone has invited all the governors of the Southern and Western States to attend.

Lawlessness prevails in Indian Territory to such an extent that it is thought that United States soldiers will be brought into requisition. It is said that Secretary Hoke Smith favors the establishment of a territorial government. Self-government on the part of the Indians, he thinks, has proved an utter failure.

A vigorous anti-saloon war is in progress in Ohio. The movement is headed by Rev. B. H. Russell, a Congregational minister, under whose leadership an organization called the Anti-Saloon League is being planted all over the State. It is announced that in Cleveland anti-saloon sermons were preached last Sabbath in seventy churches.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, of this city, in accordance with a suggestion made by the recent Convention at Nashville, has organized a training class for Christian workers. The class is to meet once each week. A lecture is to be delivered at each meeting by a physician and another by a minister. The physician is to give instruction in matters pertaining to hygiene and the prevention. The minister is to discuss matters pertaining to the spiritual side of mission work. The class was organized last Thursday. Lectures were delivered by Dr. Horace Beach, one of the leading physicians of the city, and by Rev. W. H. LaPrade. Several ministers and physicians have been engaged for future service. The movement begins under favorable auspices, and, it is thought, gives promise of large results.

The new Constitution which is to be voted on in New York soon has an anti-gambling clause. An anti-gambling organization has been founded which is making vigorous efforts through the press and otherwise to secure the adoption of this clause. A circular has been sent to every preacher in the State, asking his co-operation in the movement. From this circular we make the following extract:

Everyone knows of the poverty, wretchedness and misery that gambling, and especially gambling on horse races, has caused. Is not only numbers among its victims the poor clerk and mechanic, but thousands of women are likewise victims to this degrading vice. The moral questions involved outweigh all others, and, therefore, it is the part of every Christian minister whose life and teachings are devoted to the welfare of his fellow-beings, it becomes a duty as well as a labor of love to bring to the knowledge of every member of his congregation the true facts of this, the most enormous and far-reaching, as well as the most important of any question to be determined at the next election.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Rev. W. H. LaPrade has begun a revival meeting at Carondelet.

Rev. S. A. Steel has been transferred to the North Mississippi Conference.

Dr. Robert A. Young took a superannuated relation at the recent session of the Tennessee Conference.

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell held a meeting in Hammond recently which resulted in about thirty conversions.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of the Terry circuit, Mississippi Conference, has nearly doubled his membership during the three years of his pastorate.

Rev. D. Witt C. Browne will conduct a revival meeting at Dryades Street Church, commencing Sunday, Nov. 4. Evening services at half-past seven.

Rev. R. G. Waterhouse, D. D., president of Emory and Henry College, was married, on Oct. 10, to Miss Mary R. Carriger, of Morristown, Tenn., the ceremony being performed by Rev. R. N. Price.

Rev. C. B. Riddick, pastor of First Church, Memphis, will transfer to another Conference at the close of the present year. Commenting on this, the Alabama Advocate remarks, "Here is an open stall for another giraffe."

Mr. W. Nesbit, of Pennsylvania, who once resided in Liberia, and who has since kept well posted as to Liberian affairs, has published an article which is going the rounds of the periodical press protesting against the Liberian colonization scheme. He says: "To send colonists in any considerable number to Liberia is to send them to much misery and suffering. The only persons who will profit by the transaction are the gentlemen who will have the contract for carrying the emigrants to their new home." Probably he might have truthfully added, "and their paid agents."

Rev. James Campbell, editor of the Texas Advocate, has resigned in order to enter the pastorate. The vacancy has been filled by the election of Rev. T. B. Pierce. Dr. Campbell has filled the place for several years with great credit to himself and profit to the church. Bro. Pierce is a cultured, scholarly man; and if he writes as well as he preaches, he will be a valuable acquisition to the editorial fraternity. He is a nephew of Bishop Geo. F. Pierce. Owing to the general financial stringency, the assistant editorship has been abolished. This takes the spicy "Gulliver," alias J. W. Hill, from the tripod.

A pure food exhibition will be held in Washington Artillery Hall, in this city, commencing Dec. 17. Similar exhibitions have already be held in New York, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburg and many other cities, and have been largely attended. The object of these exhibitions is to enlighten the public as to the difference between pure and impure food, and enable them to detect the adulterations which are so abundant in various articles of diet. Lectures on the culinary art will be delivered by two ladies who are graduates of the cooking schools of Boston and New York.

Ministers expecting to visit Meridian during Conference will do well to hold up in their purchases in clerical-cut suits, as I have a fine line and at very low prices.

Ministers' Institute of Columbus District.

The Ministers' Institute of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, convened in Brooksville, Oct. 16, with only eight members present.

After organization the program was taken up, and the first topic for discussion was called—"Our Superannuated Preachers, Their Widows and Orphans: How Can We Provide More Adequately for Them?" Bro. K. A. Jones, who had had this subject assigned him, read a paper suggesting feasible plans for the accomplishment of this desired end. These suggestions will be furnished the ADVOCATE for publication by Bro. Jones. They will also be presented to the Annual Conference for consideration.

Other important papers and discussions followed, and all was done in a Christian spirit. One paper deserves especial mention—that on the subject: "What Is the Work Wrought within Us by the Holy Spirit Denominated Regeneration?" This paper was prepared by Bro. K. M. Harrison, and was thoughtful, original and strong. It called out some adverse opinions; but it was a helpful and an excellent paper. I would be glad to see it in the ADVOCATE.

There was a question box provided for the institute, and many interesting questions were presented for discussion and solution. The institute selected Artesia as the next place of meeting.

The Preachers' Institute of the Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, held its third session at Lawrence, Oct. 24, 1894. There were only a few of the preachers present, but the discussions were very interesting and, we trust, profitable to all who were present to hear. Hereafter we are to meet only once a year, and that in connection with the District Conference. The institute was organized in July, 1893. It promises to be a factor for good.

HOME CIRCLE.

"GOD'S GRAIN."

BY MARION HARLAND.

The page bears but a single line;
And yet the gentlest, truest friend
Who ever mingled tears with mine,
With her sweet hand the sentence penned
I soan in puzzle and in pain—
"Our Lord is gathering in his grain!"

Within my sight two graves were heaped,
But yesterday with cruel clods;
The sharp and sudden scythe that reaped
In my home-meadow—was it God's?
The blast that swept my lilied plain,
His way of gathering in his grain?

Man's reckoning is not thine, dear Lord!
From grapes unripe who wrings the wine?
With flowering corn whose barns are stored?
In Summer's prime we strip the vine;
In Autumn pile the mighty wain,
And garner fully-ripened grain.

"God's grain"—she wrote, and then—"His own;"
With tactful skill the truth is phrased,
His chosen seed, in weakness sown,
To be in strength immortal raised.
Who early sends, with latter rain,
Knows when to gather in his grain.

From frosts that blight; from droughts that draw
The very life-blood from the roots;
From canker-worm; from tempests raw
That bruise, then harden, tender shoots;
From earthly hap; from earthy stain—
In loving haste he saves his grain.

Thrice-blessed sheaves! with them he fills
His stately chambers, strong and fair;
The while the everlasting hills,
And boundless rich of sun-steeped air,
Thrill with the Harvest-Home refrain—
"Our Lord has gathered in his grain!"
—Independent.

Good and Bad Mothers.

The difference between good and bad mothers is so vast and so far-reaching that it is no exaggeration to say that the good mothers of this generation are building the homes of the next generation, and that the bad mothers are building the prisons. For out of families nations are made; and if the father be the head and the hands of a family, the mother is the heart. No office in the world is so honorable as hers, no priesthood so holy, no influence so sweet and strong and lasting. Unselfish love in the mother! cheerful obedience in the children!—in whatever home these forces are constantly operative, that home can not be a failure. And mother-love is not of the right kind, nor of the highest trend, unless it compels this obedience. The assertion that affectionate firmness and even wholesome chastisement is unnecessary with our advanced civilization is a specious and dangerous one. The children of to-day have as many rudimentary vices as they had in the days of the patriarchs; as a general thing they are self-willed and inclined to evil from their cradles; greedy without a blush, and ready to lie as soon as they discover the use of language. A good mother does not shut her eyes to these facts; she accepts her child as imperfect, and trains it with never-ceasing love and care for its highest duties. She does not call impudence "smartness," nor insubordination "high spirit," nor selfishness "knowing how to take care of itself," nor lying and dishonesty "sharpness."

She knows if the child is to be father to the man, what kind of a man such a child will make. How to manage young children; how to strengthen them physically; how best to awaken their intellect, engage their affections and win their confidence; how to make home the sweetest spot on earth, a place of love, order and repose, a temple of purity where innocence is respected, and where no one is permitted to talk of indecent subjects or to read indecent books; these are the duties of a good mother; and her position, if so filled, is one of dignity and grave importance. For it is on the hearthstone she gives the fine healthy initial touch to her sons and daughters that is not effaced through life, and that makes them blessed in their generation.

There is another duty, a very sacred one, which some mothers, however good in all other respects, either thoughtlessly or with mistaken ideas, delegate to others—the religious training of their children. No Sunday-school and no church can do it for them. The child that learns "Our Father" at its mother's knee; that hears from mother's lips the heroic and tender stories of the Bible, has a well-spring of religious faith in his soul that no after life, however hard and fast and destructive, can dry up. It is inconceivable, then, how a mother can permit any other woman to deprive her of an influence over her children nothing can destroy; of a memory in their lives so sweet, that when every other memory is withered and approaching decay, it will still be fresh and green; yes, even to the grave's mouth.—Mrs. A. E. Barr, in North American Review.

Mary and Martha.

One of the most pathetic thoughts about the lot of woman is that so much of her life consists of untabulated and unpraised duties—the continual recurrence of small tasks that need an infinite patience, but which win no immediate reward and serve no visible public end. There is many a woman who says with deep regret, "Would that I could be a Mary, and have leisure to sit quiet for a little while at the feet of Christ! Once I had time to think, and write, and grow, and I felt the joy of intellectual expansion; but now I am always tired, and my hands are never still, and my work is never done. For me the life of Mary would be an exquisite delight, but mine is the trivial round, the common task, and where there are many mouths to be fed, and many garments to be mended, life is too continuously laborious for more than a snatched moment of Mary's quiet."

But even if all this be true, do not forget that you still have a soul that has its claims, and that all other claims perish before these. The work will be no worse done if you have sat at Jesus' feet in the early morning hours before it begins. Do not let the energy of your nature exhaust itself alone on practical affairs. The day will come, perhaps, when your children will need a teacher and a prophetess as well as a mother, and if you can not then be what they need, they will seek elsewhere for the guidance of the soul which it is your supreme privilege to afford. And even if you can not be all you would like in this respect, you can at least learn not to be jealous of the Mary whose life is not as yours. The world can not thrive without both the energy of Martha and the spiritual force of Mary, and it is possible for the true woman to unite both gifts, and, being diligent in business, still to know how to be fervent in spirit and devout in soul. Contemplation is the true spring of all and every labor. It is possible to unite the spiritual life of Mary with the practical diligence of Martha, as many a woman has proved; and Hartley Coleridge gives us the best exposition of this story when he writes:

"Be Martha still in deed and good endeavor
In faith like Mary at his feet forever."

Blessed Be Taffy.

The editor of the Independent comes to the defense of "taffy" in this wise:

"Blessed be taffy! It is wanted every day from everybody. It is the universal sweetness of social and domestic life.

"Husband, have you come home and do you find your wife tired and hot with the day's work in chamber and kitchen? Give her a little taffy. Say a sweet thing to her. Praise her for something. Tell her how nice the bread is, so much better than the baker's; that the catchup is the best she ever made; that the house looked so sweet and restful when you came in; that she has the dearest children that ever lived; and at your leisure, before going to bed, tell her she is your own heart's treasure. It will do her good; it will make the smiles come. She may box your ears when you say sweet, petting things, and tell you, you were talking as you would to the cat; but she will like it just the same.

"Wife, does your husband come home weary and burdened, exhausted and—no, not cross, but undemonstrative and silent? Go up to him with a sweet welcome. Say something pretty to him. Men all love to be appreciated and flattered. Give him the sugar stick. Tell him some pretty thing somebody said about him. Tell him how much you admire what he has done; and when you can sit down alone with him, take his hand and pet him and tell him you love him more than tongue can tell. Don't be afraid of overdoing it and using comical little exaggerations. He may know, and you may know that there is taffy in it; but it is very nice taffy. We all like it; we all like to be told we are loved, and the saying it makes it all the truer. It is a great deal better to cultivate one's love with warm expressions than to blight it with frost. Pretty nothings? Why, they are big realities, the stuff happiness feeds on. Give us more taffy."

Keep a Clean Mouth.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved, when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept this resolution, and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. Of course we can not think of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We can not imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart," the "next thing to swearing," and yet "not so wicked;" but it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young readers, keep your mouths free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this ask Jesus to cleanse your heart, and keep it clean, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—The Christian.

"The man who eats hurriedly just before or after a public speech or any great excitement, risks suicide or an immediate collapse." This was to explain his abstinence. He added: "Foes within and foes without attack our vitality. As Webster said to Hayne, so I have been accustomed to say to young men, 'I commend you to a prudent husbandry of your resources.'"
—O. W. Holmes.

Three Leading Scientists

Proclaim the Superior Value of

Dr. Price's Baking Powder.

Scientists are devoting closer attention to food products. Recent examinations of baking powders by Prof. Long, Dr. Haynes, and Prof. Prescott, were made to determine which powder was the purest, highest in leavening strength, most efficient in service, and most economical in cost. They decide that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder excels in all the essentials of an ideal preparation for household use. They write:—

"Chicago, March 28th, 1894.

We have purchased in the open market cans of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and also of the other leading brands of baking powders, and have submitted them to chemical analysis. We find that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder, that it has a considerably greater leavening strength than any of the other baking powders we have ever tested.

HYGIENE.

To Prevent Consumption.

Remember that it is an infectious disease, communicated principally by the matter coughed up and spit out. The patient should spit in a cup or wide mouthed bottle, containing a little carbolic acid and water, and frequently washed with hot water. Use carbolic acid and water in commode. Never spit on the street, or floor of house, or cars. Sleep alone, and, if possible, in an airy and sunny room. Have separate bed and table linen. These should be boiled before washing. Use individual table utensils, washed separately. Wash the mouth twice daily with soda and water. Do not kiss anyone.

Those who are well should remember that it is an infectious disease, communicated principally by swallowing the germs, by inhaling them, or having them introduced through a wound. Therefore, do not buy or use food that has been handled by a consumptive. Do not share the food or drink of a consumptive. Do not sleep with a consumptive. Do not put coins or small articles in your mouth that may have been handled by a consumptive. Do not use clothing until it is thoroughly disinfected, if it has been used by a consumptive. Do not kiss anyone on the lips if they have a cough. Do not take food without first washing your hands.—Medical Record.

At the late session of the Sanitary Institute in Liverpool several physicians dwelt upon the frightful evils which attend overcrowded houses and rooms in the cities. One speaker, Dr. Longstaff, declared that a constant supply of fresh air was of more importance even than proper drainage, since zymotic diseases of all sorts—including all epidemic, and contagious, and germ-engendered maladies, such as diphtheria, small-pox, scarlet fever and the like—occasioned but one-sixth of all the deaths in England and Wales, while diseases of the lungs alone were the cause of one-fourth of the total deaths in those countries. His urgent plea was for more windows and better ventilation.

Health Notes.

Most people are raised to regard fruit as a luxury which only the rich can enjoy. Were this true, the physician and drug bills saved; the stomach the crowding with drugs; the body the pains attendant upon disease; the mind the lack of vigor which a weak body produces, fruit as a luxury would be cheap. However, it is far less expensive than meat, which most people consider a necessity, and far more nutritious and healthful. Grapes are wholesome, so are apples. Tomatoes regulate the liver. Oranges act directly on the kidneys.

Fruit not only acts as a scavenger for the system, but strengthens the nerves, purifies the blood and is the system's filterer.

Try some kind of fruit the first thing each morning for a month, and see how much better you will feel.—Exchange.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

STUFFED BEEF.—Boil a neck piece of beef until so tender that the bones will slip out; then press the lean meat closely together, shaping nicely with the hands. Over the top spread a thick dressing of crumbs, seasoned with butter, pepper, salt and sage; place in the dripping pan with the beef pot liquor. Bake until brown, basting frequently. When cold, cut in slices.

CORN MUFFINS.—Take the yolks of two eggs, beat well and stir in gradually two level tablespoonfuls of sugar. Pour in one and a half teaspoonfuls of sweet milk, and a level teaspoonful of salt, a teacupful of cornmeal—yellow or white—two teacupfuls of sifted flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls of good baking powder, and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Bake in gem pans.

BROILING.—The true definition of broiling is the sudden searing and browning of the surface of food; and a steak, chop, or other article of food, to be perfectly broiled must have its surface instantly seared or cooked. This instantaneous searing or surface cooking coagulates or hardens the albumen, thus forming a coating which shuts in the juices of the article being broiled.

SAVE DOCTOR'S BILLS

by paying attention to properly regulating the bowels thereby preventing a thousand and one derangements of the system which follow neglect of this precaution. Once used for this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are always in favor. They're purely vegetable and far better, as a liver pill, than blue pills or calomel. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular—not to constipate.

Miss MARY ANGUISH, of Glen Easton, Marshall Co., W. Va., writes: "Two years ago I was pale and emaciated, food fermented in my stomach. A physician pronounced my case 'Catarrh of the Stomach,' but he could not help me. I lived a month without solid food and when I tried to eat I would vomit. At this time I began taking Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and in two weeks I was decidedly better. I am now in good health, and never felt better in my life. I have a better color, eat more, and have no distress after eating—having gained thirteen pounds since I began taking them.

REV. WAYLAND JOHNSON
SAYS OF CEREBRINE,
THE EXTRACT OF THE BRAIN OF THE OX, PREPARED UNDER THE FORMULA OF
Dr. WM. A. HAMMOND:

"I have been using Cerebrine two weeks, and "I am glad to report the most excellent results. "I was in a state of nervous prostration that ut"terly unfitted me for any continued mental "work. From the first dose I experienced a re"newed intellectual grasp and power and clear"ness and joy in mental work that I had not "known for years. Besides this, I am conscious "of an increase in muscular strength and endur"ance that surprises me. At first I was inclined "to suspect that these results were due to strong "stimulating properties in the Animal Extracts, "but as I studied their effects I found that they "were not only permanent, but were of an en"tirely different character from those produced "by a stimulant. Under the influence of an ordi"nary stimulant I felt a highly exalted state of "body and mind, but the activity was feverish "and eccentric, while the effect of the Cerebrine "is to give a sense of cool, satisfied, self-con"trolled mental and physical energy.

Sincerely yours, WAYLAND JOHNSON,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

OBITUARIES.

BROWN—Rev. J. G. W Brown was born in Henderson county, Tenn., Sept. 1, 1833; moved to Mississippi in his early childhood, where he spent the remainder of his life. In 1849 he was converted at Pleasant Ridge Church (now in Union county), and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian, of which he was a consistent member for fifteen years. In 1859 he was divinely called to the work of the ministry, and at once began to prepare for this great work. He was admitted into the Presbytery and began the actual work of the ministry in 1861 During the year 1865 he joined the M. E. Church, South, where he continued faithful as a preacher until disabled by affliction. On Nov. 30, 1873, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Robert Paine at Grenada, Miss., and on Dec. 3 1877, he was ordained elder by Bishop J. C. Keener at Holly Springs, Miss. He entered the late war in 1861, and remained until its close. In 1865 he was happily married to Miss S. A. Taylors. On Jan 23, 1894, he died quietly and peacefully at his home in Tippah county. His remains were interred in the Lebanon Cemetery, Jan 24, 1894. On July 29 the Free Masons held for him a lodge of sorrow, and his funeral was preached to a vast congregation by "Uncle Joe" Wells.

For twelve years he was an invalid and an intense sufferer from paralysis, yet through it all his mind was clear, his faith strong and his peace perfect. Amidst his most excruciating suffering he would thank God that he was counted worthy to suffer such affliction. Though his tongue by paralysis, could not be heard from the pulpit, he was fond of quoting, in a faltering way, the precious promises of God; and the old, precious song, "Amazing grace," and "How firm a foundation," etc., were his favorites, and the writer, in his pastoral visits, was always asked to sing them for him.

May the bereaved widow and seven children find comfort in the promises of God of a reunion of the finally faithful! J. E. BUCK.

WATSON—ADALINE, wife of F. A. Watson, and daughter of P. Marsaills, was born in Mississippi, Jan. 10, 1865, and died Oct. 1, 1894.

She was converted and joined the church when thirteen years of age, and ever afterward lived an exemplary life. She expressed herself as being ready when the summons came, notwithstanding its suddenness. She, with her husband, has lived near the old Tulip Church (of which she was a charter member), where they dispensed a generous hospitality, never turning a stranger, no matter how humble, from their door. Many a wearied minister of the grace of God has feasted upon the fat of the land at their board. She never appeared happier than when administering to the happiness of others. I have never known a more unselfish nature than hers. She literally lived for others.

She was a quiet, modest woman; but her Christian character was such that none could doubt her love to God and his cause. She trained her children for God, and all of them who have arrived at years of discretion are numbered with the people of God. Her death has cast a shadow over the entire community, and many who read this notice will drop a tear in memory of her.

She leaves a husband and twelve children, who have the hearty sympathy of all, and our earnest prayers for the sustaining grace of God upon them. J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

EVANS—Mrs. CORA A. EVANS (nee Abney) was born Sept. 4, 1868; was united in marriage with Mr. Thos M. Evans, Dec 17, 1891, and departed this life at the residence of Dr. Wm. F. Beall, in Moss Point, Miss., Sept. 16, 1894, in perfect peace.

Sister Cora joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and lived a consistent Christian life until her death. Being our privilege to be intimately associated with her for eight or ten months—the family living in the house with my family for that length of time—I can truthfully say I have rarely met with such a meek, quiet, devoted Christian spirit. Though not demonstrative, her Christian influence was felt by all associated with her. It may truly be said of her, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God;" and, oh! what beauties burst upon her spiritual vision that bright Sabbath morning as she entered into the celestial world! When the summons of her Master came, she met it with the same childlike submission and confidence which characterized her life.

She leaves a devoted husband, a sweet little boy two years old, and a host of friends to mourn her loss. We offer our most sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband, and most earnest prayer for God's blessing upon the little boy.

Loved ones, grieve not as those who have no hope. She is not dead, but has only gone before. WM. F. BEALL.

FELDER—RUFUS K. FELDER was born in Pike county, Miss., April 23, 1820; joined the M. E Church, South, in 1845, and died July 30, 1891. He was married to Miss Sarah Singletary, Dec. 8, 1855. The second night after his marriage he erected a family altar, and from that time on he never failed to have family worship as long as he was able to do so. During his last illness he would have his eldest son, Newton, to read for him. His eldest son said of him: "I have never heard him say a word or do an act that would reflect on the Christian character of anyone." He was one of the purest men I ever knew. He was a farmer, and was until recently a very successful one. He was thoroughly honest. He enjoyed the friendship and good-will of his neighbors. He loved God and loved his church, and was always in his place at service when able to get there. Religion to him was a joy, not a burden. He gave liberally of his means to the support of his church, and rejoiced in its prosperity and grieved at its failures. He longed to live to see the new church in his community completed, and to worship God in it, but was called hence before it was finished.

He leaves an affectionate wife and six children. May they meet him in the glory world!
W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

HUNT—DAVID KING HUNT was born in Catahoula parish, La., March 18, 1842; married Miss Carissa E. Lanius, Dec. 20, 1871; joined the M. E. Church, South, Aug. 1, 1881, and died in Vidalia, La., Oct. 2, 1894. The recorded history of the church here says: "He was supposed to be the first white man to join any church by profession of faith in Vidalia."

He held the universal love and respect of all the people, not only as a citizen, but as a Christian. He was devoted and true to his family, his friends, his church and his God. Being afflicted all his life, he was a great sufferer, but all was borne with Christian fortitude and patience; so when death came he was found ready and waiting. Gentleness, kindness, patience, love and truth were traits foremost in his character. He left a legacy worth more than gold—a good name and unsullied character. He was the pillar in our church here. A prince in Israel has fallen, and none to take his place. The Lord knows best. May his death be sanctified by the Lord to the good of the church in Vidalia! J. WHITE DAVIS.

MCQUEEN.—The members of the W. M. S. were much grieved when they knew that their friend and co-worker, Mrs. MARY MCQUEEN, had been called to enter into "the joy of her Lord." She passed away, not in the glow of womanhood's ardor, but in the maturity of ripened age and rich experience, having blessed the world while she lived in it, and having enjoyed the fulfillment of the promise, "Thou shalt shine forth;" "Thou shalt be as the morning."

God's saints come to their crowns through great tribulations, and she was no exception to this general condition. Come what might, from first to last, no matter what her state, the vital spark of all her being was, "Trust in God."

The W. F. M. S., realizing its loss, like the Psalmist of old, each is constrained to say, "I open not my mouth, because thou didst it." Yet we would not be true to ourselves, to our sainted sister, or the bereaved family, did we not give some expression to the feelings called forth by the sad loss of our beloved sister; therefore we offer the following resolutions:

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to remove from the sorrows and sufferings of earth our beloved sister and co worker, Mrs. Mary McQueen, her long, faithful, zealous and untiring devotion in the missionary work demand from us such recognition of her noble life, character and work among us, and with us, and is right and proper, and eminently due her worth and memory.

Resolved, That while we deplore the death of our bereaved sister we recognize God's hand in it and bow submissively to his will.

Resolved, That in the death of our sister the society has lost one of its most devoted, zealous and consistent Christian members.

Resolved, That the society hereby extend to the bereaved daughters, sons and grandchildren our Christian sympathy, praying God that the consolations of his grace may abound to them in this season of sorrow, and that they may realize in their hearts that their loved one is "not lost, but gone before."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy spread upon the minutes of this society. MRS. J. C. CAVETT,
For committee.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper

Hath any wronged thee? Be bravely revenged. Slight it, and the work's begun; forgive it, and 'tis finished. He is below himself that is not above an injury.—Enchiridion.

I. A. C. Hafferdinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles held two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Let the ground of all thy religious actions be obedience. Examine not why it is commanded, but observe it because it is commanded. True obedience neither procrastinates nor questions.—Quarles.

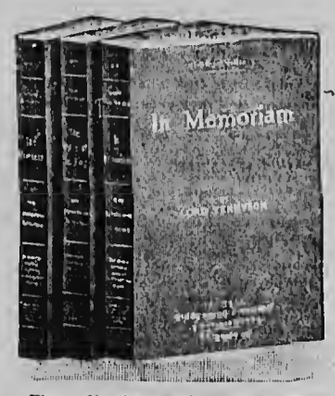
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,
IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS.



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the artmotive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January, '96. This offer not available to those who have had the benefit of other premium offers. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Rev. Dr. Talmage sailed for New York from Liverpool on Saturday last.

A meeting of the Business League of this city, in the interest of clean streets, was held on Oct. 27.

A shed and eight freight cars of the L. and N. railroad, in this city, were destroyed by fire on Oct. 29. Loss, $20,000.

There appears to be a very good prospect that within a very short time a large battalion of naval reserve militia will be organized in this city.

The small-pox is in Washington City, and when the infection was announced, last week, many left the city. Patients are removed to the pest house in the suburbs.

A boarding-house was blown to atoms at Laurel Run, Pa., on Oct. 28. Dynamite was used. Three Hungarians were killed and several seriously wounded.

The coal chutes, warehouse and wharf of the Export Coal Company, in Pensacola, Fla., were destroyed by fire on Oct. 27. The loss is estimated at $125 000; no insurance.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland has consented to christen the steamship "St. Louis" at Cramp's shipyard, Philadelphia. She will be assisted by the daughter of the president of the Merchants' Exchange, St. Louis.

The strike of the cotton screwmen was brought to a close on Oct. 27. The terms of the arrangement under which the screwmen consented to resume work are that the conditions which existed before the strike commenced shall be resumed.

The Semi-Annual Conference of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church opened in Middletown, Conn., Oct. 25, with twelve of the sixteen Bishops present. Bishop Thoburn, it is believed, is on his way to Washington. Bishop Taylor is in Africa, and Bishop Ninde in China. Bishop Foster is expected later.

Papers have been filed in the secretary of State's office, at Trenton, N. J., which indicates the formation of a new whisky trust. The papers comprise the articles of incorporation of a concern known as the Great White Spirit Company, with a paid up capital of $5 000,000, the total authorized capital being limited by the charter to $50,000,000.

The sympathizers of the striking (white) screwmen, of this city, on Oct. 26, at night, captured the policemen on guard and forced them to stand idly by while they boarded the ships on which the negro screwmen were working. Six ships were boarded in a four-hours' raid, and all the negroes' screws were thrown overboard. About $4,000 worth of property was thus destroyed. On Oct. 27 an armed mob attacked the ships on which the colored screwmen were employed, and compelled them to leave their positions—some of the negroes jumping overboard. After firing upon them, their tools and clothing were thrown overboard. About five men were shot in the riot. It is said the police looked on the scene and seemed to enjoy it. The Screwmen's Association disclaim any connection with the riots, and have repudiated them.

There was more trouble on the levee of this city on Oct. 29. White longshoremen followed the lead of the screwmen, and refused to work with negroes. The white screwmen at work left it and began firing whenever the negroes would congregate on the wharf. The merchants have invited Gov. Foster and District Attorney Earhart to a conference in order to settle matters. Mayor Fitzpatrick has said that everything was quite; "that rumors and reports were circulated which caused great excitement, but, when investigated, are found to have no foundation in truth."

FOREIGN.

It is said that the condition of the Czar remains unchanged.

China is said to be negotiating in London for a loan of £1,600,000.

An explosion took place on a French cruiser at Brest. Six men were killed and twenty others were scalded.

The Japanese army won a victory, on Oct. 25, at Hoos-An, near Kin Len Ching, the opposing Chinese army being routed and scattered.

Three thousand houses have been destroyed by a succession of violent earthquake shocks in Japan. As far as known 250 lives have been lost and a large number of people have been injured.

The police have seized a number of nihilist proclamations which have been secretly circulated, and have arrested a number of young men on the charge of distributing them in various quarters of St. Petersburg.

Dr. Behring's new cure for diphtheria has been received with the greatest confidence in Germany, and at Berlin a committee has been formed to raise a fund for furnishing the cure to victims of the dread disease in that city.

Emperor William has conferred upon Gen. Von Caprivi the order of the Black Eagle, set with brilliants, and His Majesty has bestowed upon Count Botho Eulenburg the cross and star of grand commander of the Hohenzollern Order.

The Cabinet crisis in Germany, caused by the resignations of Count Von Caprivi from the chancellorship of the German Empire, and Count Botho Zu Eulenberg, from the presidency of the Prussian ministry, have been already settled. Emperor William having appointed Prince Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst to both the vacant offices, having decided to reunite the chancellorship and Prussian premiership.

THE LORD OUR STRENGTH.

(Ps. xlvi, 1; Isa. xxvi, 4—xxvii, 5; II. Cor. xii, 9.)

God! Our name of deity is derived from "good." God is the quintessence of goodness. In him we live, move and have our being. He is everything to us. Our text indicates a few relations which God's children sustain to him.

1. He is our refuge.

(1) From a guilty conscience. "A guilty conscience who can bear?" A fearful tyrant. He dismays, terrorizes, crushes. But, behold: "God is greater than our heart."

(2) From the broken law. Ten fingers, like poisonous daggers, point to us while we listen to the assertion: "Thou art the man!" But, lo! though the law worketh wrath, we are saved by faith through grace.

(3) From the onsets of Satan. Goeth about like a roaring lion. He never ventures near the cross of Christ. There is safety.

2. He is our strength.

(1) In the agony of repentance. When crushed, distressed beyond measure, when despair threatens to throw its serpentine arms around us, the Lord rehabilitates by assurance of mercy.

(2) In our effort to lead a holy life. Who is sufficient for these things? When we, like Enoch, walk with God, he renews our strength. Now we can do all things through him who strengtheneth us.

(3) When the shades of death are creeping o'er us. Even in the dark valley and shadow of death his rod and staff comfort us.

3. A present help in trouble.

(1) Trouble—a large family. Trouble of soul and body. Spiritual and temporal. Individual, of family, church, city, country.

(2) In trouble the Lord is our help. Has declared: "Call on me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee."

(3) A present help in trouble. God is where we are. For thirty-eight years the impotent man had been lying near the pool of Bethesda without relief. But when the Master came he was made whole.

First-Class Men and Women in Demand.

"There are always good openings for live, energetic men and women of good character in our line of business, to devote all or part of their time to the work." That is what B. F. Johnson of the firm B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., says in reference to their advertisement.

Self-Pouring Tea-Pot.

We call attention to the Self-pouring Tea-pot advertised by the Asbury-Paine Co. The Self-pouring Pot looks like any other, and is made of various materials and patterns. Its peculiarity is that it stands all the while in its place on the tray and is neither lifted nor tipped.

The cover is made so it can slide up and down a few inches within the body of the pot, and has on its top a small knob of non-conducting material, with a small hole through the center. Take the knob by the thumb and second finger and lift the cover, close the small hole with the forefinger, then press down and the liquor is forced by pneumatic action through the spout into the cup. The spout is turned downward, always pointing to the bottom of the cup. The instant the fingers relax their downward pressure on the knob the flow stops. The pressure regulates the flow; there is neither slopping nor dripping.

A PERFECT SACRIFICE.

BY MADAM GUYON.

I place an offering at Thy shrine,
From taint and blemish clear;
Simple and pure in its design,
Of all that I hold dear.

I yield Thee back Thy gifts again,
Thy gifts which most I prize;
Desirous only to retain
The notice of Thine eyes.

But if, by Thine adored decree,
That blessing be denied,
Resigned, and unreluctant, see
My every wish subside.

Thy will in all things I approve;
Exalted or cast down,
Thy will in every state I love,
And even in Thy frown.

"The Mikado's Capital and Nikko the Beautiful."

BY BISHOP CHAS B GALLOWAY, D. D.

Tokio, the Mikado's capital, a city of many conflagrations and destructive earthquakes, the center of the Empire, where old and new Japan meet together, and which every patriotic Japanese hopes to see before he dies, is the commercial, industrial, and political metropolis of the country. It has a population of nearly 1,500,000, unusually wide streets, electric lights, tramways and stone bridges, and some very handsome public buildings. Long the headquarters of the Shoguns, Tokio is intimately associated with the most brilliant military history of this island kingdom. It is indebted to the Takugawa dynasty for its political and commercial distinction, and very appropriately all the fifteen great Shoguns except two, the first and third, are buried in the city, either in Shiba or Nyeno.

Our first day in the capital was the holy Sabbath, having arrived the night before at twelve o'clock from Nagoya. Though the rain descended, and near noon the floods came, we ventured out in closely-covered jinrikshas, with Dr. Wainright for a thoughtful conductor, both to worship and to see. We went out, not "for to see" old Buddhist and Shinto temples—reeds shaken by the wind—but to attend service in Christian churches, where the "ministry of axes" will sooner or later fell the ancient, but blighting, tree of Asiatic superstition. First we stopped at the Greek Cathedral, one of the most imposing buildings in all Japan. Built by Bishop Nicolai—who has been the most successful missionary in the country—it occupies a commanding position, and is really a gem of architecture. The service, attended by about 150 persons, was elaborate and very ritualistic, but to me rather impressive. The venerable Bishop and his ten or twelve native priests were clad in gorgeous vestments. They swung incense until the clouds were dense and the odors intense, while intoning prayers and chanting psalms to the congregation, which stood or sat or bowed on the floor. The large choir which responded occasionally—composed of ladies and gentlemen—made the best music I have heard since landing on these shores. Some of the very devout remained for quite awhile with their faces on the floor, and all seemed impressed with the pompous service. I learned much of Bishop Nicolai's work—unique, and in some respects unequaled. He has about twenty thousand members, and all these have been gathered with the aid of but one other foreign missionary. With a genius for leadership of the highest order, he has organized an army from among the people for the conquest of their own country. The native priests are trained under his own eye and sent to various points by his own command. While not accepting his doctrines, and having no toleration for his ritualistic flummery, no one can properly study the religious forces of Japan without taking this remarkable man and his great cathedral into account. The service is an improvement on the Roman Catholic, in that it is the vernacular of the people, and in the splendid building there are no images to worship. I regretted that opportunity was not given to have a short conference with the venerable prelate. Bishop Ninde told me that he called to see him, and found him a very interesting old gentleman.

Leaving the cathedral, we visited the Methodist Tabernacle, a large modern brick structure, built by Dr. Eby, of the Canadian Methodist Mission. The Doctor is now absent on sick leave in Canada, and the congregation is not so large as formerly. Instead of a sermon that morning, some good, orthodox brother was conducting a class meeting. Both the building and the service gave me a genuine Methodist home feeling, although I understood not the testimonies given, and only the tunes that were sung. Thank God we are a witnessing people, whether in America or in the isles of the sea; whether in the Queen's dominions or the Mikado's Empire.

In the evening we went first to a Presbyterian Church, hoping to hear Mr. Tamara, the gentleman who was deposed from the ministry at the recent Synod for writing a book of which mention has already been made in these letters. He was not present, however, and a small congregation was being addressed by some young novitiate. We quietly retired and went over to the M. E. Church, and heard a sermon by Mr. Hooda, president of the Anglo Japanese College; or rather Dr. Wainright heard a sermon, while his companions only heard a sound. We had minds, but we understood not. How helpless one feels in a land of strange speech! Nothing could more effectually arrest the tower of Babel than confusion of tongues. How confidingly you trust and how closely you cling to an interpreter! An illustration there may be here of the office work of the Holy Spirit, the great spiritual interpreter between the human heart and the throne of grace. He interprets "the deep things" of God to us, and translates our poor plaints into the language of heaven.

We visited the Imperial University, the Dai-gaku, founded in 1856, and already the educational pride of Japan. There are twenty schools in the university, embracing everything from law to veterinary medicine. The university is supported by tuition fees and grants from the Imperial Treasury. The government grant for 1893 was 365,162 yen (dollars); the college receipts were 118 309 yen. If this university, with its 1,500 students, were brought under Christian influence, the day of Japan's redemption would be near at hand. Though not positively Christian, it is the product of Western thought. Such an organization, and such a national spirit to sustain it, were not possible before Commodore Perry anchored his flagship in Yoke-hama Bay.

Near the university is the large Tokio library, with over 800,000 volumes. I noticed that the large and well-regulated reading rooms were crowded with quiet, eager students. Many young men, in their native dress and undress, looked very much like the coolies pulling our jinrikshas; but they had English, German and Japanese books on science, engineering, political economy, etc., in their hands, and were diligently making notes. Maybe some of these blowzy-headed fellows will yet be counselors of the Mikado, or historic names in the world's literature. These young Japanese are diligent and critical readers.

The National Museum—the Smithsonian Institution of Japan—contains a large and creditable collection, illustrating very strikingly the natural, national and industrial history of the Empire. Hours could be spent there to profit.

After tiffin and a short rest we went to Aoyama (Green Mountain), a beautiful suburb of Tokio, where is located the Anglo-Japanese College of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The grounds comprise twenty-five acres, and are quite elevated—overlooking the city and the sea for a great distance. I very much regretted to see the large brick dormitory and Goucher Hall so badly wrecked by the recent earthquake. Over twenty thousand dollars will be necessary to repair the damage. Our brethren have here a fine plant, and are doing good work. Returning to the city, we called at the Canadian Methodist Schools, and found that the earthquake had shaken the foundations there also. All these and other buildings and institutions are the representatives of new Japan. Their architecture, together with the dress of the better classes, the width of the streets, and the construction of the business houses, indicate an evolution from the old Japan which lived a hermit, went naked, and beheaded foreigners. The average street in a typical old Japanese city is about thirteen feet wide, and well filled with happy people unencumbered with excessive raiment.

Nikko, a hundred miles north of Tokio, thought by the Japanese to be the most beautiful place in the world, might well command several days, but we could only give it a delightful twenty-four hours. But every waking moment revealed a wonder, and even my dreams were crowded with perspectives of magnificent avenues lined with giant cryptomerias. Such an affluence of poetic taste and wealth of engineering skill I have not seen in this land so enamored of the beautiful. Those great cryptomerias, over two hundred years old and over an hundred thousand in number, were patriotic gifts to the Shogun. They stand on either side of the winding and ascending avenues which lead to splendid temples on the mountain sides like living pyramids to perpetuate the glory of the Shogunate—of Iye-yasu and his illustrious Takugawa successors. What stories of Eastern pageantry and Asiatic splendor those cryptomerian sentinels might relate if they had tongues to speak or we the ears to hear! On great festal occasions the processions must have been magnificent and the crowd of witnesses numbered by multiplied thousands. Even yet the stone sockets remain where flagstaffs were planted, while lights from immense stone lanterns made mountain side and temples a blaze of glory. At the foot of the mountain is the dashing Daiya-gawa, with waters as blue as the sky bending over it, and as merry as the light-hearted people who listen to its silvery music. Over that stream a sacred bridge was thrown two hundred and fifty years ago, which was and is only opened on certain feast days, and then only used by the Shoguns or the Mikado. From the foot of that beautiful red bridge the winding, stone-paved avenue begins, leading first to the temples and on to the mausoleum of Iye-yasu, the first of the Shoguns. Near the temple gate—"the gate of the Two Kings"—is a graceful, five-storied pagoda, 104 feet high, and painted in many, but harmonious, colors. Within the inclosure are a number of buildings, many of them gorgeously decorated on the outside with painted carvings. Two of the buildings contain relics and memorials of the Takugawa dynasty, and everywhere is seen their gilt crest. The temple exceeds anything in Japan in its internal finishing and paneling. I have never seen a ceiling more tasteful and beautiful, and the inside doors are almost the perfection of art—worthy to be the gates of the new paradise.

Returning to Tokio the next afternoon, we had our first and inspiring view of Mount Fuji, lifting his giant head up into the heavens twelve thousand feet and more. Loftier mountains I have seen in the land of the Montezumas, but nothing so graceful and yet majestic as this sacred mountain of Japan.

In Tokio, by agreement and appointment, I attended an informal conference of representatives of the five branches of Methodism engaged in mission work in Japan. Bishop Ninde was also present. The question of special discussion was the unification of Methodist educational interests. There was a free interchange of fraternal opinion, and the whole matter referred to the several Conferences and missions for official action. Some plan of federation is a growing necessity.

Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference.

The third annual meeting of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference, held in Holly Springs, Oct. 7-9, was a delightful occasion. Officers and delegates were full of zeal for the work, and interested and appreciative audiences gave constant encouragement. Holly Springs fully sustained its old reputation for hospitality. The resident pastor, Rev. J. S. Oakley, was present at every service, and his kind words and many thoughtful attentions placed the society under pleasant obligations. Rev. J. B. Stone, P. E., and Revs. J. W. Honnoll, B. B. Sullivan and C. H. Pittman were welcome visitors.

The reports indicated wonderful progress, and delegates were stimulated to increased exertions. Much important business was transacted, and the society takes up the work of a new fiscal year with grateful hearts for past guidance and blessings, and with earnest trust for the future.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. H. W. Foote, Macon; vice-president, Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, Sardis; second vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Finlay, Greenville; recording secretary, Mrs. S. M. Toames, Winona; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. S Featherston, Macon; treasurer, Mrs. Rowan Thayer, Greenwood; auditor, Mrs. J. B. Stone, Holly Springs. District secretaries: Sardis district—Mrs. W. H. Wall, Sardis; Grenada district—Mrs. G. W. Jones, Grenada; Winona district—Mrs. E. K. Shivers, Black Hawk; Kosciusko district—Mrs. Burton, Pickens; Columbus district—Mrs. C. E. Cogdell, Brooksville; Aberdeen district—Mrs. H. C. Parrott, Okolona; Corinth district—Mrs. Thrasher, Boonville; Holly Springs district—Mrs. Logan Walker, Holly Springs; Greenville district—Mrs. Robert Somerville, Greenville.

A BANNER CIRCUIT.

Brooksville circuit, in the Columbus district, deserves special mention, which must include Mrs. C. E. Cogdell, district secretary, and her husband, Rev. D. L. Cogdell, pastor of that charge. This circuit has four appointments, Brooksville being the only town, the others country churches. For more than a year there have been three P. and H. M. Auxiliaries on this work—at Brooksville, X Prairie, and Soule Chapel; and at the annual meeting this was announced as the banner circuit.

On Sunday, Oct. 28, Mrs. Cogdell, assisted by Mrs. Mary Carr and Mrs. Walter Price, of X Prairie, and Mrs. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, organized at New Bethel a P. and H. M. auxiliary of twenty members, this making an auxiliary at every church in Bro. Cogdell's charge. Can any other circuit in our church show a better record?

MRS H. W. FOOTE.

Special Call.

The subscribers to our endowment fund are hereby notified that the interest due on their notes is very much needed just now. The money from tuition fees is short exhausted, and the salaries of our professors must be paid from the interest on endowment notes. If this interest is not paid promptly, I fear we shall lose some of our professors, and that would be a calamity which could not be remedied. So, dear friends, send along the interest on your notes promptly.

A Few Facts about Foreign Missions.

In considering the rapid progress and marvelous results attending "home mission" work, people often forget that the soil is prepared, and the people, for the most part, eager to hear the Word. Because results like those at home are not obtained in China and Japan, or in Mexico, let us not hastily conclude that foreign missions are a failure.

In a forest country farmers spend months and years in felling timber, clearing out stumps, and getting the soil ready for cultivation. But when the work has been well done, what splendid crops the virgin soil produces! Does the farmer, in looking back, regard the time and energy spent in preparing the ground as wasted? Even so in the mission field much time and labor have to be spent in preparing a way for the truth. Prejudice must be overcome, books must be translated into the native tongue, the customs of the people have to be studied, and many other things attended to. Again, before our missionaries can do effective work, a year, and in many instances several years, must be devoted to learning the language of the country, which fact ought to be well considered by those who call for converts as soon as a missionary has gone to a foreign field. Learning Chinese is no child's play.

Although two missionaries went from our church to China as early as 1848, small indeed have been the reinforcements, so that large results could not be hoped for. All told, we have but a handful of missionaries laboring among the heathen. Until 1877 we had not at any time more than six missionaries for the 250,000,000 of China. At present our total mission force in China, male and female, numbers about forty. What are these among so many?

When we consider the insignificant size of our missionary band, and then look at what has been done, we are convinced that God is in the work. The story of missionary progress in Japan, the "Sunrise Kingdom," is of thrilling interest. The first convert was made in 1864; the first Protestant Church was organized in 1872. Now there are in that kingdom over 37 000 Protestant Christians. It takes time for Christianity to gain a foothold among the worshipers of idols, but when the harvest does appear, missionaries are overwhelmed with converts. Baptist missionaries, it is said, labored among the Telugus of India thirty years to get twenty five converts, and then they baptized 2 222 converts in one day, and now have 50,000 communicants. Truly the Lord is with his servants as much in these latter days as on the day of Pentecost, when 3,000 were brought into the church. In a recent letter Bishop Galloway tells us that during 1892 the Protestant Churches in Japan reported 3 636 converts and additions. If we do our part, the Lord will do his.

Church Extension.

A note from Dr. Morton, Secretary of Church Extension, asking us to exhort for the great cause, which he so ably represents, in the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, must be our justification for this short article.

Church extension deservedly stands at the head of all our benevolences, having for their object the material growth and strengthening of the religious body, while it is second to none as a spiritual factor and promoter of the purely religious function, if we consider its more remote effects. "Let us build here three tabernacles," was the spontaneous outcry of one who felt the powers of the world to come surging through his bodily frame, and contemplated not more the permanence of worship and the needs of the worshipers than the transfixing of the divine glory and the detention of its heavenly objects. That vision and that voice of worship was a prophecy at once of the church's material growth and millennial renown. "That which God hath joined together let not man put asunder," will apply as certainly to body and soul as any other objects which he has providentially united, not to neglect mention of the union of divinity and humanity in the person of his divine Son.

A corporation without a soul is a not uncommon subject of occurrence, if not of recurrence; but a soul without a body would be transcendental in the extreme, and too unimaginable for anything but the finer moods of New England thought. Yet there is a tendency to this very sort of soullessness in much of the ecclesiasticism of the day, and a resort to ballooning methods of progress, that admit of no sort of connection between the saint in the body and the saint out of the body, or between "the thorn in the flesh" and "the abundance of the revelations." The church must have world-ballasting, however slow we may be to admit it, and the best and the safest that we can supply from our poor material side of the question is brick and mortar, or failing thereof, fat pine and cypress shingles. The great duty of the Methodist people, far more deficient in the human and architectural than in the divine and moral as compared with contemporaneous religious bodies, is "to rise up and build." Not that we should diminish the heavenward, but that we should cultivate the earthward in the less perilous forms.

The Church Extension Society is a good providence to our church, which has built thousands of churches and fired thousands of hearts with enthusiasm for a cause the least likely to enthuse men from a religious standpoint. Its administration may not be the wisest; but that it is wise none can doubt, and the injustice that it works, if it is rightly chargeable therewith, is not without valuable compensations. Hard times and hard critics must not be suffered to crush it. Louisiana and the Southwest have done less for it, and obtained less from it, than other sections; but for all that, few churches have been built on our territory within the last decade into which church extension money has not gone, and it is certain that fewer, if not the fewest, would have been built without this valuable tribute. Never was there such a demand upon our State Board for help as at the present time, our gifts for the past two years having been pledged far in advance of receipts, and never was there such a concentrated effort to build, in view of the emergent situation, as at this moment. Let us join hand and heart and tongue and pen to bring up full, if not large, collections at the approaching session of Conference. What we do must be done quickly. Promptness has secured many an advantage that mere money could not have bought; but if we combine the two, our weak forces will prove irresistible, and a shout of victory be heard along the whole line. Let us go forward in God's name.

J. M. PEARD

In the Living Present.

Competitive benevolence may secure "shekels," but it can be advocated only on the principle of Loyola. It is of the earth, earthly. Think of it—"bidding up" one another in generosity! To secure the divine blessing, a gift must have been prompted by the love of Christ.

Commenting on the causes of the social and moral deterioration in France, La Croix, a leading paper in Paris says: "Our people require to be re-permeated with the doctrines of the Bible. Protestant nations take the lead everywhere. Is it not because there is a Bible found in every household? Our mothers and children know little of Christ and his teachings. Our homes are desolate, our country is suffering. Only the Bible will bring us relief."

The Pope blessed Isabella of Spain. A year later she was dethroned. He blessed Eugenie, wife of Louis Napoleon. Instigating the war against Germany, the Tentons played sad havoc with the "blessed" pair. He blessed the wife of Gen. Sherman. She soon after died. He blessed our Confederacy. Its collapse succeeded. He cursed Victor Emmanuel. He died beloved and honored to this day. He cursed Italy; but Italy occupies an honored position in the conference of nations.

The Czar of Russia, Alexander III., who died on Nov. 1, was a better man than many of his predecessors. As husband, he was without reproach. His family life was happy. State affairs did not deter him from doing his duty as father. What as a Christian! He was the "head" of the Greek Church. As such, he had no compunctions of conscience in expatriating the Jews. When his brother, Alexis, for some misdemeanor exiled to the Caucasus, a few days ago came to Livadia to be reconciled with the dying Czar, the invalid refused to receive him. But hush: De mortuis nil nisi bonum.

Oratory is not declining, as some have asserted; but the conception of oratory is not the same among all men. Some deem it the outburst of a wordy hurricane; others, ornate declamation. A third class prepares its speeches and reads them. In the United States Senate all the "orations" are elaborately prepared and read. Frequently not read, but simply printed in the Record. Those orators of old and in modern times who pass as orators par excellence—such as Demosthenes and Cicero, Webster and Sumner—wrote their orations and in full memorized, and thus delivered them. Yes, the orator is born, not made; but it is the occasion and subject, as well as the man, to produce true oratory.

ICH DIEN.

The London Temperance Hospital recently celebrated its twentieth anniversary. During all these years no alcohol has been used, and no medicines are prepared in it. The hospital contains nearly one hundred beds, which in 1893 accommodated one thousand and thirty-six persons. Dr. Collins, surgeon for many years, says that, although not a total abstainer, he must confess that of the two thousand cases that have passed under his care, not one has suffered in any degree from the non-administration of alcohol. His experience proved that the patients whose systems were entirely free from it, made the more rapid and satisfactory recovery.—Exchange.

Ram's Horn: One of the duties every man owes to himself is to live so that he can respect himself.

THE BIRD WITH THE BROKEN PINION.

I wandered through woodland meadows,
Where the wild thrushes sing,
And I found, on a bed of mosses,
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old sweet strain;
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared as high again.

I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art;
But, touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took him to my heart.
He lived with a noble purpose,
And struggled not in vain;
But the life that sin had broken
Never soared as high again.

But the bird with the broken pinion
Kept another from the snare,
And the life that sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.
Each loss has its compensation,
There is healing for every pain;
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soars as high again.

Sanctification.

In our last article we noticed that sanctification, in one sense in the Bible, means separation, or setting apart for a sacred or holy purpose, and that this is the first sense in which it is used; but in this article we wish to notice the other senses in which it is used. It is used in the sense of being consecrated or devoted to death, for our Savior said of himself, "And for their sakes I sanctify myself." (John xvii, 19.) This passage can not be understood in the sense of a second blessing. It will not justify it. Mr. Wesley makes the following note on it: "I sanctify myself; I devote myself as a victim to be sacrificed." (Notes.) Dr. Clarke, in his commentary on this passage, says: "I consecrate and devote myself to death, that I may thereby purchase eternal salvation for them. The word, hagiazo, to consecrate or sanctify, is used in the sense of devoting to death in Jer. xii, 3, both in the Hebrew and in the Septuagint." It is used in the sense of a source of sanctification, and hence Paul, in speaking of Christ, said, "Who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification," etc. (I Cor. i, 30.) Dr. Clarke, in commenting on this passage, says: "And sanctification . . . is procuring for and working in us, not only an external and relative holiness, as was that of the Jews, but true and eternal holiness (Eph. iv, 24), wrought in us by the Holy Spirit." Mr. Wesley, in his notes on this verse, says, "Sanctification, a principle of universal holiness, whereas before we were altogether dead in sin." It is clear enough that sanctification in this passage means that Christ is the source of our righteousness (forgiveness) and sanctification (holiness or conversion). It can not be understood in the sense of a second blessing.

Sanctification is used in the sense of conversion, or being born again by the renewing of the Holy Spirit, and hence Paul says, "Because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through the sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." We are in a state of salvation if we have been born again; but how did we get there? Paul says, "Through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." That is, we believed God's Word, and the Holy Ghost renewed or cleansed us, or put us in a state of salvation before God. What is plainer? Dr. Clarke, on this verse, says: "Let us observe the order of divine grace in this business. 1. They were to hear the truth—the doctrines of the gospel. 2. They were to believe this truth when they heard it preached. 3. They were to receive the Spirit of God in believing the truth. 4. That Spirit was to sanctify their souls—produce an inward holiness—which was to lead to all outward conformity to God. 5. All this constituted their salvation, their being fitted for the inheritance among the saints in light. 6. They were to obtain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ—that state of felicity for which they were fitted—by being saved here from their sins, and by being sanctified by the Spirit of God." All Mr. Wesley says in his notes on this verse is, "O! your hearing the gospel, chosen you to salvation—taken you out of the world, and placed you in the way to glory." Be it sufficient to say that this verse does not teach a second blessing, but sanctification in the sense of conversion, or being born again. Again, Peter says, 'Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit." (I. Pet. i, 2.) This verse is quite clear in teaching sanctification in the sense of conversion, or being born again. Mr. Wesley says, "Through sanctification of the Spirit; through the renewing and purifying influences of his Spirit on their souls." Dr. Clarke says: "Through sanctification of the Spirit; through the renewing and purifying influences of his Spirit on their souls." We are God's elect through the sanctification of the Spirit, or by being born again. What is plainer? There is no second blessing in it.

Sanctification is used in the sense of righteous living in heart and life, or of keeping pure in heart and life. When the Holy Spirit sanctifies the heart by cleansing it, the person thus cleansed is expected to keep cleansed or pure by obeying God, and hence Paul says, "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification." (I. Thess. iv, 3.) That this is Paul's meaning in this verse is evident from the last part of it, which is, "That ye should abstain from fornication." If this is not its meaning, what can it be? For no one would say that conversion allows a person to commit fornication, or that this verse teaches a second blessing, for then the question would rightly arise, "What account is conversion, then, if a converted person is expected to commit fornication?" The true meaning of this verse appears in a much plainer light when we remember that a person, just as soon as he is cleansed or born again, is pure in heart, and that this purity must not only remain therein, but that it must be in the inward and outward acts of the same. In plainer language still: Conversion, or the new birth, is that pure state, or sanctification, of the soul accomplished by the Holy Spirit; and the sanctification of this passage is that pure or sanctified soul avoiding evil and doing good. Conversion is the soul's purity, or sanctification, accomplished by the Holy Spirit, and the sanctification of this Scripture is the soul's purity, or sanctification, continued and strengthened by its doing God's will by the aid of the Holy Spirit, as far as it is possible for it to know what that will is.

On Gambling.

TEXT.—Exodus xx, 15-17; II. Thess. iii, 10, "Thou shalt not covet." "If any man will not work, neither shall he eat."

Gambling is the art of practicing a game of hazard, or one depending partly on skill, or partly on chance or hazard, with a view to win money or something staked upon the issue of the contest.

The practice existed in the most ancient times, among the Greeks and Romans, and among our own barbarian forefathers. It obtains in modern times, not only among savage tribes, but among the most civilized nations. In our own land, of late years, the Christian moralist has had to take note of an alarming increase of the gambling spirit, especially among the youth; so I call your attention to the prevalence of the sin of gambling in general.

I. Consider gambling as a great river running into the great cesspool of iniquity that is cursing humanity and sending up its stench like the miasma from stagnant and putrid waters, breeding disease and death to the morals, the life of every nation and people. I refer, first of all, to some of the tributaries that make up this great river of vice.

(a) Gambling is practiced by governments as a source of revenue. The Prince of Monaco has converted his fair paradise on the Franco-Italian coast into a gambling hell that he may derive a revenue, to be wasted in the extravagance and luxury of his government. Government lotteries figure largely in the state budgets of Germany, Holland, Spain and Italy, in Mexico, Central America and most of the South American States. Wherever Rome has had political power she has breathed her blighting breath, and gambling holds high carnival. Government lotteries were only abolished in Great Britain as late as 1826. And even in this fair land, though every State in the Union has passed laws against lotteries, we all remember how recently our sister State, Louisiana, had her fair name blackened by legalizing that most gigantic fraud, "The Louisiana Lottery," and even now it has found for itself a den in the fair State of Florida, though not by any law. In every large city in this whole country the "gambling hell" is practically licensed to produce a revenue for the benefit of the municipality. About once a month the police go around and collect a "fine" from each gambling house, called a "fine," but practically a license; or, perhaps, the officers for some unknown reason will not know of the existence of these houses. Thus they run day and night in all their hideous work, like the great maelstrom, drawing many innocent and unsuspecting victims into her open and rapacious jaws and down to eternal destruction.

Gambling is practiced (b) in society as an amusement. Cards are to be found in almost every company of young people that meet together for an evening's entertainment, and even in the house of many of the members of the church; and if direct betting is not indulged in, a prize is put up for the most successful player. This is nothing but gambling pure and simple, though it may deceive some willing dupes; and how it is that it is not regarded a flagrant violation of the law on gaming I can not see.

(c) The fashion of horse racing, sometimes dignified with the euphonious name of "Agricultural Fair," is another phase of gambling as an amusement that is making its way into all classes of the people, and is as blighting as the deadly simoom of Arabia. In a town where one of these "Fairs" existed, even the little boys under ten years of age caught the gambling, laid them out a race track, named themselves after the horses that were in attendance on the "Fair" and ran races, betting matches which they had either begged from the stores or stolen from home on the result, as they had seen the men do.

(d) Base ball is another of the common methods of gambling for amusements. I am told that even one of our stewards has been victimized to the extent of $15 or $20. Billiards, bicycle races, elections, and even when it will rain or when the moon changes.

(e) In business life as a means of hastening riches. So we have our Boards of Trade, bucket shops, and all classes of dealings in futures. You may gain some idea of the widespread evil by the space given to it in the daily papers and the gambling schemes resorted to for the extension of the circulation of the paper, or even in endeavoring to attract trade in merchandise by a guess at the number of beans in a bottle or giving keys to unlock a box with money in it, etc., some even professing to believe that all this is legitimate business. I might here add all wild speculation as a species of gambling.

IN BENEVOLENT CIRCLES AS A MEANS OF CHARITY.

Goods of various kinds are given for charity, because they are not very salable and can be spared better than money, and the committee that they may realize the most for them sell chances and actually raffle off things in the name of sweet charity. I have even known some churches to thus obtain money. Do you wonder that the spirit of gambling is so widespread and seems to be growing?

II.—THE MORAL EVIL OF GAMBLING.

The practice in all its various forms demoralizes—that is to say, it is immoral, because—

1. It involves a waste of time. Time is among the most estimable of all God's gifts to man, and everyone is bound by the most sacred obligations to redeem the time. The gambler, however, resorts to his games because he is an idle man who is living a life devoid of moral purpose, and on his hands, in consequence, time hangs heavily. He gambles to chase away ennui. But gambling is not recreation; it does not recreate. Time spent in gambling is, therefore, time wasted.

2. Gambling involves a misuse of means. Everyone ought to regard himself as a steward of the pecuniary and other resources with which God has entrusted him. We are bound to devote our property only to purposes that will be acceptable to God, and at the same time useful to ourselves and to others. But squandering money in gambling does no good to the winner nor to the loser. What gamester has ever been known to ask God's blessing on his play?

Gambling involves (3) mental and moral dissipation. The gambler's life is at war with the primary virtues of human character, such as industry, frugality and temperance. He is a stranger to self-government, and much more as to acts of charity and benevolence. His vice eats away all the finer fibre of his nature. He has no love for either God or man. Gamblers necessarily herd together, but they have no true soul-fellowship. John Ruskin has well said: "Of all the vile habits into which men can fall the vilest is betting. It unites nearly every element of folly and vice. It wastes time, which is meted out to us in minutes by Him who knows the mighty issues that hang on a moment. It dissipates the mind by the concentration of its powers on a chance instead of the great certainties of life and duty."

Gambling involves associations with bad company. The gambler is a man who has not learned to prize the pure and holy pleasures of true-hearted friendship. What a companionship of knaves, pickpockets and fools takes place at every race meeting, whether it be horse, man, bicycle, boat or what not. "Wheresoever the carcass is" there the professional gamblers congregate like vultures to prey upon the young and inexperienced. Richard Baxter asks: "Are there not more fornicators, drunkards, swearers, cursers, covetors of other men's money, and profane neglecters of God and their own souls, among gamblers than among them that are against them? Judge ye by their fruits."

GAMBLING INVOLVES ROBBERY OF ONE'S NEIGHBOR.

The moral way of acquiring wealth and property is to work for it. The apostle says to the Gentiles: "If any will not work, neither let him eat."

So far as property comes to us, it must either be given us or we must inherit, or we must labor for it with our own brawn or brain. But it is immoral to strive to obtain it without giving a quid pro quo—an equivalent—therefor.

This is the great evil of gambling, that men play for money because they are mean-spirited enough to want money without honestly earning it; the very same reason that makes men rob on the highway or steal in the midnight darkness. In every form of gambling the gain of one man is the loss of another. The gambler can get nothing from God by his play, nor anything out of nature; he can only get out of his neighbor; and as no one ever consents with his whole will to lose the game is, therefore, robbery.

GAMBLING INVOLVES SOCIAL MISERY.

The domestic and public evils which flow from this vice are at once widespread and stupendous. What homes it has desolated! What lives it has destroyed! Oh, the children it has orphaned! The hearts it has broken! The mother who notices with anxiety and even alarm, the unsettled, restless demeanor of her darling boy, still in his teens, it may be, does not know that by reason of a certain horse, boat, bicycle or pugilist having reached the goal first on a distant race course or slugging room, he has lost money not his own, and is already starting on a career of crime, sooner or later to end in disgrace and death, both natural and eternal.

The gambler lends his influence to the ruin of family life and to the disintegration of society. He is a bad husband and father, a worthless citizen, and a curse to humanity, a nuisance to mankind. The social wretchedness produced by this vice is well represented by the annual harvest of the gaming suicides at Monte Carlo. Last season the number exceeded a hundred. We have the same harvest in every city where there is a Board of Trade, on a smaller scale. Again, by numbers of defaulting officers serving their term in the penitentiaries, their families undergoing all the pain and humiliation incident on their vice. It is also adequately reflected in the expressive synonym for a gambling house—"gambling hell," for the end of these things is death, eternal death. "The wages of sin is death."

THE REMEDY.

(1) Expose it in preaching; show that it is a direct violation of one of the Ten Commandments.

(2) Use every possible means to induce the members of the church of Christ to oppose gambling everywhere and in every place, particularly to discourage games of chance for amusement.

(3) Try, by the preaching of a pure gospel, to so mould public opinion that the law against gambling dens and gamblers' tricks will be so rigidly enforced that they can not carry on their nefarious work without the certainty of meeting condign punishment.

(4) But, above all things else, let it be known that the pure and undefiled religion of Jesus Christ, shed abroad in every heart, is the cure, not only of this vice, but of every vice and sin to which humanity is heir.

Correspondence.

Dr. Carradine in Natchez.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me a few words in regard to the Carradine and Ramsey meetings, in addition to what I had to say in a former letter, taking Mr. Lewis' letter in the current week's ADVOCATE as a text. Mr. Lewis says of Dr. Carradine's sermons that they were "scriptural and powerful," and it is to the first proposition, the scriptural part, that I wish to speak, admitting without hesitation the power of his appeals in their effect on some people.

Among the multitude of passages from which he preached, and which he quoted in support of his second-blessing theory and that of entire sanctification, I will instance only a few. The first clause of I. Thess. iv, 3: "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification"—never using or referring to the last clause of the same verse, i. e.—"that ye should abstain from fornication!" There is no doubt about the passage quoted being "Scripture;" but there is a very grave doubt as to its reference to a second-blessing, or holiness, even except in the abstract. An ordinary reader would infer from the text and context that the Thessalonians had been guilty of licentiousness, or fornication, to an extent not warranted by a pure morality, let alone a Christian walk and deportment, and it was this tendency that the apostle desired to check. No sane man ever supposed before that the apostle had any, even the most remote, reference to the theories taught by our modern sanctificationists, and I am perfectly sure that Paul himself never dreamed that such an interpretation of his lecture to the Thessalonians on fornication would ever be made!

The seventeenth chapter of St. John's Gospel is another passage much relied on by our evangelists in white, when the veriest tyro knows that from the first line in the prayer to its last word there is not a single expression or sentiment that refers at all to the second blessing! Our Lord, after an extended conversation with his apostles, as recorded in the preceding chapters, proceeded to lay their case before the Father, and invoke his almighty power in their behalf, that they might be specially fitted for the discharge of the duties assigned them as ministers of his gospel. In other words, which are his own also, to sanctify, or set them apart, for the work they had to do and to make their ministry effective, and fulfill the demands of the law, he sanctified himself, i. e.—set himself apart as a sacrifice for the sins of the world. Having prayed earnestly for his apostles, he then prays for those who shall believe on him through their preaching, and in this part of the prayer there is absolutely no peg on which to hang the second-blessing hat. This is unfortunate for our brethren, but it is true.

Isaiah xxxv, 8, is another of Bro. Carradine's texts in which he found two ways, separate and distinct, the one from the other, the "highway" being regeneration, and the "way" the second blessing! On this text I consulted Dr. Clarke, who, we all know, was a firm believer in holiness, and he does not divide the heavenly turnpike into two parts, under the inspiration of Isaiah's poetical language, and as he was a smarter man than I am and, possibly, as smart as our Bro. Carradine, I assume that there is no second-blessing secreted in that passage, or he would have found it. There were many other passages and texts that do not occur to me now, and to notice them would take too much room. Those referred to are sufficient to show that while some of Bro. Carradine's sermons were scriptural, they were not all of that kind, and were just that sort of wresting Scripture, giving it interpretations that it will not bear, that myself and others object to, because it is false teaching and it is calculated to mislead and do harm. Mr. Lewis knows these things. If he does not, he ought to, as they are too plain to be mistaken.

His eulogy of Mr. Ramsey and his preaching is rather high-flown. That he is a sincere and earnest Christian gentleman I have no doubt; nor is there any doubt of his ability to quote hundreds of passages of Scripture in support of his theories, when ninety-nine out of the hundred have no reference whatever to the matter.

Now, a word more as to one incident of the Carradine meetings here, and elsewhere, I believe. At one or more of the night services, and following the altar work, Bro. Carradine had his converts stand in a row, and proceeded to drill them in the great Methodist specialty of shouting! How does that strike you as after the manner of old-fashioned Methodist revivals? What is a shout of spiritual joy worth when developed according to military tactics? Who ever heard of a shout drill in the times of primitive Methodism? Comment is unnecessary!

Yours truly, REX B.

The Class Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to call attention to one great negligence that exists to-day throughout Methodistic territory, viz.: the failure to hold class meetings. It appears to me that just here will be found the secret of the lethargy which to-day exists in the church. The class meeting was a power for good in former times, and my honest conviction is, that it would prove a blessing to this generation if we would go back to it. The hearts of the people must be reached, and their condition, spiritually, must be known. Now, the problem is, how to reach the hearts of the people. We can not do this altogether from the pulpit, for while it is true the attendance upon divine services to-day is good, there is very little manifestation of deep interest.

Almost everything else is progressing more rapidly than Christianity. Small results, indeed, are seen to-day at the close of the services of the churches. There should be souls born unto God in every service held all over Christendom. I believe this can be accomplished by organizing the membership of every church into small classes, as the Discipline directs, and then holding class meetings according to the Discipline. If the Discipline was enforced, there would either be grand revolution in our church or a great falling off in numbers.

Let us go back to the old Methodist plan of holding regular class meetings—not experience meetings merely. Let us have the membership of each church divided into classes, and a class leader appointed for each class, as the Discipline directs. When we do this, then I believe we will see grand results. By God's help I expect to adopt it on my pastoral charge ere the year 1894 comes to a close.

Residue Theory.

To several brethren who have written, asking us to reply in the columns of the ADVOCATE to the opposers of the Residue Theory, we respond that the Bible—Old and New Testaments—biblical scholarship in the various ages in which it has flourished, the creeds exceptions, the writings of Wesley and all the Methodist fathers and most of the sons, and Webster's Dictionary, ought to be a sufficient refutation; and though we have never boasted of our modesty, we are too modest to speak in such a presence. Moreover, we never read newspaper articles on the Residue Theory, and do not know what the brethren have theorized. That they may find out by their futile opposition that "Residue Theory" and "bottom fact" are but different names for the same individual, is our most devout wish. Residue Theory is a name which has been applied to the subject, either maliciously or capriciously, by opposing theorists, and is utterly misleading.

How Much More?

When Madame Sontag first began her musical career in Vienna, she was hissed off the stage by her rival, Amelia Steinenger. Years went by, and one day, in her glory, Madame Sontag was riding through the streets of Berlin, when she noticed a little girl leading a blind woman along the walk, and she called to her, and said, "Who is that you are leading?" "Why," the little girl said, "don't you know? That is my mother, Amelia Steinenger. She used to be a great singer once, but she lost her voice, and then she cried so much about it her eyes went blind." "Give her my love," said Madame Sontag, "and tell her that in a few days an old acquaintance will call upon her." The next week, in the city of Berlin, a vast multitude gathered at a benefit for the poor, blind woman, and it is said that Madame Sontag sang that night as she never had sung before, and to the day of her death she took care of Amelia Steinenger, and then she took care of her child after her.

That, my friend, is what the queen of song did for her enemy; and think you—you who are a child of a Father in heaven—that he will not take care of you when you call upon him? I tell you he will. Why, in our broken and selfish relations with each other, we do good. We give bread, we turn the pillow, we watch over sickness till the clock runs down, and how much more shall the Father in heaven do good? By as much more as the river is greater than the dew-drop globuled on its bank; by as much more as the sea is deeper than the river; by so much more as the stars swing high above the sea.—Miller.

A contemporary says of a man who recently completed his course on earth, that he was remarkable for two things. First, he always did his utmost in any case he espoused. Secondly, he made the best use of such means as were at hand until better could be found. Is it any wonder that such a man made himself deeply felt in whatever circle he moved? The inefficiency of many men is owing to the fact that they do not do their best; they are content with half-hearted endeavors. Another large class fall short because things are not altogether to their mind, and they wait for an indefinite period in expectancy of some better equipment. The true man, on the contrary, puts forth his whole ability in whatever he undertakes, and makes the most of such means as he can get, even though they are far less than he would desire.—Intelligencer.

It seems to be the peculiar mission of many in life to thrust their poronpios quills into everybody they meet. They delight in sharp thrusts and in drawing blood. It is not a lovely companion, but it falls in with an unsanctified and resentful nature. The more one yields to the disposition to say cutting and bitter things, the more it grows upon him, and the greater annoyance does he become both in society and in the church.

If you don't like the churches, go in and make them better, but do not become a grumbler. Keep yourself aloof from that class of people, for it is the easiest sort of thing to find fault. Any stupid man can do that, but it takes a smart man to make things better. When a man begins to grumble and find fault, you can size him up for a light-weight right away.—D. L. Moody.

No one can ask honestly or hopefully to be delivered from temptation unless he has himself honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.—Ruskin.

When home is ruled according to God's Word, angels might be asked to stay at night with us, and they would not find themselves out of their element.—Spurgeon.

The best way for a man to get out of a lowly position is to be conspicuously effective in it.—Rev. Dr. John Hall.

There is nothing but good in store for the man who treats God's children just as he would like for God to treat him.

Who shows me his faults may be my friend; who shows me mine is my friend.—Ivan Patin.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. J. Porter, Indian Bayou, La., Oct. 26: "Closed a good meeting in a school-house near Rayne, La., last Sunday night. Bro. Richard Walker assisted. Results: Twenty professed conversion and one sanctification."

Rev. W. M. Williams, P. C., Decatur, Miss., Oct. 26: "We have finished our rounds of protracted meetings. We have had good meetings at each point—at some very fine. We have had about fifty conversions and thirty-five accessions. We have made decided advancement in spirituality. We have peace and harmony within our church, but we are continually tormented at some points by come-outers, come-outism and opposition to organized churches and Methodist usage and government. 'Tis grace has brought us safe this far, and grace will lead us on to victory and to God."

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Courtland, Miss., Oct. 28: "The Lord hath done great things for us during the year, whereof we rejoice. The power of the Most High has been upon us, and in answer to the seed-sowing there has been a wonderful ingathering. Our work among these people has been a joy and delight; they have been appreciative and responsive. Many who had passed the meridian of life, neither caring for God nor regarding man, are now numbered among Christ's followers and are constantly abounding in the work of the Lord. A large number of those converted and added to the church during the year were men of mature years, many of whom were looked upon as 'joined to their idols' and fixed upon a course of sin and ultimate ruin; but, like Zaccheus of old, they 'sought to see Jesus who he was,' and, as a natural sequence, they found him, and to-day they are rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. Some few of our members are systematic Christian payers, remembering that one-tenth of all the fruits belonged to God under the Jewish dispensation, and, bearing in mind that 'God hath provided some better thing for us,' they intend carefully to see to it that they do not give less than the Jew. (Let all Christians make a note of this.) More than 80 persons have been converted during the year; 67 received into the Methodist Church, and 40 adults and several children have been baptized. Many family altars have been erected, and neighborhood prayer meetings have been organized. Two Juvenile Missionary Societies have been organized and put in working order. The attendance of the children at the regular meetings is good, and they are very enthusiastic in this work, which not only entertains, but educates them. The lot has been surveyed, ground has been broken, and material will be on hand in course of a few days toward the erection of a Methodist Church here at Courtland. Hitherto we have worshiped with two other denominations in a Union Church, to which we still have access and partly own, but we dislike this boarding-house system and believe each family ought to occupy a separate building. Our Baptist brethren own a handsome brick church made possible by the liberality of Col. Creed Hunt, now deceased. Four denominations are represented at Courtland by as many distinct organizations, and the pastors of three of the flocks reside here. But 'we be brethren' and do endeavor to dwell together in unity. We are situated just fifteen miles by railroad from Sardis, the seat of the ensuing Annual Conference. The collections ordered by the Annual Conference for this pastoral charge will be paid in full. We recognize the claims of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE upon our people, and, while there have not been as many subscriptions and renewals as there ought from such a large membership as we have, nevertheless we will continue to 'stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance,' and endeavor ere long to put a copy of the paper in every home."

DR. CARRADINE IN MERIDIAN.

As was previously announced, Dr. Carradine began a meeting in the West End Methodist Church, this city, Sunday, Sept. 30, and continued until Friday, Oct. 12. From the beginning large crowds attended every service. After a day or two we were compelled to move into a tent which had been purchased and is kept in the city for local evangelistic work. The seating capacity is about 1,500. This was full to overflowing until the cold weather drove us back to West End Church. The power of God was manifested from the first service. Something over 60 received the blessing of entire sanctification, and a number were converted and reclaimed. Among these were members from East End, West End, Central, and South Side Methodist Churches, and from the Baptist Church. Two of our brethren of the ministry also received this great blessing. The meeting is still in progress under Bro. Ramsey, a man who knows the Bible and how to use it.

Dr. Carradine was thoroughly orthodox and scriptural in his presentation of the doctrine of entire sanctification, or "Christian perfection"—the term Mr. Wesley used so much, and our Lord used in Matt. v, 48.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

Quite a number of ladies assembled in the pastor's study in Carondelet Street Church, on Friday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

Dr. LaPrade explained the object of the meeting, which was to form a class for the training of Christian workers, under the auspices of the W. P. and H. M. S. of New Orleans; the class to meet on Friday of each week at 3 P. M., at which time lectures will be given by the different clergymen and physicians of the city; each lecture to be about thirty minutes in duration. The ministers will give instructions as to what course to pursue in visiting the poor, the sick, the distressed, and in giving to them religious comfort and consolation in hours of need. So many are willing to do this work for the Master, but feel ignorant and know not how to proceed. These need to be taught, and will gladly receive instruction.

The physicians will lecture on hygiene, and give us the rules for healthy living. Along this line we all need information; not only for the good of the poor or sick whom we may visit, but that in our own homes these rules may be observed and our families reap the benefit. Some of the most eminent physicians of the city have kindly consented to lecture for us; among which are Drs. Beach, Parham, McGee, and others.

The venerable Dr. Beach gave the first lecture on Oct. 26, which was very interesting and instructive, and was listened to with profound attention. From it we gleaned many useful and practical ideas. Dr. LaPrade then spoke, and in his usual clear and concise style gave us many valuable points, and much food for thought. After Dr. LaPrade had concluded, Mrs. Lyons, president of the Louisiana Conference W. P. and H. M. S., arose and, in her pleasant and gracious manner, thanked Dr. Beach and Dr. LaPrade for the instruction given; and also thanked the ladies present for attending, and invited them to come again. I am sure all felt that it was an hour well spent, and all were more than repaid for coming.

It is a grand work, well begun, and in its carrying out can only result in great good. It is not sectarian, and all interested are invited to attend the lectures and, if so inclined, to join this class of Christian workers. H. F.

THE RECENT REVIVAL IN NATCHEZ.

I have received several letters from esteemed brethren in the ministry making inquiry concerning our meeting and its results. One life-long comrade, whom I "esteem very highly in love for his work's sake," writes me: "I want you, for Christ's sake, to kindly, lovingly, and truthfully inform the church all about it." I have already sent the ADVOCATE an account of the meeting, written as soon as it closed; but I appreciate the desire of the brethren referred to, and so make the following additional statements.

We invited Dr. Carradine here, knowing that he would emphasize the doctrine of entire sanctification. Rev. H. C. Morrison, of Kentucky, was with us a few days in the Spring, and preached several able sermons on the subject, and ten or a dozen of my people were in the experience of perfect love when Dr. Carradine came.

I have been a student of the Bible and of Methodist theology for many years, and, in my judgment, Dr. Carradine did not depreciate the work of regeneration. His statements of the necessity of thorough repentance and of true faith in Jesus Christ, of the nature of the new birth and of the witness of the Spirit, of the pardon of sin and of the joy arising from the consciousness thereof, were clear and scriptural; but he taught that a deeper work of grace than regeneration is necessary to make us perfect Christians, and exhorted all converted people to "go on unto perfection." He exposed the sin of our nature, uncovered the imperfections of the heart and "broke up the fallow ground." He put his plowshare in deep—indeed, it was a regular sub-soiling process. He insisted on the possibility and importance of the perfect cleansing of the heart from sin, and pointed out the way of holiness. As a result, many of our people were convinced that there was something better for them than that which they obtained in regeneration, and they sought earnestly for the blessing of entire sanctification. They manifested their earnestness by searching the Scriptures, fasting and praying, and by coming to the altar. More than one hundred persons entered into an experience of grace wherein they testify to a consciousness of a pure heart, and of the abiding indwelling of the Holy Spirit, giving them perfect love for God and men, perfect rest of soul in Jesus, and fulness of joy in the Lord. Some of these were in a backslidden state when the meeting began; but they were first reclaimed and afterwards sanctified. Some were unconverted; but they first experienced pardon and afterward perfect love. One intelligent young man of my church was converted; his conversion was bright and joyous, and two days afterward he entered into the experience of full salvation to which his testimony continues bright and firm. This is one instance out of many that might be given wherein is illustrated the doctrine of our church that sanctification is a work of grace subsequent to regeneration, "as distinctly marked and as graciously promised in the Holy Scriptures." (See Watson's Institutes, part second, chap. 29.)

The more than one hundred persons who professed the blessing of perfect love during our meeting are among the best and most intelligent members of the different churches of our city. They are not likely to be carried away by a mere phantom, or to be swayed by mere excitement. They are men and women of education, thought and character. They listened to the sermons with open Bible, turning to every passage read and commented on. They became convinced of the truth of the doctrine, and then sought and obtained the experience of entire sanctification, and are now confirmed in "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Varied were the circumstances under which this experience was entered into. Some were at home engaged in secret prayer, some were at church listening to the sermon, some were blessed while listening to the testimony of others, and some were at the altar when the fire fell upon them. One young man received the blessing at the breakfast table. One lady came by the parsonage for spiritual help on her way to church, and obtained the blessing on the street before she reached the house of God. But they all testified to the same experience, and their testimony was in sweet accord with that of the sainted Rev. John G. Jones, with whose testimony I was made familiar in my boyhood when he was my presiding elder.

There are no indications of spiritual pride or exclusiveness in those who have made a profession of perfect love. They testify to the grace that is given them, but, with meekness and humility, giving all the glory to Christ. The experience through which they have passed has emptied their hearts of earthly love, pride, selfishness, impatience, irritability, etc.; and they are filled with all the fulness of God. Their zeal for God is fervent, their love for the brethren is unfeigned, and their spiritual uplift is manifest to all. Like David, "they make their boast in the Lord: the humble hear thereof and are glad." This is old-fashioned Methodism—"Christianity in earnest"—"the old-time religion."

More than twenty of the young people of my church have professed the blessing of entire sanctification, and more than twice that number of those of riper years; and others, both old and young, are seeking the blessing. Many more of my congregation, who did not enter so deeply into the spiritual results of the meeting, were revived in their religious life. In the prayer meeting, last Monday night, there were, at least, seventy-five persons present, and thirty-seven responded when voluntary testimonies were called for, and others would have spoken if time had allowed. I have been in the ministry more than thirty-five years, and I have never known a church to be in a better spiritual state than this church is in now. It is not perfect; it is still susceptible of improvement; there are evils existing that need to be remedied; but the above statement is nevertheless true. W. B. LEWIS.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

"When my adopted son was seven years of age, he had as severe a cough as I ever knew anyone to suffer from. He coughed incessantly, and spit up blood. I tried everything I could think of, but he constantly grew worse, and I feared the poor little fellow would surely die. At last, I gave him Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, being recommended to do so by the physician. This medicine gave the child speedy relief and effected a permanent cure."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Texas.

More Anarchy.

Last Sabbath afternoon witnessed another act in the great drama of lawlessness which is disgracing New Orleans and wrecking its commerce. On Saturday the agent of the West India and Pacific Steamship Company, which owns thirteen ships doing business in this port, gave notice that he would for the present employ colored screwmen in loading his vessels. The requisite force of colored labor had been secured, and work was to begin on Monday morning under the protection of a large police force. But before Monday morning arrived the wharves of this company, with all their contents, had ceased to exist through the agency of an incendiary's torch. Four thousand bales of cotton were burned, besides other freight. The total loss is estimated at more than $160,000. Thus New Orleans has placed herself in the same category of infamy with Chicago. Knife, pistol, bludgeon and fire are brought into requisition to prevent hard-handed labor from earning wages by honest toil.

This state of things can not continue longer without immeasurable disaster to this city. Cotton is not obliged to come to New Orleans; there are many other ports to which it can go. Steamship companies are under no dire necessity of trading with New Orleans. Only a few days since more than four thousand dollars' worth of property was destroyed on shipboard by an armed mob. A little later the labor on these ships was dispersed by a mob, and the ships lay idle at the wharves for about a week at a loss of several thousand dollars per day. Now, the torch comes in as a still more efficient agency of destruction. Can ship owners be expected to continue to traffic with a city which affords them no protection for their property? Certainly not. These men are not idiots. They know that there are other cities that will give them protection. To these cities they will go, and ought to go, unless this lawlessness is summarily suppressed. The authorities of this city and this State have a grave responsibility resting upon them which must be met at once. The strong arm of the law must be wielded for the suppression of anarchy. Government has no more sacred function than that of protecting labor in its right to earn a living by honest toil. If a government can not do that, what can it do? And of what use is it?

Address of the Publishing Committee.

The Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE held its Annual Meeting in the ADVOCATE office, Oct. 31, 1894. The following is presented as its annual report to the patronizing Conferences:

All the members of the committee were present at the meeting, and the interests of the ADVOCATE were carefully considered. The publisher submitted his annual report, which was highly satisfactory, showing the paper to be in a much better financial condition than it was twelve months ago. There was a decrease in circulation reported, but this comes from the cutting off of delinquent subscribers. It was recommended by the Publishing Committee, a year ago, that all who were in arrears on account of subscriptions for twelve months or more should be dropped from the subscription roll unless they would settle their accounts. Acting on this suggestion, these names were stricken off, and the ADVOCATE is now practically on a cash basis. Between five and six hundred new subscribers have been secured, the most of them within the last few months, and the circulation of the paper is now increasing at a rate that is decidedly cheering.

A year ago it was thought best to combine the offices of publisher and editor, and Dr. Black was placed in charge of both departments. He found the business affairs of the paper in such shape that it was necessary for him to give much of his time during the early part of the year to drudgeries connected with the publishing department, leaving him much less time for editorial work than he desired. These difficulties are now out of the way, and the paper has recently given evidence of increased labor upon its editorial columns. It may be expected to increase in merit until it shall be second to none, if indeed it is not that already.

It should not be necessary for us to remind the church within our bounds of the power of the printing press as an instrument of good or of evil, as the case may be. This is a reading age, and every enterprise recognizes the necessity of the printed page as a means of disseminating views, principles, doctrines, etc. Much of the periodical literature of the day is sensational, false and vicious. Moreover, it is cheap and fascinating, and it insinuates itself into the homes of our people, and does its deadly work silently, but surely. The only way by which we can meet this foe, and preserve the purity and happiness of our people, is by the substitution of a clean and pure religious literature. Here the great importance of the religious journals of our church looms up before us.

We appeal to the preachers of the patronizing Conferences to join the editor and publisher of our paper in an effort to put the ADVOCATE in the homes of all our people. If in the judgment of anyone the paper lacks anything of being an ideal religious journal, let those who discover this deficiency take their pens and aid the editor in making it what it ought to be as a feeder of the thought, sentiment and religious life of the church. If an article appears in it with which anyone does not agree, the columns of the paper are open for the calm, dignified and dispassionate discussion of all questions proper to be discussed in a religious newspaper. As a medium of communication, as a means of disseminating useful information, as a silent, but powerful co-worker with the pulpit, and as an educative force by which our members may be developed in their loyalty to our institutions, we deem the ADVOCATE indispensable to the healthful growth and permanent prosperity of our church.

Resolved, That the Publishing Committee have heard with pleasure the report of the Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor and publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and that we commend him for the able manner in which he has conducted the paper; and, further, that we recommend the paper as worthy the confidence and patronage of Methodist people everywhere.

W. B. LEWIS,
For the Committee.

About the Advocate.

The Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE held its Annual Meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 31. Every member of the committee was present. The editorial and business management was approved, as shown in the resolutions published on this page. The present incumbent was continued as editor and publisher. Rev. W. B. Lewis was appointed to write the annual report.

We are, of course, gratified to receive the endorsement of such a body of men as those who compose the Publishing Committee. We enter upon the work of another year with a renewed determination to make the ADVOCATE a blessing to every home into which it enters. We earnestly solicit the co-operation of every pastor and every subscriber. To make the paper what it ought to be we need an increase of circulation. That increase must come largely through the instrumentality of our preachers. We have thousands of members who do not take any religious paper. How are they to be induced to subscribe except by solicitation on the part of some one? And who so proper a personage to make the solicitation as the pastor? Pastors should not overlook the fact that in circulating the ADVOCATE they are conferring a threefold benefit—upon themselves, upon the church, and upon the persons whom they induce to subscribe. The blessings carried into a home by the weekly visits of a first-class religious paper, such as the Publishing Committee declare the ADVOCATE to be, are immeasurable. Some idea of the value of such a paper can be formed by comparing those families in which the ADVOCATE has been a visitor for years with those into which no religious paper goes. By instituting such a comparison among the families of his own charge any pastor can soon convince himself of the value of a church paper. Go into a home into which no religious paper enters, and attempt to carry on a conversation about church affairs, and you will bring to light an amount of ignorance that is astounding, and that, too, among people who are not ignoramuses in a general way. By reading secular papers men may keep themselves posted as to what is going on in the outside world, and at the same time be almost as ignorant as Hottentots as to the operations of their own church. How can a man be what church membership at the present day implies without a knowledge of what the church is doing? And how can he know what the church is doing except by reading a church paper? What do the inmates of a paperless home know about missions, church extension, and all the other great movements that are going on in our Zion? And knowing nothing about these matters, how can they be deeply interested in them? Are they likely to become either effective workers or liberal givers in a cause about which they know nothing, or next to nothing? A family of children who read regularly a live, loyal, progressive, high-toned church paper are likely to become active, efficient church members; while, on the other hand, those who grow to maturity without the educative influence of the church paper are likely to be spiritual weaklings. Uninformed about and uninterested in the work of their own church, they are good subjects for ecclesiastical proselyters of almost any description to prey upon. Will our brethren of the ministry suffer a word of exhortation?

That exhortation is needed will not be denied by anyone who is in a position to know the facts. While there are many of our brethren who are active in behalf of the ADVOCATE, there are others who seem to think it a matter of no importance whatever to extend the circulation of the ADVOCATE. Loyal, wide-awake laymen have expressed to us great regret on account of the apathy of their pastors in this matter: "Our pastor does not seem to consider himself an agent for the ADVOCATE. He never calls attention to it either in the pulpit or anywhere else." Testimony like this has come to us unsought from more than one pastoral charge; and this, too, in cases in which we know that there is no feeling but that of personal friendship towards the editor, and no sentiment of disloyalty to the ADVOCATE. These brethren are simply apathetic for want of due consideration. Busy with the manifold cares and responsibilities of a laborious pastorate, they have simply overlooked this important part of their work.

Brethren who are thus overtaxed with other pastoral duties should procure some one else to act as agent. In many instances ladies make very efficient agents. In almost every charge some one can be found who will take this work if solicited to do so by the pastor. In some instances the Church Conference has appointed an agent.

We deem it proper to say just here that new subscriptions are now coming in at a rate that is decidedly encouraging. If all our preachers will exert themselves as some have done and are doing, our circulation will soon be doubled.

The New Diphtheria Cure.

When it was announced a short time since that Dr. Behring had discovered a panacea for diphtheria, the public were naturally somewhat incredulous, believing that the new remedy would soon find its way into the same limbo with the Brown-Sequard Elixir of Life. This opinion will have to be reversed. The new remedy has been accepted by the leading physicians of Europe as a therapeutical agent of undoubted efficacy. It has been tested in a number of hospitals, and in every case the results have been eminently satisfactory. It has been in use in the Pasteur Institute, in Paris, for the last five months. During that time 448 cases have been treated, and only one hundred and nine have died—a death rate of only about twenty-four per cent. For four years before this experiment began, the death rate in this institution has been over fifty-one per cent. Moreover, during the five months covered by this experiment another hospital in the same city—the Trousseau—which did not use the new remedy, has had a death rate of more than sixty per cent. In Berlin a still more satisfactory result has been obtained. During a four months' use of the remedy in the Moabit Hospital one hundred and sixty-three cases were treated, and the number of deaths was only twenty-three—a mortality of less than fifteen per cent. This is said to be the lowest death rate known to the medical profession. Several of the leading cities of the world are making appropriations for procuring a supply of the remedy for use in hospitals and by persons who are unable to procure it for themselves, the medicine being quite costly. Paris has appropriated $20,000, and New York, $10,000. Chicago has under consideration an ordinance appropriating $10,000.

BOOKS.

THE ABRAHAM LINCOLN MYTH. An Essay in "Higher Criticism." By Bocardo Bramantip, Huxleyan Professor in the University of Congo. From the Thirty-seventh Century Magazine, of April, A. D. 3663. New York: Mascot Publishing Co. 1894.

The above is the title of a very remarkable book. The scene is laid about eighteen hundred years in the future. Marvelous changes have taken place upon this mundane sphere. The great Occidental republic now known as "The United States of America" has gone the way of all the great nationalities of antiquity. Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield and Cleveland have become names as ancient and shadowy as Romulus, Semiramis and Tiglath-Pileser are to us of the present day. "The star of empire" has changed its course to the eastward; it has chosen Africa as the region to be illuminated by its resplendent rays. Changes no less marvelous have taken place in the realm of ethnology. The dominant race is no longer the Caucasian, but the African. A great African Republic has arisen which is the most opulent, the most powerful, the most learned and the most highly civilized nation on the globe. These cultured sons of Ham have great veneration for Abraham Lincoln. His deeds are commemorated "in story and in song." A statue of "Lincoln Singing the Emancipation Proclamation," carved by Durango, the world's greatest sculptor, is erected on the banks of the Victoria Nyanza. At its unveiling representatives are present from all the civilized nations of the world. To the vast multitude assembled on this occasion an address is delivered by the principal of the Law School of the University of Uganda, the leading institution of learning in the world. The distinguished educator, in his oration, narrates the principal events in the life of the great emancipator just as they are known to us of the present day. Among the auditors of this learned oration is Bicardo Bramantip, a higher critic, who disbelieves the whole story of Abraham Lincoln's life as narrated in the pages of history. So Bicardo at once sits down and writes this book to prove that Abraham Lincoln is a myth no more worthy of credence than the tales of Munchausen or the legends of the Alhambra. He takes as his criteria by which to judge of the truth or falsity of the facts of history the canons of criticism adopted by the higher critics of the present day in dealing with the Sacred Scriptures; and, using these canons (and no others), he establishes to his own satisfaction, at least, the mythical character of Abraham Lincoln and all the contemporary heroes of American history. He makes a stronger case against Lincoln than the higher critics have ever made against Moses, or any other hero of biblical story. Thus, with a keen reductio ad absurdum lance, the author completely routs the higher critics upon their own ground. We would like to see a reply to this book from the pen of a higher critic; but we expect to die without the sight No higher critic will ever be found who is foolhardy enough to make such an attempt. Those who have become bewildered by the high-sounding balderdash of the higher critics should be in haste to make the acquaintance of Bicardo Bramantip. He will enable them to form an accurate estimate of the worth of the so called higher criticism.

THANKSGIVING SERMONS AND OUTLINE ADDRESSES. Compiled and edited by William E. Ketcham, D. D. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

We are confident this volume will be welcomed by the clergy throughout the country. The Sermons and Outlines of Sermons are by prominent preachers of the day, and have been selected by the editor with discriminating care. The work will be found most suggestive to all those who are engaged in the work of the ministry, and especially to those who are entering upon its ardnous and important duties. Various are the legitimate ways the Christian minister may secure the needful preparation upon the fruitful theme of Thanksgiving. His primary resource must be God's own Word. He is, however, lacking in research and ill-qualified for this duty who fails to glean and appropriate from every field with prayerful care all help available. Those who have often traversed the fields in search of themes and material, and therefore whose skill and wisdom in selection is matured, can well render to those of lesser experience wholesome aid. A single suggestion may open in the reader's mind an unexpected fountain of thought from which shall flow healthful reflection and appropriate discourse. The work is evangelical, unsectarian and thoroughly practical. 12 mo., cloth, 330 pages, $1 50 postpaid.

NOTES.

The British steamship Montezuma left New Orleans, on the second, with 14,898 bales of cotton, besides a considerable amount of other freight. This is said to be the largest cargo of cotton ever carried by any ship in the world.

There are now eight Methodist congregations in Salt Lake City, five of which belong to the Utah Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, one to the African Methodist Episcopal, one to the Scandinavians, and one to the Free Methodists.

A revival meeting is in progress at Dryades Street Church. The pastor, Rev. F. S. Parker, is assisted by Rev. D. C. Browne. Bro. Browne is an interesting, earnest and forceful preacher. Congregations are large, and the prospects for a revival are encouraging.

The treasury of the Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference is empty. This means great privation to some, at least, of the veterans who are claimants on that fund. Let all our preachers see to it that the full assessment for this fund is brought up. There is no worthier claim, and none more easily raised.

Our correspondents who are writing on the holiness question will have to cultivate the grace of patience. We expect to publish not more than two or three articles on that subject in one issue, and, as our drawer is well supplied, it will be several weeks before some of those now on hand can make the acquaintance of the compositor.

A Catholic society in Wilkesbarre, Pa., refuses to allow its members to belong to the Knights of Pythias. Saloon keepers, however, are not, so far as we know, barred from membership in Catholic societies. A worse crime to belong to a benevolent society like the Knights of Pythias than to run a drunkard factory! And this is Christianity (?).

The sum of $1,100,000 bequeathed to the M. E. Church, South, by the late Robert A. Barnes, for the purpose of founding a hospital in the city of St. Louis, has been turned over by the executor of Mr. Barnes' estate to the trustees, who are making arrangements to found one of the best hospitals in the world. This is the largest bequest ever received in our church.

The Methodist Church has 445 deaconesses employed in Christ-like service, and divided by countries as follows: In America in 29 homes, 307; in Germany and Switzerland, 106; in India, in 6 homes, 18, and outside of homes, 12; in China, 2. The property owned for their uses is valued at $304,908. The number of religious calls made last year was 122,534.

A short time since the municipal authorities of New York appointed a commission to visit several of the leading cities of America to investigate their garbage system. The places visited were Montreal, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Atlanta. They report the system in use in Atlanta as the best. Atlanta uses a crematory, which, it is said, reduces garbage of every description to ashes without creating any bad odor. The bustling, bustling metropolis of the "Peanut State" will, doubtless, brag more than ever—i. e., if such a thing is possible.

The Review of Reviews, for November, is out in good time with its usual budget of good things. Its record of current events is full and reliable, and is presented in a very attractive style. It has a very interesting sketch of Oliver Wendell Holmes by E E. Hale.

Mr. W. T. Reese, president of an Anti-Saloon League in Bowling Green, Ohio, who has been making himself felt as a foe of the liquor traffic, has been warned by the saloon gang that he must cease his efforts in that direction or suffer for it. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Ministers expecting to visit Meridian during Conference will do well to hold up in their purchases in clerical-cut suits, as I have a fine line and at very low prices.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HANAY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

PEACE.

(Luke ii, 14; Col. i, 20; Rom. v, 1.)

On earth peace! Christ is the King of Peace. He it was who said: "Blessed are the peace-makers." The charms of peace are appreciated when the horrors of its opposite, war, are contemplated. Peace after the clash of arms. Peace after bitter contention. Peace after estrangement. Peace after uproar in the heart. May the King of Peace give us peace!

1. In the heart, individual peace. "The carnal mind is enmity against God." This enmity ceases when we

(1) Acknowledge our misdeeds.

(2) Ask God for forgiveness.

(3) Promise to lead a holy life.

2. In the family. Here estrangement is frequently found. But peace is restored and maintained when

(1) The family altar is kept intact.

(2) Parental authority is properly exercised.

(3) God is honored by jointly attending divine service.

3 In the church. It is true, that in the church militant there is, at times, unholy wrangling. But peace will reign in the church when

(1) The revival fires are burning instly.

(2) The preacher is deaf to scandal-mongers.

(3) The rich are not especially honored because of their riches.

4. In the country. The man who lusts for war is a demon. Its horrors are fearful. We shudder when we think of the carnage of the battlefield. Peace will be preserved

(1) When we learn to discriminate between patriotism and demagogism.

(2) When we cease to be "dumb, driven cattle," following the party per fas, per nefas; but vote as we pray.

(3) When the laws of the country are strictly executed regardless of social standing or money. Rebellion among the rabble crushed in its incipiency.

(4) When in all spheres of society God and God's Word are acknowledged as chief authority.

Words of Cheer.

Words of cheer are words of help. Words of gloom are words of harm. There is a bright side and a dark side to every phase of life, and to every hour of time If we speak of the bright side, we bring the brightness into prominence; if we speak of the dark side, we deepen its shadows. It is in our power to help or to hinder by a word any and every person whom we are with. If we see a look of health or of hope in the face of an acquaintance whom we casually meet, and we tell him so, he goes on his way with new life in his veins. If we see a look of failing strength and of heaviness of heart in one to whom we speak, and we emphasize the fact that he looks poorly, we give him a push downward as our contribution to the forces which affect his course. A look or a word can help or can harm our fellows. It is for us to give cheer or gloom as we pass on our way in life; and we are responsible for the results of our influence accordingly.—Sunday-School Times.

A Marvel of Cheapness.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible

FOR ONLY $6.1

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and we doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. HOME CIRCLE.

MOTHER'S HYMNS.

Hushed are those lips, their earthly song is ended;
The singer sleeps at last;
While I sit gazing at her arm-chair vacant,
And think of days long past.

The room still echoes with the old-time music,
As, singing soft and low
Those grand, sweet hymns the Christian's consolation,
She rocks her to and fro.

Some that can stir the heart like shouts of triumph
Of loud-toned trumpet's call,
Bidding the people prostrate fall before him,
"And crown him—Lord of all."

And tender notes, filled with melodious rapture,
That leaned upon his Word,
Rose in those strains of solemn, deep affection,
"I love thy kingdom, Lord."

Safe hidden in the wondrous "Rock of Ages,"
She bade farewell to fear;
Sure that her Lord would always gently lead her,
She read her title clear.

Joyful she saw "From Greenland's icy mountains"
The gospel flag unfurled;
And knew by faith "The morning light is breaking"
Over a sinful world.

"There is a fountain," how the tones triumphant
Rose in victorious strains!
"Filled with that precious blood, for all the ransomed, Drawn from Immanuel's veins."

Dear saint, in heavenly mansions long since folded,
Safe in God's fastering love,
She joins with rapture in the blissful chorus
Of those bright choirs above.
There, where no tears are known, no pain nor sorrow,
Safe beyond Jordan's roll,
She lives forever with her blessed Jesus,
The Lover of her soul.

Man—And How to Treat Him.

BY A HORSE.

When a man drops from sheer exhaustion or illness, promptly seize an end board or a cartstake and pound him on the head and on the ribs. If this does not recuperate him, kick him violently. This treatment will restore him if persistently administered.

If a man finds his load too heavy, and feels that it will seriously strain him to proceed, kick off a shaft or footboard and knock him down, and hammer him thoroughly with the board. This will give renewed energy, and he will make no more fuss. But do not, on any account, reduce the load. That would look too much like common sense or humanity, and he will probably never balk again when overloaded.

If a man refuses to drink when you offer him water, don't give him any for two days. That will "teach him" to be thirsty at any time you find it convenient to him. It is a good plan to ply the whip frequently on a man who is at work. No matter if he is doing his best, hit him now and then on "general principles," and to prevent him taking any comfort. If his load is not heavy, oblige him to go enough faster to make up for it. Work him hard enough to bring down the average life of man one-half, as is done with us—the unfortunate horse. If no whip is handy, use a club.

Tie your man's head back in an unnatural position, with his eyes up towards the sun. This will give him a "fine appearance," and "prevent him from stumbling." Of course, he will not be able to do much work in this position, but it makes him look smart; so it's all right. In Winter remove his clothing to prevent his taking cold. He will also "dry quicker" when you overwork him. You must hang a blanket on his back—but leave his neck and limbs exposed—when he is not at work. Men thus treated are "much healthier" than when allowed Winter clothing.

If it is not perfectly convenient to feed a man who is working for you at noon, let him go without, and by active use of the whip secure as much work as the food would have secured. Of course, it wears out his vitality and distresses him, but that is no matter. Put tight shoes on your man, and keep them there until he is very lame with corns. To change his shoes often costs money—not much, but some, and lameness and misery are of no account if you can save a few shillings' worth of shoes in the year. When you hire a man do not be hampered by any silly humane notions. Get all you can out of him. True nobility consists in getting money, not in decency or kindness, or what some noodles term "character." Get money, even if it is all blood-stained. These are correct principles, I am sure, for I learned them when a colt from my master, who treated all his horses on this plan.—Author unknown.

A Word about Boys.

Treat your boys as though they were of some importance, if you would have them manly and self-reliant.

Be careful of the little courtesies. Your can not expect your boy to be respectful, and kind, unless you first set him the example.

If you would have your boy make you his confidant, take an active interest in all that he does. Don't be too critical, but ask for his views and opinions at all times.

Don't keep your boys in ignorance of things they should know. It is not the wholesome truth, but the unwholesome way it is acquired, that ruins many a young man.

Don't act as if you thought your boy amounted to nothing, nor be continually making comparisons between him and some neighbor's son, to his disadvantage; nothing will dishearten him quicker.

Don't think that anything is good enough for the boys, and that they don't care for nice things. Have their rooms fitted up as nicely as possible. Let them understand that their rooms are to be kept in order, and the result will justify your pains.

Furnish your boy with good, wholesome reading matter. Have him read to you and with you. Discuss with him what you read, and draw out his opinions and thoughts upon the subjects. Help him to think early for himself.

Make home a pleasant place; see to it that the boys don't have to go somewhere else to secure proper freedom and companionship. Take time and pains to make them feel comfortable and contented, and they will not want to spend their evenings away from home.

Pick your son's associates. See to it that he has no friends that you do not know about it. Take an interest in all his troubles and pleasures, and have him feel perfectly free to invite his friends to the house. Take a little pains to make him and his friends comfortable and happy in his own home. He will not be slow to appreciate your kindness.—Mother's Companion.

To Office Girls.

As many of the girls of to day are employed in banks, offices, stores and many other of the employments once thought beneath their dignity to fill, I would like to say a few words to my sister workers. In the first place, girls, if you are about to enter some place of trust, make up your mind to fill that position in the best possible manner. Do not do your work simply for the pay there is in it, and, as Spurgeon has said, "Never mind where you happen to work; care more about your work."

Nearly every business man has a system of his own, and a way in which he wishes his work done; therefore, study your employer's wishes; study your work as you did your books at school, and do not wait to be told of every little task. If you are a girl of quick perception, you can easily tell when a little assistance from you would be acceptable to your tired employer, even if it is not in your particular line of work. Conform to his method of work, unless you have a far superior one and can convince him of it. If you should be asked to stay a few moments after hours, to finish some important work, do it cheerfully. You will find in the end that it will pay to do these little things, and, above all, always conduct yourself as a lady. Never allow a frivolous or slighting remark to pass your lips in your place of business. You will find if you choose your language you will receive a greater amount of respect.

Do your work neatly. Never appear at the office in a soiled dress, or dressed as though ready for some ball or opera; but have a plain, neat-fitting gown of some sober color. Do not think that some old maid, who is too old to sympathize with a young girl's first experience in office life, has written this article. I am still young, and can enjoy a good time, but I know that the place for a good time is outside of the business life, and you must not enter the business world expecting to have a thoroughly smooth and easy time, for you will be disappointed if you do. We must work if we would win. —Housekeeper.

The Training of Children.

Almost all who have thought deeply upon the subject recognize that the training of the young on this continent is a matter of special difficulty. Our conditions and manner of life are such that a liberty is given to the children which often generates into license. The average parent is ready to run to the other extreme from the fancied or real harshness of other days, which was based upon the words of the wise man, "He that spareth the rod hateth his child." What is needed on the part of parents is personal thought, personal care, personal attention to their children while they are in the plastic stage. We are to remember that children are a solemn trust to be reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. There must be definite Christian teaching and training in good habits, if children are expected to be useful in their day and generation. The child, when left to itself, will be almost sure to go wrong. In this connection there is an old proverb which is true of spiritual as of natural husbandry, "A year's seeding, and seven years' weeding."

Meek souls there are, who little dream
Their daily strife an angel's theme,
Or that the rod they take so calm
Shall prove in heaven a martyr's palm.

—John Keble.

Golden Honors

from the Golden Coast

...for...

Dr. Price's Baking Powder

California, empire of the Pacific, salutes the world. Her Midwinter Fair closed in a midsummer blaze of glory. Second only to the Columbian Exposition in extent, variety and splendor, the coast display was a veritable triumph. Out of her abundance the state poured her treasures—and the nations of the earth came to aid her in her noble exhibition.

Memorable were the exhibits—of gold and silver, of wheat and oil, of fruit and wine, of silk and wool—of all that man and nature could combine to produce. And no exhibit attracted more attention or excited warmer approval than that of Official tests showed it to be highest in leavening power, purest in quality, and most efficient in results of all baking powders made. Accordingly, the Highest Award and Gold Medal were conferred on Dr. Price's at the Midwinter Fair.

The triumph at San Francisco confirms the victory at Chicago. The Midwinter Fair verdict sustains and vindicates the bestowal of highest honors on Dr. Price's by the jury of awards at the World's Columbian Exposition.

HYGIENE.

Diseases Due to Drink.

WINE AND BEER ARE NOT LESS INJURIOUS THAN THE STRONGER LIQUORS.

Turning from the effects of alcoholism on the nervous system to its effect on the other organs, and bearing, of course, in mind that it is always difficult to determine whether this latter is direct or only secondary as a result of neurotic disease, we find numerous instances both of acute and chronic diseases of the mucous membrane of the pharynx, stomach and intestines. These are important, not only from their frequent occurrence, but especially for their bearing on the general alimentation. I believe most physicians will agree with me in the view that inflammation of the stomach and bowels in adults is almost invariably due to alcoholic poisoning.

But alcohol exerts its essential and most significant influence on the vital organs by being taken up in the circulation and thus brought into direct contact with their cellular tissue. We have no clearer evidence of the direct action of a poison in producing primary cell death than is afforded by the action of alcohol on the liver, producing liver cirrhosis. Typical liver cirrhosis was found in three per cent. of all the male bodies examined at the Leipsic Pathological Institute.

But the organic changes which my own experience compels me to place in the first rank as denoting the most injurious effects of alcoholic indulgence are the diseases of the muscles of the heart and its nervous apparatus, the diseases of the arteries and of the kidneys.

But while it has long been known that delirium tremens, neurosis and cirrhose liver owe their existence to alcoholic poisoning, it is by no means generally recognized that chronic heart and kidney diseases are due to the same cause. And yet the practical significance of precisely this form of alcoholic poisoning, apart even from its frequency, is of the highest, from the fact that these diseases are induced not so much by the use of concentrated alcohol, but especially by heavy beer drinking. This habit of excessive beer drinking is very widely prevalent among the cultivated classes and claims its victims among men who regard the drinking of schnapps as an act of moral degradation. It is not only that the quantity of alcohol consumed by heavy beer drinkers is excessive, but the consumption of liquid involved in the habit is no less excessive and injurious. To this, too, must be added as hardly less prejudicial the consumption of an extra and undue amount of nutritive matter contained in the beer.

All these conditions tend to that disease which is rarely absent in steady beer drinkers. The prime anatomical change exhibits itself as hypertrophy of the muscles of the heart, especially of the left ventricle. This is the result of a continuous overtaxing of the heart's powers. The prime factor here is the excessive amount of water which before it can again be given off by the kidneys, skin and lungs must be taken up by the blood and maintained in motion by the heart. The excess of nutritive matter furnished by the beer contributes to the same result.

Kidney diseases as a result of alcoholism are still more frequent, and with wine and beer drinkers the extra labor imposed on the kidneys by excess of fluid renders them especially susceptible to the large influence of the accompanying alcohol.

Finally, there is another interesting group of diseases resulting from alcoholic action in disturbing and upsetting the chemical processes of assimilation. The leading types of diseases due to this cause are gout, diabetes and fatty degeneration of the heart, and while allowing that in many cases alcoholic action may be supplemented by contributory causes I think it will be apparent that the sum of the evils properly ascribable to alcohol is such as to warn us physicians that here is a matter in which all our forces should be enlisted.—Dr. Adolph Strumpell.

BLACKBERRY CAKE.—Three and a half cups of flour, one cup of butter, one cup of sugar, yelks of four eggs, two spoons of baking powder, two cups of blackberry jam, big spoon of nutmeg, teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon each of spice and cloves. Bake in layers, and put cooked icing between layers.—A. Barefield.

Disease follows a run-down system with the liver inactive and the blood disordered. Pimples, Boils, Sores, Carbuncles, Ulcers, and like manifestations of impure blood, should be driven out of the system with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

MRS. KUHN.

MRS. KUHN, of 618 W. 16th Street, New York City, writes as follows: "It pleases me to state that I had a running sore upon my neck, and had it operated upon three times, and still it was not cured. I was also run down very much. There was a decided change after using 'Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.' I took a few bottles and was soon cured. Later my husband had a lump behind his ear; he tried your medicine, and one bottle cured him. I shall always recommend your medicines.

PARKER—FRANK A PARKER was born April 7, 1841, in Dinwiddie county, Va., and fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 18, 1894 He was educated at Emory and Henry College, leaving in 1861 for New Orleans, where he enlisted in the Confederate Army. He was a faithful soldier; was in prison at Camp Chase for eighteen months. At the close of the war he lived first at Baltimore, then in New Orleans, where he was a salesman in the dry goods store of D. H. Holmes. Afterwards he went to Smyth county, Va., and was for ten or twelve years agent of the Holstein Woolen Mills. During this period, although a traveling man, he missed Sunday-school but once—then on account of sickness. Finally he located in Abingdon, Va., where he remained, a true and worthy citizen, until his death. In August, 1872, he was married to Miss Virginia Wiley, daughter of Dr. E. E. Wiley. Three bright children, with their widowed mother, are left to mourn his loss. He was a true husband, a tender father, teaching by precept and example the good and perfect way. Zealous in his effort to make a happy home, the same zeal characterized him in the house and service of God. He was true, guileless, unselfish, devoted to Christ and the church, and thoroughly loyal to all the relations of life. One who knew him well said, "I never talked with him but I felt I was a better man." Another, "I have known him for fifteen years, and have always found him the same pure, good man." And still another, "Frank A. Parker was a man of faith in God—that so rarely found, an honest man—a true Christian."—Condensed from Holston Methodist.

NOTE.—Bro. Parker was the son of our beloved father in Israel, Rev. J. D. Parker, of New Orleans—a worthy son of a worthy father.

FRIEND.

MCVOY—MRS. ANNA DUBOSE MCVOY (nee Dubose) was born at Darlington Court-house, S. C., Aug. 19, 1837, and died, after an illness of a few days, at Mansfield, La., July 30, 1894. She was married to the Rev. A. D. McVoy at Columbus, Miss., Dec. 20, 1867.

It was the privilege of this writer to know Sister McVoy intimately, being her pastor for ten years, during which period she passed through the bitterest sorrow of her life in the death of her eldest son, A. D. McVoy, Jr.—a young man of marked ability, exceptional sweetness of character, adorned by a pure and holy life. It was in this sore affliction that the character of Sister McVoy was revealed in all of its beauty and Christian grace. She was indeed a most remarkable woman. Naturally of great refinement, she had molded and shapen her life after the Word of God and the pattern of her Savior. In her childhood she joined the church, accepted Christ as her Lord, and in all after life she sat at the feat of Jesus and learned wisdom of him. It was a benediction to a preacher to visit her. The Bible was her chart, and the will of God her pleasure. And how perfect was her understanding of the Scriptures! Its letter was committed and its spirit lived. Simple in her faith, child-like in her trust, she could by the light of the Holy Spirit trace the infinite love of the Father in the Word he had given, and with confidence point to the cross of Christ, and exclaim, "Behold, behold the Lamb!"

Her religion was of the Pauline type. She walked by faith and profited by experience. How she seemed to cling to the arm of her Lord, and to dwell under "the shadow of the Most High God!" Sin in her presence was ever rebuked by whomsoever committed, not with the "better-than-thou" spirit, but righteous indignation that her Lord had been dishonored and the "Son of God" put "to an open shame."

She recognized her home to be her realm, and the crown of motherhood to rest upon her brow, and there she ruled well and wisely with the scepter of love. Six children—three sons and three daughters—were thus trained by her love and holy example. She lived to see two of her boys enter the ministry, and with faith affirm to a sin-cursed world the truth which they had heard from a mother's lips, and at her knee touched "the hem of the garment" of Him whom but to touch is to receive virtue.

One son, her beloved Bessie, who was called to his reward just one year ago, was seen by her in her last moments, and her expression was, "He will introduce me to my Savior."

When she knew that her end was at hand, her first thought was of her God, and with holy trust she repeated the twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd;" then, calling each of her daughters by name, she gave to them words of counsel, and left a message of love for her "preacher boy," who was absent in Western Texas telling to men (as mother had told to him) "of Jesus and his love;" then, as the true wife, her affection centered upon her absent husband, when a tear glistened in her eye, and calling her daughter Bessie, she said to her: "Take care of your poor father; he will miss me so." Thus, when all earthly ties and obligations had been adjusted, her spirit looked unto her God, the needed grace was bestowed, and, with the light of faith in her eye, she said to those around her bedside: "It is so easy to cut loose from this old earth, you all do not know."

It was thus that Sister McVoy—a noble Christian, true to her church, true to her God, true to her family, and true to her friends—calmly fell on sleep, with the smile of trust upon her lips. "She is not dead, but sleepeth."

T. K. F.

MCKINNEY.—Died, on Oct. 1, near Houghton, La., HATTIE, daughter of James and Fannie McKinney.

Hattie was about seventeen years old. She attached herself to the M. E. Church two years ago, and was a trusting, humble Christian. Although the angel of death has visited this home and pointed its sickle, with unerring aim, toward a loved daughter and sister, she has only been taken from her home below to one above, there to radiate the golden wreath around the throne of God, where family circles will never more be broken. Anthems are swelling through the lofty domes, and gushing forth in glad, sweet echoes, because another soul has been ushered by angels into its portals. What a comforting thought to meet a risen Savior, with our loved ones and all the redeemed family of God!

Parents, sisters, brothers, friends, who have been bereft of your loved one, let this be a beacon light through all your trials, and let it guide you, when your little barques are assailed by adverse winds, to the port where no ships have ever stranded. God sees all your sorrows, and in his own good time he will gather you, who are faithful, into the great fold, to meet your loved one "who is not dead, but sleepeth."

BISHOP—JOHN F. BISHOP was born in Newton county, Miss., July 24, 1858, and died near Conehatta, Miss., Aug. 15, 1894 He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, August, 1883

Bro. Bishop was one of the most consecrated Christian young men I ever knew. He has very acceptably filled the office of steward and Church Conference secretary. He was always ready to do what the church required of him. He was a faithful servant, and has gone to receive his reward. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." He leaves father and mother, with brothers and sisters, to mourn his loss.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

NABORS—ANNIE BELL, daughter of E. R. and M. B. Nabors, was born April 29, 1891, and died Oct. 8, 1894.

When the writer last saw little Annie Bell, she was the picture of health and beauty. She was so sweet-spirited that she attracted and won the affections of all whose privilege it was to know her. In temperament she was more angelic than human. But, alas! she has gone to be with angels. Father and mother are trying to live to meet her.

May our heavenly Father help them, and may the Holy Spirit keep the little brother and sister in the fold of Christ until they all go hence to be with little Annie Bell!

TURNAGE—Death claims all ages for his own. Death has transplanted from this earth to the place God had in reserve for her, our friend and sister, Miss N. A. TURNAGE.

She was born Dec. 5, 1876, and departed this life Oct. 13, 1894, aged seventeen years ten months and eight days. She had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for several years, and died triumphant in the faith.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved, and help them to prepare to meet their loved ones on the other shore! Her pastor,

J. C. ELLIS.

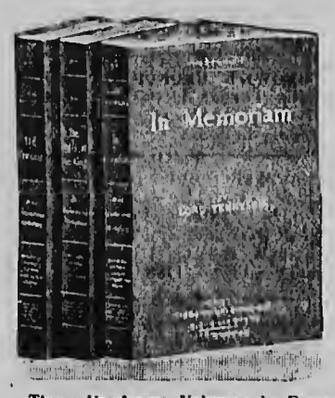
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM,

IDYLLS OF THE KING,

THE PRINCESS.



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the artmotive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by masculine imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Fifty persons were badly injured. It is thought four will die.

A large quantity of cotton, oil cake, cotton seed meal, staves, molasses, etc., was also consumed. Most of the loss was in cotton, 4 000 bales of the staple being burned. The loss is about $170,000. Lord Salisbury's shirking of the task of formulating a scheme for the reform of the House of Lords, while admitting that a reconstruction of that body is advisable, is the theme of general regret on the part of the conservative press.

The coming conference of the leaders of the McCarthyites of the Irish parliamentary party will doubtless decide to support the government, provided a resolution be submitted to the House of Commons sufficiently drastic in its opposition to the Upper House.

Fung Wung Chung, a city in the Chinese province of Liautung, near the Corean frontier, has been captured by the Japanese. This victory leaves the Moukden road open to the Japanese, as the Chinese are unlikely to offer further resistance to the advance of the Japanese army.

It is said that China is disposed to conclude a peace with Japan on the basis of a guarantee of the independence of Corea and the payment of an indemnity, the amount to be fixed by the powers. It is reported that China has invited the representatives of the powers to intervene to secure peace.

The trouble in Bluefields, Nicaragua, which attracted so much attention some months ago, has finally come to an end. Amnesty has been granted to the Americans who were imprisoned when the Clarence government was overthrown, and they have been allowed to return to the little Central American town, with the understanding that, should their conduct prove satisfactory for a limited period, they will be restored to their full rights as foreign residents.

Danger From Catarrh.

The most important feature about that very common complaint, catarrh in the head, is its tendency to develop into bronchitis or consumption, that destroyer which causes more deaths in this country than any other disease. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do but little good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The funeral of Alexander III., late Czar of Russia, has been fixed to occur between Nov. 15 and 20, and the wedding of Nicholas II. (his successor) and Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt will take place a few days afterwards.

HAWTHORNE'S BEST WORKS.

Four Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large type on good paper and substantially bound by a new process.

Mosses from an Old Manse,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Another delightful companion for idle hours is this collection of magazine papers, which Hawthorne entitled "Mosses from an Old Manse." Like all his works, it is distinguished for its simplicity and truth.

Twice-Told Tales,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Hawthorne, the most distinctly American and by far the most popular of our writers, has given the world an undying book in "Twice-Told Tales." They have all the felicity of expression, as well as the subtlety of thought and insight, which are the special charm of the author of "The Scarlet Letter."

The House of the Seven Gables,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

This masterpiece of Hawthorne's is full of the imaginative charm of romance. In felicity of touch, its author is unapproached by any writer since his own day. The work is, perhaps, the purest piece of poetic prose in all the range of American literature.

The Scarlet Letter,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

A romance of intense interest, exhibiting extraordinary power of mental analysis and graphic description. For an artistic exposition of Puritanism, as modified by New England colonial life, we have nothing like it in our literature.

FUTURES.

BY BISHOP KEENER.

A lofty mart,
Where Grecian art
And Parian polish centre;
Where Fortune's breast,
As yet unpressed,
Enticing, bids you enter.

"'Tis short and long,
But nothing wrong,
And, either way, 'tis certain;
'Tis something sure,
The poor man's cure,
Gold—just beyond the curtain."

'Tis a cavern deep,
Whose sides are steep,
Where spirits pass and shiver;
A ghastly dual,
Death's secret seal,
A clinch that holds forever.

A hissing sound,
The wheel goes round,
His "friend" is fortune vouching;
'Tis Satan's lair,
Hell's private stair—
I see the "figer" crouching!

A dreadful steep,
Whence fortunes leap,
And phantom margins hover;
'Tis Fate's dark nod,
Rayless of God,
The Pit without a cover.

Hark! Death's wild cry!
Oh, hear it nigh!
His wife and children screaming!
I saw a flash—
I heard the crash—
A floor with red blood streaming!

His prayers he said,
And went to bed—
"Felt bad, but did not mind it."
The night has gone,
His spirit flown—
And angels can not find it!

You say 'tis right,
"Thou fool, this night,"
Gleams like a bolt of thunder;
Such wealth and greed
Do harpies feed,
That tear the soul asunder.

So many dead,
With right hands red—
A swift and livid river;
A lurid tide,
A cataract wide,
That leaps and falls forever.

A Circuit of the Inland Sea.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

On the twenty-seventh ultimo I left Kobe for a circuit of the Inland Sea, called in Japanese "Seto-Uchi"—"The Sea within the Straits." Around this beautiful inner ocean our mission work has been very wisely located, and to visit the several stations this journey was begun. In no section of the Empire is the population so dense, and nowhere is the appeal for the gospel more plaintive and powerful. Not that the people ask for it, but because their pitiful condition demands it. Some parts of this field are fairer to the eye of beauty than I have elsewhere seen, and from two or three of the provinces have come many of the historic leaders of the country. Our brethren, therefore, have access to as good territory and as fine a type of citizenship as can be found in the Mikado's dominions.

We were to come first by rail to Hiroshima, accompanied by Bro. Waters, but delay in receiving his passport made it necessary for Bro. Moseley to be guide and guard. Police officers interpret treaty laws very literally and rigidly, and, though Bro. Waters was only returning to his home, they would not allow him to go aboard the train. Hiroshima was reached about eleven o'clock at night, and, taking possession of Bro. Waters' house, we found a delightful rest for weary travelers. This is a city of 80,000 people, and one of the neatest, cleanest, prettiest in the land. It is military headquarters for the department of the South, and just now, during the Japan-China war, is only second to Tokio in political importance. Here the soldiers are camped, equipped, and shipped to Corea. By every train they are coming, and by every transport they are leaving for the seat of war. There is the stir of battle about the barracks and along the "hatoba"—the wharf—as armed battalions march and countermarch, and vast military stores are being packed and hurried out to the big ships anchored in the harbor. We visited the army hospital, where wounded soldiers from Corea are being cared for by the Red Cross Society. There are thirty-two now under treatment, and, from the extensive preparations made, the government must expect a long and bloody war. Wonderful has been the work of this society. All honor to Miss Clara Barton and her great-hearted associates. This department has been turned over to that organization by the Imperial Government, I understand, and the hospitals here are in charge of their officers. We were received with marked courtesy by the manager, but could not go through the wards without a special permit from the commanding officer.

This war excitement demoralizes everything, and interrupts all church work. The Presbyterian Church in Hiroshima is used for a hospital, and notice has been given that ours will be needed for the recruiting officers. The government claims the use of any building for army purposes by simply posting a notice on the door.

At ten o'clock we had service in the chapel of the girls' school—to one, at least, a profitable, spiritual occasion. The improvised congregation was not large, but the interest was manifest, and the attention intense. A splendid property, and admirable in all its appointments, have we in that school. The building, burned three years ago, has been replaced by one more tasteful and commodious. And never have I seen one more beautifully, neatly kept—a valuable object-lesson to every girl who will some day be a home-keeper. All were delighted at the prospect of Miss Gaines' return, who is expected this week, accompanied by some valuable recruits. She has wrought a good work, and her influence will abide. Like an oasis in a desert, that Christian school for girls was refreshing and enriching to a lonely traveler in this thirsty land. What a blessing it has been! what a benediction it will be!

Our membership at Hiroshima is about one hundred, and in addition to regular and frequent service in the church, there is preaching in two street chapels, which is often attended by large and curious crowds. We have also three other schools—one for the poor—besides the girls' school, and are thus finding entrance into many young hearts and ears and homes.

Returning to Hiroshima the following Saturday morning, a new phase of Japanese life was seen, and other places of interest visited. We were given a shim-bo-kwai—a kind of social entertainment—which on this occasion assumed the form of a reception. To me it was a delightful, suggestive coincidence, it being my silver-wedding day, and the anniversary of my birth. Not privileged to spend it with the dear ones at home, I rejoiced to celebrate the day with a company of native Christians in Japan. The shim-bo-kwai is peculiar to this country. We had first religious exercises, then two addresses of welcome and responses; afterward a rendition of some things strictly Japanese. We had the "sword-dance," the "No-dance"—performed for the entertainment of royalty—fencing by experts, an amusing speech by a minister, etc.—all concluding with refreshments and tender good-bys. The "dances" were only in name, so no one need get nervous about the church in Japan.

Another place visited during the day was a large crematory, where human dead are turned to ashes in three hours. In front of the immense brick furnace, containing twenty-two ovens, divided into three classes, there are shrines for the Buddhist burial service. These are also separated into three classes—thus carrying caste into the coffin and oven. The first class are charged four yen (dollars), the second two, and the third one. The ashes of certain parts of the body are preserved, placed in a small earthen jar, and returned to relatives the next day. Just now the average number of cremations there is ten a day. The bodies are brought in the afternoon and burned at night. I was almost sickened by the odors of the ovens, and felt a chill of horror at the thought of thus disposing of these "temples of the Holy Ghost." How much more in accord with the Christian's hope, and solacing to heart-sorrow, is our simple, sad rite of Christian burial!

We visited also a large newspaper office—the Daily Gei-hi-nichi-nichi Shimbun—and witnessed the process of manufacturing current vernacular reading for this reading people. As we entered, the editor, in a state of comfortable undress, was in the press room. He retired quickly at the approach of foreign visitors, and after awhile received us in the editorial rooms, elaborately robed and seated on the floor. We kneeled on mats, and bowed as profoundly as our avoirdupois would allow when exchanging personal greetings. This and every newspaper in the Empire is under government espionage and supervision. Every editorial of a political nature, and especially every account of military movements, is submitted in proof to official inspection and revision before given to the public.

We left by boat Tuesday afternoon, with Bro. Shaw for chaperon and Bro. Uzaki for interpreter, to meet an engagement that night at Iwakuni. Here we found a nice little city of 12,000 persons, and a congregation that quite filled our small, but handsome church. It had been announced that there would be "very large preaching" that night, and the people came out "for to see." A noisy crowd outside tried to disturb the worship, but failed. Those present listened attentively, and expressed themselves as grateful for the coming and message of their American brethren. We have a few faithful members here, including the intelligent and pious wife of the representative in the Imperial Diet. After a good night's sleep on the floor of a Japanese hotel, we started out for a twenty-mile ride in jinrikshas to Obatake and Yanai, purposing to take steamer at the latter place, late in the afternoon, for Metagerie. Our road was along the shore of the beautiful Inland Sea, with wooded mountains shading us on one side, and cool, salt breezes fanning us on the other. Bro. Waters overtook us about ten o'clock, having left Hiroshima by jinriksha at one o'clock during the night. His coming was specially enjoyed, as he brought the latest American mail, with long letters from home. Good news from a far country relieves the tedium and tiresomeness of travel. For the rest of that journey the jinriksha was as comfortable as a Pullman, and the coolie as swift and steady as a Baldwin locomotive. Our thoughts were over the sea, and not on the blessing sun above us or the rough places beneath us. On that trip we passed through ten or twelve large villages, besides the towns of Obatake and Yanai, with two and eight thousand population respectively, and where we have chapels and a few members. If laborers could be secured, every one of these villages should be occupied. As it is, our brethren can only stop by the way for a few words of exhortation, and to distribute tracts. The field is yet hardly touched, cities and towns are being worked, but the thousands of villages in which the great body of the people reside, and from which will come the strength of the church, are yet without the privileges of the gospel.

Leaving Yanai late in the evening, we took steamer for Metagerie, where we arrived about three o'clock in the morning. After a few hours' rest and an enjoyable breakfast, thanks to Mrs. Shaw, who can paint a picture and order her household with equal genius, we took jinrikshas for a twelve-mile ride to Yamaguchie. This is the capital of the Ken or province, and a city of over 12,000. Here we were on historic ground. The native place of Count Ito, the present Prime Minister, and for hundreds of years famous for statesmen and military leaders, this province has exerted great influence in the Empire. We had services at eleven o'clock in our well-built chapel, attended not by a large, but an apparently much interested, congregation. Before the benediction was pronounced our little conventicle was disturbed by the appearance of a police office demanding our passports. It had been announced that Bishop Wilson would preach. So, after examining our papers, the little upstart representative of the government demanded to know where "Konto-kn (Bishop) Wilson" was. He seemed to suspect that we had another contraband compatriot hid out somewhere, and elaborate explanations were necessary in order to satisfy his official conscience.

Over at the college located there, founded and endowed by a nobleman, and quite well equipped, we found a cordial welcome and most courteous treatment. It is largely patronized, and destined, with other national schools, to work vast changes in this country. I fear they will not be toward Christianity unless the church girds up her strength, and renews her aggressive movements upon the strongholds of Buddhism. Instead of a chapel, there was a large "hall for moral instruction," in which, of course, the name of our Christ is never mentioned. The young are being educated away from the truth. Still this eagerness for knowledge must forever overthrow the blind superstitions of the centuries, and the church should be alert to turn this tide of restless thought toward God. How I wish we could double our forces at once around this Inland Sea!

Returning to Metagerie, we had service at night in a street chapel which was filled from all the regions round about.

The next day we rode seventeen miles by jinriksha to Tokuyama, a city of 10,000, and another point on Bro. Shaw's circuit. Here we rested a few hours, preached to a good congregation, and took passage at nine o'clock for an all-night ride across the sea to Hiroshima, with the privilege of sleeping (?) on deck. Bro. Shaw has the zeal of a true evangelist, and the courage of a martyr. He has fifteen chapels already, and is eager to move on to new territory. Thus our brethren are working up to their utmost strength in this depressing climate in order to feed the hungry thousands with the Bread of Life. As we passed through the villages it was both amazing and pathetic to note the excited curiosity of the people. Children followed us as American boys do the street procession of a traveling menagerie, while the older people stood and wondered at the meaning of this foreign cavalcade.

Better than seeing the sights has been this circuit of the sea. This hand-to-hand work on the field has revealed the difficulties and dangers, the hopes and fears, the possibilities and responsibilities, of the church here and in the home land. I thank God for these labors, but joyous weeks.

How the Bible Has Been Demolished.

The following is an extract from H. L. Hastings' famous lecture on "The Inspiration of the Bible," three million copies of which have been sold, and concerning which D. L. Moody, after hearing it, said he would walk ten miles to hear it again:

They overthrew the Bible a century ago, in Voltaire's time—entirely demolished the whole thing. In less than a hundred years, said Voltaire, Christianity will have been swept from existence, and will have passed into history. Infidelity ran riot through France, red-handed and impious. A century has passed away. Voltaire has "passed into history," and not very respectable history, either; but his old printing-press, it is said, has since been used to print the Word of God, and the very house where he lived is packed with Bibles—a depot for the Geneva Bible Society. Thomas Paine demolished the Bible, and finished it off finally; but after he had crawled despairingly into a drunkard's grave, in 1809, the book took such a leap that since that time more than twenty times as many Bibles have been made and scattered through the world as ever were made before since the creation of man. Up to the year 1800 from four to six million copies of the Scriptures, in some thirty different languages, comprised all that had been produced since the world began. Eighty years later, in 1880, the statistics of eighty different Bible societies which are now in existence, with their innumbered agencies and auxiliaries, report more than 165,000,000 Bibles, Testaments, and portions of Scripture, with two hundred and six new translations, distributed by Bible societies alone since 1804, to say nothing of the unknown millions of Bibles and Testaments which have been issued and circulated by private publishers throughout the world. For a book that has been exploded so many times, this book still shows signs of considerable life.

Walk round about Jerusalem. When some one tells you that our religion is dying, count the churches that rise every month; count the revivals of a year; compare the statistics of this year with those of 1860; take up one by one the fruits of vitality now and then. It will do you good. It thrills you to see how goodly the city of God looks, sitting upon the hills of truth, and defended by the best manhood of the world. Count the towers. Go over the list of the beauties and the defenses of the faith, all the way round from pure morals to entire sanctification; all the way from an inspired Book to a living ministry, from holy living to holy dying, from grace to glory. It will do you good to count the towers of Zion. And don't forget that you are to learn the lesson so well and thoroughly that you can tell it to your children, and so impress them with the marvelous story that it will go on being told and never neglected or forgotten. Our city of God needs only to be seen, described, kept as an everlasting remembrance before the intelligence of mankind. Mark it well—bulwarks, towers, beautiful situation—and compel others to go round it, mark, and count, by the earnestness of your story of your own inspection of Zion.—N. W. Advocate.

The Brooks Memorial College.

This desired and needed enterprise has been before the Methodists of Sardis, Holly Springs, Grenada and Corinth districts for about five months. In all of the discussions of the subject which have come to our ears, we have not heard man, woman or child say that he whose memory we thus seek to perpetuate is unworthy, or that the end contemplated—"A home for poor, but worthy, young men while preparing themselves for the conflicts and responsibilities of life"—is less so. No, indeed, no; the name of "Uncle Joe Brooks" throughout this entire section is as ointment poured forth. The larger part of his noble and useful life as a preacher was spent in three of the districts named, both as presiding elder and pastor. To no man are we indebted more largely for the development and growth of our beloved church, and the consistency and holy aspirations of our people, than he. There is a special fitness in the erection of this cottage on the campus of Millsaps College. No man among us had more sympathy and consideration for struggling young men than our beloved and sainted father. A number of the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, both young and in the prime of life, he called familiarly, and rightfully, too, "my boys." This interest was not only expressed in kind and encouraging words, but by helping with his means to educate them, and by taking them into his own home, while preparing for life's work. This preacher will always lovingly remember the kindness and generosity of this good man.

Our Methodism could not compliment herself more than to erect this monument to the memory of one of her most untiring, faithful and loyal sons.

Just at this time additional buildings for the accommodation of this class of young men in whom our brother was so deeply interested while living, are much needed at Millsaps College. The authorities are becoming embarrassed for want of room.

We have a young man in the bounds of this district called of God to preach the gospel, a wonderfully rich experience, and otherwise promising to the church, who is, with his wife, ready to take charge of this cottage, so as to equip himself for the itinerant ministry.

Now is the church's opportunity in this section. God is daily calling and stirring us to duty. Respect for the memory of the translated, and our responsibility to provide for the future church, alike appeal to our loyalty and liberality.

Now is the time to help. Let no one excuse himself. Give 25, 50, 75 cents; $1, $2.50, $5, $10. Will not our preachers present and urge this matter now? Be sure and report to Bro. P. T. Calliocott, secretary and treasurer, Coldwater, Miss., amounts collected, and don't fail to bring to Sardis, when you come to Conference, money for the memorial cottage. We can not afford to fail. Failure means disaster.

In the Living Present.

Prof. T. Crudli, the celebrated Italian bacteriologist, has discovered the microbe of malaria. He holds that it is the product of the soil, not of the water. Marshes are dangerous only when not covered with water. Soil covered with grass is harmless. Stagnant water may produce other ailments, but not malaria.

The election is over. The campaign speakers can now rehabilitate their conscience. During the canvass they seem to have acted on the idea of the small boy who was worrying his mother about the omniscience and ubiquity of conscience. Conscience, mother said, knows everything and is everywhere. "If everywhere," replied the boy, "it is in this inkstand, too. The inkstand I will now cork up."

The Church Congress (Episcopal) in England absorbed much attention. Bishop Bickersteth astonished his auditors by saying, without any qualification, that St. Paul had been a widower. It seems that he embraced Archdeacon Farrar's opinion on that subject as final. Dr. Farrar, as is well known, expresses that view in his book, "Biography of St. Paul." But neither Bishop Bickersteth nor Archdeacon Farrar are infallible.

The speeches of Prince Bismarck—terse, abrupt, pointed—have a great similarity to those of Oliver Cromwell. Interrogated by an interviewer if he had ever studied the latter, he replied that he had not even read them. Inquired, what English author enjoyed special favor with him, he remarked "Carlyle was a writer of remarkable acumen. I'm fond of the products of his pen. When young I enjoyed Byron; but now I'm sobered down, finding pleasure in reading Tom Moore."

At the Preachers' Meeting, last week, Bishop Keener is reported to have said: "The telescope brings distances near. The microscope makes wondrous revelations. Both reveal what the naked eye could not see. But in either case we are oppressed with the reflection that though, with the aid of these instruments, we see what would be otherwise invisible, more, much more, is hid in darkness. 'Tis the same in religious experience. Divine illumination, additional blessings, reveal follies hitherto hid. And there is darkness beyond. On the other hand, acquisition of divine grace indicates infinite possibilities."

Gen. William Booth, chief of the Salvation Army, will spend a few months in the United States. At the Carnegie Music Hall, New York, during a reception attended by 5,000 people, he was the recipient of much honor. In an address he spoke of the incipiency of his life-work. Three causes had led to a permanent organization of the Salvation Army. 1. The churches would not receive his converts. It was known that formerly they were occupants of the slums. 2. The converts, though no longer unwashed and uncombed, did not wish to join existing churches. 3. There was a latent desire in him to organize a separate church. His address is said to have been of dramatic and intense interest.

Editorial Notes.

The new Russian Czar announces it as his purpose to pursue the same peaceful foreign policy which was the chief characteristic of his father's reign. It is to be hoped that he will be true to his promise, as he has it in his power to prove a firebrand among the nations, if he so elects.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Holston Conference has undertaken the task of establishing an orphanage. Work will commence when fifty acres of land and $50,000 in money have been secured. Ellzabethton, Tenn., has offered the land and $10,000 in money in case the institution shall be located there. So says the Nashville Advocate.

The United States Court at Jackson, Miss., has refused to indict the Mississippi State officers for the issuance of State warrants. This is exactly what all sensible people expected. The United States government during all its history was never engaged in a more contemptible piece of business than when it proceeded to arrest Gov. Stone and other State officials on a charge of counterfeiting, because, forsooth, they had obeyed the instructions of the Legislature. The laws of Congress providing for the punishing of counterfeiting were never intended to cover such cases; and Grover Cleveland and John G. Carlisle know perfectly well that John M. Stone and the other officials concerned in the issuance of these warrants were just as innocent of the crime of counterfeiting as they themselves.

DAYS OF DARKNESS

BY ALICE CARY.

Why should our spirits be oppress
When days of darkness fall?
Our Father knoweth what is best,
And he hath made them all.

He made them, and to all their length
Set parallels of gain;
We gather from our pain the strength
To rise above our pain.

Superannuated Preachers.

"HOW CAN WE BEST PROVIDE FOR THEIR SUPPORT?"

BY REV. K. A. JONES.

[Read before the Ministers' Institute for Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, and published by order of said Institute.]

The superannuated preacher is a member of the Conference, and subject to the laws of the church as other itinerant preachers. A superannuated preacher is defined by the law to be "one who is worn-out in the itinerant work." When we consider this fact, we are at once impressed with the justice of their claim to a support by the church. The law of the church provides that his support shall be obtained from what is known as the Conference fund. This fund is to be disbursed among the claimants as the Board of Finance may determine. We find, however, that this fund is not sufficient to meet the demands of the claimants; therefore, a felt want for some plan by which these claims may be supplemented. We think, in the disbursement of this fund, it would be better, and afford more immediate relief, to make quarterly distributions. Some Conferences adopt this plan with good success. Let the pastor collect so much of the Conference fund as he can quarterly, and send on to the treasurer of the Finance Board for distribution. This would give help when most needed. In the first place, the assessment is made too low; and yet how can it be made larger, in view of the number of collections now made upon the church annually? This is a grave question, and one not easily answered. New claims are quadrennially coming on the church until, by a multiplicity of claims, this collection is weakened. So it seems if things so continue, we must look to some other way by which we may be able to meet the necessities of our worn-out preachers. Therefore, might there not be a society formed to be called the Superannuate Society, by mutual consent of preachers and laymen, organized under a Constitution after the plan of life insurance; and when a preacher is compelled by old age, and being "worn-out in the itinerancy," to take a superannuated relation, let each member of said society pay within one month to said superannuate the sum of two, three or five dollars, as may be fixed upon by the law of said society; said sum to be paid only once; this sum not to interfere with the claim upon the Conference fund. Could this plan be worked, it would give relief at a time most needed. We would not urge as claimants on this society fund those who may serve a short time in the itinerant work and then cease to travel; only such as by old age and feebleness combined are compelled to retire.

In addition to this, could we not have an "endowment fund," to be managed by the Board of Finance? If some of our wealthy members would give a thousand or so to such a fund, it would result in great benefit to these necessitous cases; and to what better purpose could we put our money? There are numbers who could give one hundred or five hundred dollars to such an endowment fund, and hardly feel it. Let us investigate these plans, and see what there is in them, and, if possible, relieve the wants of our worthy dependents.

We have not in this paper attempted to argue the necessity and justice of the claims of our superannuated preachers, for this is at once admitted by all right-thinking people. We have only tried to devise some plan by which they may be better paid, and these claims fully met.

What I Heard at a Revival.

When Dr. C., the champion of the second blessing movement, was in ——, it was my privilege to attend his meeting. I had heard and read so much of this strange theory (the second blessing theory) until I rejoiced for the opportunity to hear the doctrine preached; the theory thoroughly explained by one whom I supposed to be the most sagacious of its advocates. I am a firm believer in the doctrine of sanctification, and from what I had heard and read of the second blessing previously, I had been favorably impressed, and was, therefore, not prejudiced against the doctrine, but a seeker after the truth. To my delight, upon this particular occasion, Dr. C. chose for his subject "Sanctification," and interwove the second blessing theory throughout. Regarding this as my golden opportunity, I paid the strictest attention, noting every division and sub-division of his discourse from introduction to conclusion. I endeavored to the utmost of my ability, in the fear of God and in a spirit of prayer, to weigh every argument impartially, and to digest every thought presented. The result was, I was forcibly impressed that he had preached a fine sermon on regeneration, and that there was nothing in the second blessing theory at all. What a pity, I thought, that he does not, throughout that discourse, substitute regeneration for sanctification, and baptism of the Holy Ghost for second blessing. I have since observed that there is not a passage in God's Word that supports the second blessing theory, and, therefore, regard it as a heresy, and those who embrace it as heretics.

At the conclusion some strange things were said and done. Dr. C. invited "those who were groaning after the second work of grace," "who were striving to obtain sanctification," to come to the altar, and several went. He next invited "those who felt an interest in the meeting," "who desired to see souls converted to God," "and who were anxious to experience a deeper work of grace in their own hearts," to come. I could unhesitatingly accede to this proposition, and immediately complied with his request. While kneeling at the altar Mr. A. came to me, and said, "Brother, have you experienced the second work of grace?"

I said, "No, sir."

"Well," says he, "what's the trouble?"

I replied, "I don't know, sir."

He asked again, "Are you keeping back anything from God?"

I answered: "No, sir. I have examined my heart carefully and prayerfully, and am quite sure I have kept back none of the price. I possess nothing that I have not consecrated to the service of God. There is no sacrifice that I would not cheerfully make for the glorification of his name and the extension of the borders of his kingdom."

He instantly replied: "Why, brother, what more can you do? You've got it! Take God at his word. All you have to do now is confess it! Get up!"

I said: "No sir; I can never profess to have a thing until I know I have it. When the Holy Spirit impresses me that I have obtained the blessing, then I will confess it."

Just at this point Dr. C. requested all to rise and stand near the altar. "Then," says he, "Glory! Let everybody say, 'Glory!'" And he hallooed at the top of his voice—"Glory!" But there was not a general response, and Dr. C. says in rather a dictatorial tone of voice: "That won't do! What's the matter? Why don't you say, 'Glory?' Now let everybody say, 'Glory!'" And at Dr. C's command I suppose there were a score or more who hallooed with all their might—"Glory!" In the meantime Mr. A. says to me, "Brother, why don't you say, 'Glory?'"

I replied: "Why? Because Dr. C. commands it? Not never! Never will I say 'Glory!' at the command of man, but by the promptings of the Holy Ghost."

It did not end here. Dr. C. took the sacred word, "Hallelujah" through the same ridiculous and sacrilegious process.

After the congregation was dismissed I was introduced to Dr. C., and after passing the compliments of the day, I said: "Doctor, I see Bro. S. is here seeking the blessing; how is he progressing?"

"Very well," says he. "He has obtained it by faith, but not yet by testimony."

I cast my eyes to the floor, and stood for a moment in deep meditation; then turned and walked away. And to this day those words are a puzzle to me. BETA.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Home again after an absence of four and one-half weeks, is the record I make this morning. Thank God for journeying mercies, good health, and fair success in the work. Ten days were spent in the revival meetings at Holly Springs and Como, conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his assistant, Rev. J. A. Leech. Three weeks were passed in the Greenville district with Bro. Randolph, P. E., and his agreeable and efficient co-workers in the ministry, during which time I attended the Preachers' Association at Clarksdale, and visited Lyons, Coahoma, Sherard, Gunnison, Hillhouse, Lula and Tunica, preaching and circulating good literature. I found Bro. Wallehurst and his brother holding a meeting seven miles from Gunnison, at a school-house, in a neighborhood remote from church privileges, which resulted in eight additions to the church and the organization of a Sunday-school. I aided Bro. Cunningham five days in a meeting at Hillhouse, in which some good was evidently done. I found Bro. Phillips at Tunica hard at work receiving members and getting up the collections. He has regained his health, is in fine spirits, and expects to report all assessments paid in full. I found Bros. Wyatt, Sanders and Bowling at their posts, and hopeful of closing their year's work with fair satisfaction. Bro. Mims is pushing the work on the new church building at Arcola, which he hopes to have completed before Conference. Rev. E. S. Lewis is serving Rosedale charge in place of Bro. Broyles, who was forced to give up the work on account of ill-health. We hope his sickness is temporary, and that he will be able for active work next year.

Our church work in the Delta is developing admirably. There has been great improvement on all lines since this scribe first labored there thirty-two years ago. The outlook is encouraging. There are yet open doors for us that we must not fail to enter until the whole land is possessed.

Presiding Elder Morehead and several preachers of Sardis district attended the meeting at Como. They are an enthusiastic band of workmen, whose labors the Lord is rewarding. Bro. Morehead is sowing his district down with Dr. Fairfield's "Letters on Baptism," which will, doubtless, be productive of good fruit, as the book is an able presentation of the subject indicated by the title, showing conclusively the unscripturalness and unreasonableness of the immersion theory. I shall be glad to fill orders for this great work at seventy-five cents per copy, with good discount on lots or by the dozen.

Presiding Elder Mitchell reports nearly one thousand accessions to the church in the Kosciusko district this year.

Bro. Langley is yet sick. He has been confined to his bed nearly three months; first with typhoid fever, then with pneumonia. There is much solicitude in his behalf, and many prayers are being offered that his valuable life may be spared to his family and the church.

The parsonage in Kosciusko was sold last Winter, and another one has recently been purchased; so the preacher for next year and his family may be assured of a comfortable home.

Preachers and people who desire to procure any special books during the Conference session at Sardis will please notify me in due time, stating what they want, that I may have it for them.

Brethren who owe me for books or papers will confer a favor by remitting at once, or by settling on the first day of the Conference session at farthest.

Tending to Antinomianism.

Rev. M. C. Manly, the blind preacher of the Louisiana Conference, preached a sound, logical sermon yesterday in his church at Washington, from II. Cor. iii, 17.

He took the impregnable position that "If the Son make us free, we are free indeed"—we are not then in bondage to sin—we are not bound to sin, after the Son hath made us free. We are servants only to whom we yield ourselves servants, to obey. And, our free agency not being taken away from us in our "liberty," we may, or we may not, yield ourselves servants again to sin after we have been delivered from bondage to it.

It would be strangely limiting the power and goodness of God, who made man at first so pure and perfect that he need not have sinned, to deny that he can now again "make him a new creature in Christ Jesus," and "free indeed!" If a man can not be again made "holy" and "perfect" by the Lord, so that he can love him perfectly, and keep his commandments holy, then God has lost power, or goodness, or both; and man can not, in justice, be held responsible for his shortcomings and misdoings; and then, how can sin be sinful, and man be punished for his sins, if unbridled indulgencies may be called sins? Why can't he keep one commandment as well as another, since God gives all the power to keep any and all? If he may violate one, why not another? St. James says: "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." How so? Because he didn't observe any from pure love for God; and, therefore, he didn't keep any unto the Lord, and none of his observances were accounted righteous. And under similar circumstances and inducements that enticed him to commit one sin, he would commit another, and all. To steal a nickle is as much theft in the eyes of the Lord as to steal a million of dollars. For God can as easily and effectually enable a man to refrain from the million as from the nickle; and it is his will to enable everybody to refrain from all sin, and to be perfect in holiness, unless he is willing for people to be so imperfect as to sin! Spirituality proceeds from pure love for God; but formality proceeds from mere desire for something which may, or may not, be acceptable to God—at best, it is but desire, and not actuality, "unto all pleasing."

St. John says: "He that doeth righteousness is righteous even as he (God) is righteous. He that committeth sin is of the devil. . . . The Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he can not sin, because he is born of God." The love of God restraineth him while he is his child—he must become a child of the devil before he can sin. God enables everyone to stand and rejoice with the love of God shed abroad in his heart always. He commands us to do so. But he would not command us to do anything that we could not do. If the Lord can enable man to refrain from one sin, he ought to be able, and must be, to enable him to refrain from all. And if the Lord don't enable man to refrain from all sins, and then punishes him for any, he punishes him for not doing impossibilities! Who can believe that?

St. Paul declared "he could do all things through Christ, who strengthened him." And the Savior "is no respecter of persons." He will certainly strengthen everyone and all equal to their respective duties. And he has commanded us to love God, and keep his commandments—not in part, but in whole. And he says, if we love him, we will keep his commandments. But some people say they love God, and yet they say they can not keep all his commandments. Now, there is a wide diverging here. And these apologists for shortcomings and misdoings either do love God or they do not love him. The Savior says, if they love God, they will keep his commandments; but they not only acknowledge that they do not keep all his commandments, but contend that nobody can. Then, according to the Savior, they are mistaken about both—loving God and keeping his commandments. And the church is full of such mistakes. And the Savior says but few will be saved, not that they can not, but they will not be saved. "Let us strive to enter in at the strait gate." And as Bro. Manly says, don't the strong opposition to the "holiness movement" tend to antinomianism. When it is preached in Methodist pulpits all over the country, that people can not attain unto that perfect love of God, which constrains them to keep his commandments, as the Savior says and commands! Miscellanis.

MR. EDITOR: I was much interested in the reports made of the various college commencements, and I have been equally pleased at the prosperous openings of our colleges this Fall.

Gulf Coast College is not an exception in this respect, for, I am told, we had a better opening than the school has enjoyed formerly, and students are still entering.

I am glad to see that our colleges for girls and young women are eliminating the term "female" from their names. It is as appropriate to say "blind asylum" as to say "female college."

Handsboro is a quiet and an orderly town. We have no saloons, and there are none nearer than Biloxi, nine miles distant. Business is improving, and the prospects for the future are brightening. We have three Protestant Churches, and two of them are city-like in appearance. The Romanists very seldom have service. The members of the several churches are fraternal in their associations, the people, generally, attend divine service, and the congregations are large.

A time was appointed by Bro. H. C. Brown for protracted services at the Methodist Church, but, having been thrown from his buggy, he was not able to attend, nor did his expected help come. I preached on Sunday, and, not knowing the cause of Bro. Brown's absence, I appointed preaching for Monday night, and also for Tuesday night, hoping he would be here to continue the meeting. The attendance was large, and much interest was manifested. I exceedingly regret that my duties at the college, and not being very well from a cold, hindered me in continuing the meeting. I fear an opportunity was lost. Seven persons applied for membership. I have three monthly appointments, and in September I preached seven times, and led prayer meeting frequently; so you see, though on the "roll of honor," I am not enjoying my otium cum dignitate. I always delight in having plenty of work to do for Christ and humanity.

You are giving us an excellent paper, and every good citizen must commend your earnestness in exposing the corruptions of the times, in your philippics against the desecrations of the Sabbath, the liquor traffic, dealing in futures and other forms of gambling, and the common vices of the day. In fact, were you to be reticent in such matters, you could not be regarded as a faithful sentinel on the watch-tower of Christian civilization.

Our church is taking as good papers as can be found on the continent. With the exception of an occasional error in grammar, and the use of such expressions as "some time or other," "some way or other," they are models of what Christian journals should be.

I feel gratified at the progress which the Methodist Church is making in soul-saving, in our publishing interests, in Christian education, and in spreading scriptural holiness over the land. If John Wesley could visit this earth, and see the wonderful progress the church which he was instrumental in organizing has made, and the glorious triumphs of the gospel wrought through the agency of her moral forces, what rapturous joy would thrill his whole being! And could Charles Wesley stand by his brother's side, what a transporting strain of sacred song would burst forth from his heaven-touched lips! J. M. PUGH.

Selections.

Good Counsel.

Forget your past mistakes, and look forward hopefully into the future. Like Lot's ill-fated, backward-looking wife, peering back too wistfully means retrogression and harm. Don't brood too much over yesterday's failings and missteps, but like a Corinthian athlete, with eye and limb and nerve impetuously straining for the parsley-wreathed goal, so do you, with quenchless enthusiasm, press on to the nobler achievements, inspired by loftier visions and holier ideals. Tardy laggards never clutch life's golden prizes. Let the years evermore lift you nearer divinity. To morbidly brood over bygone sins will not redeem and exalt to-day. Unavailing regrets not only unfit for action, but embitter the passing hours. Be not content with last week's perfumeless, wilted bouquets, when the green earth is even now embossed with an army of sweet-eyed flowers. Don't sentimentally bemoan the past, but look upon every past distress as a reason for fronting to-morrow with hardier nerve and more magnificent bravery.

Enjoy life as the days go by. If you reject the little and inconspicuous chances of happiness to-day, to-morrow you may vainly seek to catch the shy, fickle sylph of pleasure. The feast of life sinks into insipid dreariness if allowed to stand too long. Don't wait until your fresh, keen nerve of enjoyment has withered with age. The unsoiled freshness and rainbow beauty and unworn strength of youth are all too soon faded and gone. Every day has in it some golden hour that ought not to pass away unimproved.

Confession.

The gospel requires the confession of sins. It is easy to confess in a general way, that we are sinners and need pardon. Everyone does that. But something more is required. It is sometimes necessary to confess particular sins. Have you injured your fellowman by some unkind act or word? Go to him and confess the wrong. Confess it to him alone. The confession will do him good, and it will do you more good. It will be an act of justice. It will relieve your conscience. It will command his confidence, and it will strengthen in you the love of righteousness. An honest conscience is indeed good for the soul. Have you brought reproach upon the church by any unfaithfulness or wrong-doing? Then confess to the church. Let the confession cover the wrong-doing and be as open as was the injury. Private sins confess to God; sins against a brother, confess to the brother; sins against the church, confess to the church. The confession is due the injured party. It is not only needless, but wrong to proclaim private sins to the public. The Bible does not require that. In confession be discriminating, candid, just. Deal honestly with your soul and with God. "Who so confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall find mercy."—Epworth Herald.

Chiselling for God.

A stone cutter was at work under his shed chiselling on a block of stone, preparing it to be placed in the walls of some edifice. A friend, stepping in, asked the question, "What is to be done with this stone?" "I have not seen the plan," was the stone cutter's reply; and on he went with his chiselling, content patiently and steadily to work day by day, getting it ready for its designed place—chiselling, chiselling, chiselling.

There are many patient and earnest workers, who are chiselling for God—the faithful minister in his appointed sphere, the humble and devoted wife at home among her children, and a thousand other workers who steadily pursue their course, day after day, until life ends. They have "not seen the plan," and yet they toil in hope. They know that the great Architect knows exactly where to place each stone in the building, and they go on with their chiselling—it may be beguiling the weary hours with a song. Think you the Master will not pay them their wages? He will.—Chancellor Day.

There are souls in the world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere and leaving it behind them when they go. Their influence is an inevitable gladdening of the heart. They give light without meaning to shine. Their bright hearts have a great work to do for God.—Frederick W. Faber.

Neglected Convictions.

Dr. Maclaren, in a recent sermon, says: "If a man is false to the feeblest conviction that he has in regard to the smallest duty, he is a worse man all over ever after. We can not neglect any conviction of what we ought to do without lowering the whole tone of our characters and laying ourselves open to assaults of evil from which we would once have turned, shuddering and disgusted. A partial thaw is generally followed by intenser frost. An abortive insurrection is sure to issue in a more grinding tyranny. A soul half melted and then cooled off is less easy to melt than it was before. And so, dear brethren, remember this, that if you do not swiftly and fully carry into life and conduct whatsoever you know you ought to be and do, you can not set a limit to what, some time or other, if a strong and sudden temptation is sprung upon you, you may become. 'Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?' Yea! But he did it. No mortal reaches the extreme of evil all at once, says the wise old proverb; and the path by which a man is let down into depths that he never thought it possible that he should traverse is by the continual neglect of the small admonitions of conscience. Neglected convictions mean, sooner or later, an outburst of evil."

The Pulpit.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, says: "In the whole course of my ministry I have never failed to observe that the pastors who appreciate their people are the pastors who do the most enduring work." The reason of this fact can be understood by anyone who knows his own heart. It is only those who can see and acknowledge the good that is in us who can influence us largely for good. And this rule applies with still greater force in dealing with children. It is only by recognizing their good qualities, their good intentions and their efforts to do right, however spasmodic these may be, that we can win their confidence and secure their cordial co-operation in efforts to overcome their faults.—New York Observer.

Earnestness.

In the Christian church earnestness is at a high premium. The teacher must believe his message, and speak as though he believed heaven and hell depended on obedience. The man who is himself kindled to white heat, is the one who can enthuse and move others to action. The head is not so much in demand just now as the heart; men already know more than they do. Of a negative gospel they are weary, and wait for a prophet or apostle whose soul is aglow and whose utterances are positive, authoritative, as "thus saith the Lord." One such preacher is worth a regiment of theoretical and speculative dispensers of water-gruel theology.—Western Christian Advocate.

At each stage of your life let God go before you. Where he does not lead it is not safe for you to travel. If he goes not the way that you would like to travel, conform your likes to his will. If it be a way which he can not travel, do you avoid it. Everything worth having depends for its worthiness upon having him also.—The Rev. James Millar.

Anything which makes religion its second object makes religion no object. God will put up with a great many things in the human heart, but there is one thing he will not put up within it—a second place. He who offers God a second place offers him no place.—John Ruskin.

We can not render benefits to those from whom we receive them, or only seldom. But the benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, deed for deed, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand!—Emerson.

A house built on sand is, in fair weather, just as good as if builded on a rock. A cobweb is as good as the mightiest chain cable when there is no strain on it. It is trial that proves weak and strong.—Beecher.

To resist temptation, think of God. Nothing ever appears out of its true light so long as we have God in view. It is the thought of God in the heart that keeps the thought of sin out.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. N. M. Clark, Binnsville, Oct. 30: "Just closed a good meeting at Wahalak; a number of conversions, a good revival, and nine accessions."

Rev. W. Winans Drake, Crowley, La., Nov. 5: "Have just closed a ten days' meeting in which I was assisted by Bros. E. T. Denson and J. S. Sanders. Eight or ten professions of conversion and about as many of sanctification. Much good has been done."

Rev. R. P. Goar, Ackerman, Miss., Oct. 30: "In connection with Bro. Ellis, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, we commenced a meeting at Ackerman, Chester circuit, the first Sunday in October, which lasted fifteen days. Bro. T. G. Freeman preached two fine sermons, also Bro. Burney too, after which Bro. Ellis and myself whiled about. Results: a glorious revival in the churches; 13 joined our church. I have had the presence of Rev. W. R. Rainey, one of our superannuated preachers, at all my appointments. The Lord spare him long to bless the church with his presence! While not able to preach, yet he talks face to face with God in prayer."

Rev. J. C. Lowe, Byhalia, Miss., Oct. 22: "Our protracted meeting in Byhalia that closed the first of October, after two weeks' continuance, resulted in about forty-five or fifty conversions. Forty-two were received into our church. Several that professed conversion were members of families that belonged to other churches. The principal human instruments in the meeting were Bros. T. W. Dye and C. W. Perkins. Bro. Dye was with us nearly two weeks, and Bro. Perkins one week. These brethren seem to be fitted to work together, and in such a meeting. After long and continued prayer and effort for such results, God made this the time, and used the instrumentalities at hand, to bring to us here such a glorious victory. Scarcely any other place was in greater need of a revival—none could have enjoyed it more."

Rev. D. P. Bradford, Shubuta, Miss., Oct. 29: "Bro. T. L. Mellen, our former presiding elder, came over by invitation to dedicate our new church at Quitman on the fifth Sunday in last month, remaining with us a few days and giving us some very fine sermons, which were appreciated by our people. Bro. I. L. Peebles was with us at DeSoto for a week, and our church there was greatly strengthened by his strong gospel sermons. The effects of Sister Snell's visit to Shubuta is felt still among our people. Prayer meetings well attended. Yesterday Bro. T. B. Holleman spent the day with us, and gave us two fine sermons. We had a delightful communion service, and two accessions to the church. This makes 55 accessions to this church during the past two years. Fifty per cent. of the membership attend the Sunday-school. Bro. Little, our presiding elder, is very popular with all of our people."

Rev. W. D. McCullough, P. C., Sallis charge, Nov. 1: "This is my second year at Sallis, and Conference meets here again. This is one of the most pleasant appointments in North Mississippi Conference. This has been a very pleasant year to me. Peace and good-will throughout the charge. We have held five meetings. Received 33 on profession of faith; baptized 27 adults and 12 infants. The church has been greatly revived and the work goes on. We have one Woman's Missionary Society, one Juvenile Missionary Society, four Sunday-schools, and one Epworth League, organized two months ago with 24 members. We now have 39 members and moving. Nothing moves the church up like the Epworth League. Our efficient presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, is in great favor with preachers and people. He is a man of God and doing a great work. Grazing is short, but crops are good, and Sallis is abundantly able to meet all of her assessments. So we are joyful in hope, serving the Lord. Success to the ADVOCATE!"

Rev. J. M. Beard, P. E., Opelousas, La., Oct. 29: "Some further account of the meeting at Lafayette would, perhaps, be acceptable to your readers. There had been eighty conversions at the time of my departure on Friday last, and some of the most remarkable displays of divine power that the writer remembers ever to have witnessed. Four preachers were sanctified and many members, while others are seeking this blessing. The meeting was still in progress at last accounts. During the week I managed to slip away from the Lafayette meeting for one night and hold the Washington Quarterly Conference. There I found that the brethren of the Waxia settlement were hauling the lumber for their church-building and getting ready to build in earnest. This makes the tenth enterprise of this nature on the district this year, and all of them on what might be called missionary ground, not to mention three parsonages already begun and completed. But we have much ground yet to be occupied, and ought not to be brought into comparison with the older and more Protestant sections. That we should not have been able to do any of all the few things that have been accomplished without the divine help is a fact that we gratefully remember."

Rev. H. C. Morehead, P. E.: "I am more than ever impressed with the importance of intelligent and faithful effort on the part of pastors and stewards in behalf of the interest committed unto them in the beginning of the year. Where this has been done, and the work faithfully prosecuted, we are in good shape for our approaching Conference session. Otherwise, every interest is embarrassingly and alarmingly behind. When will we learn wisdom? The last Quarterly Conference for the Wall Hill charge was held at that place, in connection with the Fall meeting of the P. and T. Association of the district. The meeting was one of pleasure and profit from the first. Indeed, the thoughtful pastor, R. O. Brown, had been holding services for three or four days preparatory to our coming. But on Thursday night, Oct. 25 the interest culminated in one of the greatest spiritual baptisms this scribe has ever witnessed. Wave after wave of power and glory rolled in on us until some of us hardly knew whether we were in the flesh or out of the flesh. Of course, the pastor continued the meeting. I am expecting to hear of large results. The night to which reference has already been made not less than a dozen were converted or received the witness of the spirit."

A Methodist, Philadelphia, Miss.: "The protracted meeting was held at this place (Philadelphia), in connection with the third Quarterly Conference. Bro. McDonald, the presiding elder, conducted the meeting from Saturday until Tuesday, preaching with great power. On Wednesday night Rev. W. W. Cammack came to the rescue, preaching with great earnestness and zeal until the close of the meeting, on Friday night. The result of this meeting was three accessions to the church. On the fourth Sunday in September the Baptist brethren commenced a protracted meeting, conducted by the Rev. J. F. Gunn, a noted Baptist divine of Kemper county, Miss. The Holy Spirit commenced with the meeting. It was indeed a time of great rejoicing. Christians were made to shout aloud and sing praises unto God, while sinners trembled, and cried aloud, 'What must I do to be saved?' Mourners were converted, backsliders were reclaimed, and the church greatly built up spiritually. On Wednesday night the Methodist and Baptist united, opening the doors of both churches. That sweet-spirited servant of the Lord, Rev. J. C. Long, representing the M. E. Church. The union resulted in forty-three accessions to the two churches. Baptist getting twenty, the Methodist getting twenty-three. It is said by all to be the best meeting that has been held in Philadelphia for over twenty-five years. A young men's prayer meeting has been organized, which is well attended. Any church wishing for and needing a revival will certainly get it, if they will secure the services of Bro. Long and Bro. Gunn. To God be all the praise."

Rev. M. L. Burton, McComb City, Miss., Oct. 27: "We have had two meetings here this fall, the first in September, in which we were helped by Rev. S. M. Drover. The results of the meeting were 12 accessions by profession and 8 by certificate. The preaching was far above the average; the brother is a good gospel preacher. Sister Snell commenced a meeting here the second Sunday in October, lasting eight days. The results of the meeting can never be reckoned up in or by human arithmetic. The visible results are as follows: 50 professed conversion and 30 joined the church, besides six or eight who gave their names as desiring to join the Baptist Church. We also received 10 as result of a meeting conducted by our local preachers at a school-house just east of McComb. It has been my pleasure to hear all the great evangelists who have preached through the South of late years, and Sister Snell, in my humble opinion, has a power superior to any of them in her personal work. Her work may not be so extensive as that of the brethren who say, "Hold up your hands if you want to be saved;" but the gospel as proclaimed by her seems to take deep hold on the minds and hearts of the people. The converts under her work see something in Christianity besides simply saying they are willing to be Christians, and, as a rule, they go home and ask the blessing and have family prayers. Our church has never had such a blessing as the one from God through her instrumentality. She does not assume the functions of a preacher in orders, but, as a consecrated layman, she tries to show to the people the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." The people of our town, and especially of the Methodist Church, join me in thanking God for putting it in the heart of our dear sister to come to McComb."

INDIAN MISSION.

Allow me to say to the friends of the Indian Mission that we have done very little up to date this year toward paying Bro. Cammack's salary, and the Conference will soon be on hand, when the opportunity for doing something in this great work will have closed, so far as this year is concerned; hence, what we do must be done quickly.

Brethren, sisters, do you not want an interest in this very important work? Do you not want to contribute a mite toward the salvation of the poor, lost Indians? If so, send me something at once. Just anything, from five hundred dollars down to five cents, we will take gladly. We are very anxious to pay Bro. Cammack's salary without having to call on the Board for any help at all. And how easy it would be for 80,000 Methodists to pay $6001 Yes, if only a few of them would contribute, we would pay it up.

Now, brethren and sisters, may I not expect one and all to send me something for the mission? Send by registered letter to Oak Ridge, or postoffice money order on Vicksburg, or draft or check on Jackson or Vicksburg, or hand amounts to your pastor, to be handed to me at Conference.

And now, may I ask Bro. R. G. Porter to represent the Mission at the North Mississippi Conference, and the brethren to hand any amount to him that they are willing to give, and he will please send to me at Meridian during our Conference week?

Bro. Porter and brethren, help us in this our common work, and may God graciously bless every giver!

Yours for the salvation of the Indians,
A. D. MILLER,
Oak Ridge, Miss., Nov. 6, 1894.

MEETING OF THE PREACHERS' INSTITUTE OF BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Six of our preachers were absent from our meeting at Crystal Springs, Oct. 16 and 17; some on account of sickness and some unaccounted for; but there were enough of the brethren on hand to have a very interesting and, I hope, an exceedingly profitable meeting. The paper read by Bro. Mellen, on "The best method of taking a collection, and when it should be taken," was filled with good suggestions, and which, if heeded by our brethren generally, would insure better collections, if not increased contributions from our people. Bro. Bailey's paper, on "Pastoral Instruction of Children," stressed the importance of the Sunday-school as the only place where the pastor can successfully instruct the children of the church, and advised the brethren to see to it that the children were properly instructed in the doctrines of our church. The papers by Bros. Norsworthy and Backus, on "Sanctification; its nature and importance," were very enjoyable. Bro. Norsworthy showed the meaning of the words in the Bible that are used to express consecration, and Bro. Backus gave us the standards on the subject. All these papers were discussed by the Institute, and there was the very best spirit manifest. The papers of Bros. Crossley and Robertson, on the question of "Church entertainments as a means of raising money for church purposes," were agreed that we can not afford to recommend to our people such things as a scriptural way of raising money. Bros. Mellen and Bailey favored us with good sermons. We were very sorry that Bro. Chambers could not be with us and take part in the meeting, and preach the sermon on "Our obligation to support the Conference claimants."

Our next meeting will be held at McComb City, in April, 1895.

Large as a Dollar

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

PAIN AND MISERY
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA
Cures Rheumatism.

"About 8 years ago, I suffered from what the doctors called rheumatism. Nobody knows the pain and misery which I had to endure and which clung to me in spite of the medicines prescribed. At last, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After a short time, the pains ceased. I continued the use of the Sarsaparilla for a whole year, until the rheumatism entirely disappeared."—JAMES WAY, proprietor of livery stable, Roseville, Cal.

Dr. Walker's Golden Wedding.

The Methodists of New Orleans will give our honored brother, Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D., and his most excellent wife, a reception at Carondelet Church on the occasion of their golden wedding, Nov. 26, from five to nine o'clock P. M. We congratulate the bride and groom in advance, and shall deem it a great privilege to be among the hnndreds who will greet them on that day.

Filching from Neptune.

The Dutch, above all the nations of the earth, seem to have an inveterate antipathy to the reign of Neptune—an insatiable desire to take forcible possession of large provinces of his domain. Not content with having already wrested from him a sufficient area to support an immense population, these enterprising people have recently inaugurated the stupendous task of draining the Zuyder Zee. This scheme has been in contemplation for a long while, but has not hitherto been undertaken on account of the immense cost. Modern improvements in hydraulic engineering and hydraulic machinery have reduced the cost to a sum which the plucky little nation feels able to raise—i. e., $135,000,000. The plans have been matured, and the work commenced. That the enterprise will be a success is not doubted by those who are acquainted with the character of the Hollanders. It will take at least twenty-four years to complete the task. When completed it will be one of the most stupendons engineering achievements of all time. The first Suez Canal constructed by Seti, Pnaraoh of Egypt, and his greater son, Rameses II.; Lake Moeris, constructed by Amenemhat III.; the Sippara Reservoir, near Babylon, constructed by Nebuchadnezzar; and the Saideh Canal, four hnndred miles in length, connecting the Euphrates with the ocean, also constructed presumably by Nebuchadnezzar—these are the only similar works of antiqnity that are comparable to it, and none of them approximate it in the magnitude of its beneficial results. When the huge job is completed Holland will have added more than seven hundred square miles of fertile soil to her domain—an area sufficient to sustain a population of, perhaps, two hundred thousand.

Parental Authority.

One of the great needs of the Christian world to-day is a more rigorous assertion of parental authority. A century ago the pendulum had swung, perhaps, too far in the opposite direction. Family government was unnecessarily stern and harsh. But of the two extremes, we believe that that of our forefathers was far less prolific of evil than that which meets our gage as we look abroad over the Christian world to-day. While there are, of course, numerous exceptions, we believe that a widely extended observation will confirm the statement that one of the striking characteristics of family life at the present day in the United States of America is the lack of anything like a positive, pronounced authority on the part of parents. Children are either allowed to do as they please, or else they are coaxed and wheedled into obedience.

Go into the average home, and you find the mother worried almost out of her life by her children, who seem to find their chief delight in doing anything and everything which she does not want them to do. You will also find the mother, after repeated refusals, finally granting a child's request simply because it puts up a cry. It is a positive curse to a child to be brought up under this sort of regime. Reared from infancy to have its own way in everything, the child goes to school, goes into society and finally into business with a habit of willfulness which can not fail to be a prolific source of unhappiness both to itself and to others. Some of the most miserable and most hateful human beings we have ever seen were reared under this type of family government. These persons would have been very different characters, and would have wrought out a very different destiny, had they been taught from early infancy to submit gracefully to authority. In saying "from early infancy" we speak advisedly. The time to break a child's will is not when it has become large enough to make itself a household nuisance, but in infancy. A child can be taught at a very early age that its will must yield to the will of another. It can be taught long before it can walk or talk that it can not have everything it cries for, just as it can be taught that crying is the sure means of obtaining whatever it takes a fancy to.

Nothing is truer than the old adage, "Early impressions are the most lasting." Make the impression upon the mind of the infant that the will of another must be supreme over its own will, and that impression will never be effaced. Neglect to make the impression then, and you find it a difficult thing to do in after years. A crooked twig may be straightened; but a crooked tree can not by any appliances ordinarily available. The problem of family government is more than half solved when the lesson of obedience has been taught to the child in infancy. When a boy in his teens is a source of trouble to his mother, this is almost invariably a proof of the fact that the mother neglected golden, God given opportunities a few years earlier. The mothers who are to-day bowed with grief over the waywardness of their sons and their daughters now on the verge of matnrity are, as a rule, the mothers who loved (?) their children too well to govern them in early childhood.

Of course, we do not depreciate parental love. Love ought to play an important part in family government. But love in its highest and holiest form is not only compatible with the assertion of authority, but is incomplete without it. "God is love;" bnt is his love a poor, weak thing which can not speak in a tone of authority? Where in all the universe can there be found such an assertion of authority as is contained in the loving utterances of our heavenly Father to the children of men? Now God's love to his earthly children is the fittest type of what parental love ought to be. As God loves us too well to allow us to have our own will, so we ought to love our own children too well to let them do as they please. Just at this point this generation needs to get rid of a vast amount of tomfoolery. (Excuse the word; we know no other that fits so well.) Those parents who train their children from infancy up to habits of obedience and righteousness and virtue—do they love their children less than do those who turn out upon society a lot of nuisances who know no more of the meaning of authority than the wild ass's colt? Away with such a notion. It is not even respectable nonsense. Solomon prescribes an infallible method of spoiling a child; and many of the parents of this generation have adopted his method.

Official Corruption in New York City.

Although the corruption that dominates the municipal affairs of New York City has long been proverbial, it turns out that the reality far exceeds even the most extravagant estimate. The crusade begun some time since by Dr. Parkhurst, which led to the investigations of the Lexow Committee, has unearthed an amount of official rottenness which has rarely found a parallel in the annals of this sin-cursed planet. For years and years those who are supposed to be the custodians of life and liberty and the conservators of law and order have been using their official position as an agency for the promotion of lawlessness of every description. Honest men conducting legitimate business have been made to pay regularly extortionate fees for that protection to which they are entitled by law. Villainy of every sort has had all the protection which the police force of a large city could give it, provided it would pay sufficiently for the privilege. Any person who desired to carry on the business of counterfeiting was sure of immunity from arrest, on condition of feeing the police in advance. Equal immunity was enjoyed by the keepers of houses of ill-fame on the same condition. And, as with these, so with all other forms of vice.

The investigations of the Lexow Committee have brought to light the fact that there are two hundred so-called physicians in the city who are in reality abortionists—known to be such—and yet protected by the police for a monetary consideration. But the worst of the story remains to be told. The police are not alone in their deep-dyed villainy. In some cases the judicial ermine, no less than the policeman's uniform, is the badge of infamy. It has sometimes happened that villains of this type have been arrested and dragged before the courts in spite of the devices of the police for their protection. In such cases a fee of five hundred or a thousand dollars paid to the judge has procured a release. With such a stench as this in their nostrils, is it at all wonderful that the people of New York have arisen in their wrath and united in a non-partisan movement in behalf of good government, and that they have been successful in their efforts to dethrone the infamous ring that has so long dominated the city? New York's example needs to be contagious. What the people of this country need to-day worse than anything else in the way of political action is a union of all good citizens, in a non-partisan movement, in behalf of decent and honest municipal government.

The Gambler versus the Farmer.

The farmers of the South are beginning to get their eyes open in regard to the evils of the great modern gambling infamy known as "dealing in futures." Many alliances have sent committees to this city to investigate this business, and the reports of these committees have had a very salutary effect upon the honest yeomanry of the country. Many of these committee reports have been given to the public through the press. From one of them made public through the columns of the Times-Democrat—a report made by Mr. J. H. Jones to the Oakland Alliance Lodge, Bogue Chitto, Miss.—we make the following extract: "I have spent three weeks around the New Orleans Exchange. Upon careful investigation I find the following facts: S. Gumbel and F. Gumbel, and many other great business houses here, oppose and denounce future dealing as injurious to the spot sales of cotton, and also as tending to make gamblers of young men. One great house here is the leader of the bear element, and no matter how low cotton gets, it uses all its influence and its money to make it lower. This house has a New York and Liverpool connection, and with its millions can shape the markets of the world. I find that the trade in Europe is as good or better than two years ago. Nevertheless, nothing is heard from a New Orleans man except 'depression in trade,' 'no demand for cotton,' etc. One man here has spent thousands of dollars in telegraphing to New York and Liverpool 'bearish' cotton news. Perhaps $1,000,000 000 are tied up in the United States as margins on contracts. If this money had to be invested in a legitimate way, what a boom we would have."

Many reports similar to this have been made. Many facts that tell their own story can be gleaned from the pages of the daily newspapers. Take this as a sample: A few days since the actual sales of cotton in New York in one day were 190 bales; the future sales 118,000 bales. Who can fail to see the inevitable result of speculation of this sort? We hope the farmers will continue their investigations. If they will do so, they will find that the half has never yet been told concerning the disastrous effects of this infamous business upon agriculture and every other legitimate business. While the farmer is engaged in honest toil, the sharks who manipulate this great gambling machine are devising plans by which with their millions of ill-gotten gain they can defraud him of the proceeds of his labor. That the farmers will continue forever to submit to this state of things we do not believe. All that is needed in order to bring about a change is that they become informed as to the facts. Then they will unite and they will prove the truth of the old adage, "Where there is a will there is a way."

Our Senior Bishop with the Muses.

Our senior Bishop sometimes has visits from the muses. On our first page will be found one of his effusions, which not only possesses decided poetic merit, but also photographs in its native hideousness one of the great evils of the day—that of gambling in futures. The opening verse can be best appreciated by those who have seen the headquarters of this gambling business in this city, the Cotton Exchange Building—a magnificent piece of architecture with its massive front ornamented with two partly nude statues of the goddess of fortune. The description in the sixth and seventh verses of suicide as a result of this species of gambling is no fancy sketch. Suicide is not an infrequent result of the wreck of fortune that comes to the victims of this vice.

BOOKS.

THE INTERWOVEN GOSPELS AND GOSPEL HARMONY. By Rev. William Pittenger. Full Indexes, References, etc. New edition. Seventh thousand. 12 mo. Cloth, red edges, with five maps, $1.00. Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 47 East Tenth St., New York.

The four Histories of Jesus Christ blended into a complete and continuous narrative in the words of the Gospels; interleaved with pages showing the Method of the Harmony. According to the American Revised Edition of 1881.

In this ingenious work the four biographies of Christ are given in the language of the Gospels, but so arranged as to form one harmonious narrative. When known, the period and place at which the events described occurred are noted. Where the Evangelists have given more than one account, the fullest one, or the one which best harmonizes with the preceding subject, has been taken as the chief text, and the peculiarities of the others interwoven with it. The interleaved pages show the text and sources of these additional interwoven passages, forming a practical Harmony. There are also maps of the Holy Land, many helpful foot notes, and a table for finding any passage of which the chapter and verse are known. It brings out the life and work of Christ in bold relief.

One who has been studying the Gospels is delighted when he finds them all combined into a single story. There is a fullness in many particulars, a new light cast on the story from the order and succession of events, which is almost invariably a pleasing surprise, even to the well-informed. It is a very valuable work.

HONEY FROM STRANGE HIVES: A Series of Sermons. By Rev. Henry Thaddens Miller. Chicago: E. A. Weeks & Company, 276 and 278 Franklin St.

The above work is a twelve mo. of two hnndred and thirty-four pages, bound in handsome paper covers. It takes its title from the first sermon, which is founded on an incident in the life of Samson. The sermons are twenty in number. They are on a variety of subjects; and the subjects are for the most part as far out of the usual homiletic routine as the one already named. The author is master of an easy, flowing style which would go far towards making even a dry subject interesting.

Those who have been accustomed to regard sermons as inevitably "dry" will have to make an exception in this case. There is nothing dry in it from beginning to end. In any family in which there is a taste for reading this book would be likely to get itself read even by the young people; and the reading of it would prove, doubtless, in many cases a means of spiritual uplifting. We commend it to heads of families as a book worthy of a place in the household library.

We will send this book postpaid to any address on receipt of publisher's price—twenty-five cents.

James M. Brooks, Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo., makes affidavit that he suffered from Rheumatism for years, until persuaded to try Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and that by its use he has been fully restored. He says the remedy is the greatest on earth. This is high praise, but fully warranted by other miraculous cures. If you want to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address two large bottles of their remedy. This treatment lasts one month, and will cure any ordinary case. Agents wanted.

Railroad Rates for the Louisiana Conference.

The usual reduction in rates—i. e., one and one-third fares—will be granted by the following railways, for members and visitors attending the Louisiana Conference, meeting in New Orleans, Dec. 5. The Illinois Central, the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, and branches from Bayou Sara, Woodville and Natchez; Queen and Crescent, including the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific, and East Louisiana; the Southern Pacific; the Texas and Pacific; the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf; and the Houston Central, Arkansas and Northern. All availing themselves of these rates must purchase tickets coming at full fare, with certificate of having paid full fare. These certificates, countersigned by the secretary of the Conference, will entitle the holder to return at one-third fare. When two or more lines are taken it will be necessary to procure certificates on both or all. Tickets will be on sale on Monday, Dec. 3, good until three days after Conference adjourns.

A Marvel of Cheapness.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible

FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. WAITING FOR THE ANGELS.

Waiting thro' day of fever,
Waiting thro' nights of pain,
For the waft of wings at the portal,
For the sound of songs immortal,
And the breaking of life's long chain.

There is little to do for our dear one—
Only to watch and pray—
As the tide is outward drifting,
As the gates of heaven are lifting,
And its gleam is on her way

The locks that so often faxed her,
The children she held so dear,
The strain of the coming and going,
The stress of the mending and sewing,
The burden of many a year,

Trouble her now no longer!
She is past the fret and care,
On her brow is the angel's token,
The look of a peace unbroken,
She was never before so fair.

You see, she is waiting the angels,
And we—we are standing apart;
For us there are loss and sorrow;
For her is the endless morrow,
And the reaping-time of the heart.

—Harper's Bazar.

A True Friend.

When Paley entered Cambridge as a student, his rare talents, keen wit and conviviality won him a companionship among a lot of wealthy, self-indulgent students who believed in having a grand, good time, even if the lessons should suffer.

Paley was learning aptly to squander his limited means, and his more precious time. Each day had some new pleasure planned, and each night some enticing enjoyment spread out before the inexperienced youth, into which he eagerly glided, as into a fairy land.

His books, once so prized, now lay neglected; his splendid abilities, now clouded over with vapors of ease and self-indulgence, were rapidly losing their tone and brilliance. His course was swiftly and surely leading him downward to ruin.

At length, one morning while he still lay in bed, after a night spent in pleasure, one of his rich boon companions came to his room. Paley supposed he had come to arrange for a new day of jollity and good time.

But, instead, looking very grave, his visitor said to him, "Paley, if you don't stop your fast way of living, and devote yourself to your studies, I am determined never more to associate with you. You know I love you, and this will be a great sacrifice to me, but I make it for your sake. As for me, it matters not whether I ever open a book, as I am, as you know, heir to a large fortune; but it is very different with you. Your talents, which are rare, are your only fortune, and quite sufficient they will prove if well used. But used they must be.

"I have spent a sleepless night thinking of the sad wreck and miserable fate that awaits you if you go on as you are doing. At last I made up my mind to give you this timely warning, in hopes that it is not too late for you to profit by it."

So saying, his friend left him to his own meditations.

Paley lay in bed almost the whole day, musing over the bitter dose his friend had given him. At first he was highly displeased, and thought himself very roughly dealt with and terribly abused. But toward evening his better nature prevailed, and he resolved to turn over a new leaf, and begin to write fairer things on the pages of life before him.

He asked his bed-maker to wake him the next morning at five. From this time on this was his rising hour. He set about industriously and perseveringly now to redeem the time. Though the past could not be recalled, he very diligently, with painstaking energy, took up the neglected task, and soon was recognized as one of the first in his class. After a well-spent course at college, he left it with the highest honors, to go forth into the world well prepared to fill the useful and honorable position for which his excellent abilities, developed by painstaking efforts alone, had fitted him.—Observer.

Novel-Reading.

The young people who read the greatest quantity of novels know the least, are the dullest in aspect, and the most vapid in conversation. The flavor of individuality has been burned out of them. Always imagining themselves in an artificial relation to life, always content to look through their author's glasses, they become as commonplace as pawns upon a chessboard. "Sir, we had good talk!" was Sam Johnson's highest praise of those he met. But any talk save the dreariest commonplace and most tiresome reiteration is impossible with the regulation reader of novels or player of games. And this is, in my judgment, because God, by the very law of mind, must punish those who kill time, instead of cultivating it. For time is the stuff of which life is made, the crucible of character, the arena to achievement; and woe to those who fritter it away. They can not help paying great nature's penalty, and "mediocre," "failure," or "imbecile" will surely be stamped upon their foreheads. Therefore I would have each generous youth and maiden say to every story-spinner, except the few great names which can be counted on the fingers of one hand: I really can not patronize your wares, and will not furnish you my head for a foot-ball, or my fancy for a sieve. By writing these books you get money, and a fleeting, unsubstantial fame; but by reading them I should turn my possibility of success in life to the certainty of failure. Myself plus time is the capital stock with which the good heavenly Father has pitted me against the world to see if I can get some foothold. I can not afford to be a mere spectator. I am a wrestler for the laurel in life's Olympian games. I can make history; why should I maunder in a hammock, and read the endless repetition of romance? No, find yourself a cheaper patron.—Frances E. Willard.

The Altar.

Gather the family, brother, about the altar of prayer with each day. It will prove a grand thing with the morn or eve to receive the benediction of Heaven. What an inspiration for work, and what a solace for the weary heart seeking rest! Can there be a scene in which heaven has greater pleasure? If the angelic heart is akin to earth and yet in fullest sympathy with the better work of life, the windows of the celestial city must open at our hours of prayer, and the amen must often have fervent utterance in response to our petition. Bowed around the altar, with the eye of faith fixed for the moment on the face of God, the thought of the soul must transform the moral nature, and gain for it a strength very essential in life's battle. We know, however, of Christian fathers whose children, grown to manhood, have never heard their voices in prayer! How can a Christian man contentedly die who, by voice, has never commended his children to God in their own hearing? We can conceive of few greater mistakes than this.—Pulpit.

Decision.

What are you going to do with your strength? This is the all-important question. Will you swing it for the right or wrong? Will you use it to build up or tear down? Will you serve God with it, or will you serve the devil with it?

"O," you say, "I hardly know. I have scarcely yet made up my mind what I will do in life. So for I have given no very serious thoughts to it, and can not answer your question."

You have answered my question. I know all about what you will do. You will not do anything. Hold on; I mistake. You will do something. You will serve the devil. No young man in all the world ever went on shuffling into life, but sooner or later was hissed of Satan.

Why, how do you suppose any worthy success is ever won? By simply having power? Oh, no; but by making up your mind what you will do with that power in the line of right. If I know of one thing that is tripping young people to day by the thousand, it is the lack of decision—doing nothing noble because they have never purposed to do anything noble. How easy the grade down! At fifteen, having no aim in life; at twenty, having no high aim in life; at twenty-five, having no high aim in life—and lost!

No fiction in this. You find me one young man who rouses up after that age to noble doing, and I will find you a score who never rouse up, but rather sink lower and lower to the very end. Decision! Decision! Young man, you want it. It is a crying shame for your powers to go to waste through lack of purpose.—A. D. Miller.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, one of the most useful ministers in London, makes a reference in his last book to his early training which is quite interesting. "It is impossible," he says, "to be thankful enough to my gentle, lovely mother for the careful drilling in Scripture which was her habit with us all. It was her regular practice to gather us around her each Lord Day's morning for the searching of Bible references, and for reading book bearing directly on Scripture. And how can we who shared them ever forget the happy hours each Sunday afternoon when we gathered round the piano and sung hymn after hymn; our childish voices gathering strength as they were led and supported by that noble bass voice of my father, which was like an organ in the richness of its tones! It was not what they said, for they spoke very little directly to us; but what they were, and what they expected us to be, that seemed insensibly to form and mould our characters." What earthly gift or endowment is for a moment to be compared with the blessing of such a sweet and happy childhood?

Homes are sweet or bitter in proportion as father and mother are good or bad. If this statement is true, it is certainly a serious matter for the contemplation of parents. We believe it is; and to convince the reader, we refer him to his own experience and to those families with whom he is familiar. Of course, we do not claim that Christian families are exempt from natural evil—from sickness and sorrow, pain and death. By no means. The absence of these things, and even of all the adverse events of life, are not necessary to true happiness. The miracle of grace is that we can be happy even in the midst of our trials and afflictions. And hence we say that the home wherein dwelleth righteousness is a happy home, for its inmates are at peace with God and one another.—Exchange.

Faith and works are as necessary to the spiritual life of the Christian, as soul and body are to our life as men: for faith is the soul of religion and works the body.—Colton.

HYGIENE.

The Necessity of Composure.

One thing that, if not a necessity, is at least conducive to comfortable living, is hardly appreciated even by those who most need it. This is the need of having some time each day entirely alone. It is impossible to live comfortably without composure of mind, and there is no way of securing it so surely as to spend a short time each day (and a long time is even better) in silence, and free from interruptions. It is soothing to tired nerves, and strengthening to a tired mind. The person who does not like to be alone, who does not even strongly desire to be alone once in a while, is already on the high road towards ill-health. It is the only way to have relief from the confusion of always being in some one's presence, which will, sooner or later, either affect the nerves or weaken the mind.

Wherever, or however, you live, then, see to it that you have at least one hour out of every twenty-four that you can call your own. Some busy people may at first think this is impossible; but we rarely find anyone who does not waste more than this every day, and who is not the worst off for the waste. The very act of taking this hour strengthens the will and adds that much to the comfort of living, since a weak willed person is at the mercy of everything and every person that encroach upon his rights; and not the least of these is the right to live a healthy, comfortable life.—Sanitarian; Demorest's Magazine.

Perfumes and Hygiene.

"Dr. Anders, of Philadelphia," remarks a writer in Meehan's Monthly, "a few years ago made the interesting discovery that the ozone in the atmosphere, the element which is the great purifier, was mainly supplied from blooming flowers, and for this reason blooming plants were healthful in dwellings and attractive. Some interesting experiments with the odors of flowers have been made in the old world, and it is found that many species of microbes are easily destroyed by various odors. The odor of cloves has been known to destroy these minute creatures in twenty five minutes. Cinnamon will kill some species in twelve minutes; thyme in thirty-five. In forty-five minutes the common wild verbena is found effective, while the odor of some geranium flowers has destroyed various forms of microbes in fifty minutes. The essence of cinnamon is said to destroy the typhoid fever microbes in twelve minutes, and is recorded as the most effective of all odors as an antiseptic. It is now believed that flowers which are found in Egyptian mummies were placed there more for their antiseptic properties than as mere ornaments or elements in sentimental work."

Perhaps we shall yet learn why the ancient altars smoked with sacred incense, and why the garments were fragrant with myrrh and aloes, and cassia. (Psa. xlv, 8.)

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SNOW PUDDING.—One-half box Cox's gelatine put to soak over night in one pint of cold water, and a pint of scalded milk added in the morning till gelatine is dissolved; strain, sweeten, and flavor, and let it come to the boiling point; put in a cold place to harden. When the jelly begins to set beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth and whip them thoroughly into the jelly, then pour into a mold and let it remain until wanted.

Sauce for Same.—The yolks of the three eggs and one whole egg added to one and one half pints milk, sweeten and flavor to taste, and make into a soft custard. To be eaten cold. When ready for the table the sauce can either be poured around the custard on the dish or served separately.—Exchange.

POTATO CROQUETTES.—Five or six potatoes mashed and well-beaten with a fork; salt, a little cayenne, one tablespoonful of melted butter, and one egg beaten to a froth and added to them. Form into little balls, roll in egg and cracker crums, and fry in a wire basket in boiling drippings. Take them out as soon as drained; serve hot; garnish with parsley.—Exchange.

ENLIGHTENMENT enables the more advanced and Conservative Surgeons of to-day to cure many diseases without cutting, which were formerly regarded as incurable without resort to the knife. RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy Trusses can be thrown away! TUMORS, Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations. PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife. STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

HAMMETT—ROBT. E. HAMMETT was the son of Enoch and Jane Hammett. He was born Jan. 1, 1813, in St Mary's county, Md, and died at his home in Natchitoches parish, La., on July 19, 1894. He came from the State of Maryland to this State in 1834. He came to this parish in 1836. He was widely and favorably known. He was married to Miss Celia A. Barker, of West Feliciana parish, La., December, 1839. She died in 1853, leaving four children, three of whom survive. He was married again to Mrs Dorotea E. Davis, who was Miss Bryan, of Bienville parish, La., in 1854. She had one little girl. He joined the church, in 1840, under the ministry of Rev. Newton Hamil. Being converted, he was appointed class leader of the new organization. He served the church in every capacity that a layman could. He held some office in the church, and sometimes three or four, until the day of his death. He was recording steward until 1870. He regarded it a great privilege to attend quarterly meetings (distance was no obstacle). Being always present, he was elected secretary until he felt that he was no longer able to serve. He was a Mason, and was secretary of the lodge when he died. He had been justice of the peace almost continuously for fifty years, and never had a case reversed. He was charitable and kind to all. None ever went to him in distress and were turned away.

He tried to raise his children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." They were always called in, night and morning, to family prayer. He kept them supplied with good books and papers. He read a great deal himself. He had read through Clarke's Commentaries twice, and intended reading them again. One who knew him all his (the writer's) life, and loved him as a father, writes to us, that "in looking back over the long years that are gone, he can not remember one act of his that was not in keeping with his religious profession as a Christian." Under all circumstances and trials, in prosperity and adversity, our dear father was the same consistent Christian—a high and noble example for those he loved to follow. We will never again hear his humble prayer or his fatherly words of counsel. After a long, useful and honorable life he has gone to that home he told us of with his dying breath—that home of love, joy, and peace and rest in heaven. He said: "Children, don't grieve. I am happy." He passed away as peacefully as one going to sleep. He leaves an aged sister, wife and nine children. All the children are married and members of the same church to which he belonged—the M. E. Church, South.

With sorrowing hearts we pay this last tribute to our dear father's memory; but we shall meet him again if we are faithful. After a brief service in the church conducted by our pastor, he was buried with masonic honors.

HIS CHILDREN.

Texas Christian Advocate please copy.

PHILLIPS—Died, at Talladega, Ala., Oct 25, 1894, Mrs JULIA F PHILLIPS. She was born in Paulding, Miss., 1850, and was married to C. J. Phillips, 1874. She leaves six children, one having passed over the river in advance of her. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life while yet a child.

Her last illness was about forty-five days, during which time she suffered very greatly, but with patience. A few days before her departure she called the family to her bedside and gave each one a parting blessing, and gave direction concerning her burial. She informed those attending her that she had spent her life in preparing to answer the summons to render her account, and that she was ready to depart. As she neared the end she requested that "How firm a foundation," etc., be sung. Having lived the life of a Christian, no one is surprised that she triumphed at the last, and went home to her eternal rest. W. C. HEARN.

HUNT—D. K. HUNT died Oct. 2, 1894; beloved superintendent of the Methodist Sunday-school, Vidalia, La. The following Sunday a committee was appointed by Mr. Hunt's successor to draft suitable resolutions in his memory. The committee reported as follows:

Whereas, It hath pleased Almighty God to take from our Sunday school our beloved superintendent, who for so long has been to us an under-shepherd; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in meek submission to his will, we feel with deep regret our heavy loss in the church, the community, and the Sunday-school.

Resolved, That we, as a Sunday-school, ever honor and cherish his memory, and extend to the bereaved wife and son our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Concordia Sentinel (Vidalia) for publication, and also a copy presented to the bereft widow. MISS LYDA AUST, for Com.

ALFORD.—DR. JAMES THOMAS ALFORD was born in Copiah county, Miss., April 25, 1840, and died July 17 1894. He was twice married—to Miss Martha Eliza Prewick, June 23, 1864, and to Miss Julia Catoning Steele, Sept. 29, 1870. By these happy marriages were born unto him four sprightly, intelligent boys.

Bro. Alford was converted and joined the church in early life. As a physician, he stood high, and was beloved by all who came under his medical treatment. As a benefactor, his acts of Christian generosity will linger long in the memories of those who knew him best. As a gentleman, he was of the old ante bellum type. As a husband, he was a model, and his bereaved companion calls to memory a thousand tokens of affection to soften her grief. As a father, he governed his children wisely and impressed upon their minds the importance of early consecration to God. As a Methodist, he was intensely loyal. In his material support of the church he abounded in liberality. His appreciation of his pastor was often expressed in words of cheer and encouragement. As a Sunday-school worker he was always prompt and diligent. Though quiet and unobtrusive, so earnest, deep piety permeated his moral being and his life was "a living epistle, known and read of men." He was strong in his attainments, and a more sympathetic heart never pulsated in a human bosom.

He was faithful in all the relations of life, and efficient in all his duties to the church. His complete triumph when the end came was in accord with the life he had lived. May his Christian mantle fall upon the shoulders of his dear boys. Farewell, my brother; but not forever. We will meet again in the sweet by-and-by. W. W. HURST.

REAMES—RACHEL CARL REAMES was born on Dec. 4, 1821, and departed this life in the city of Baton Rouge, Aug. 16 1894. She was partially reared by her sister, Mrs. E. A. Young, in the State of Mississippi. Her first marriage was in 1840 to W. H. Lake, who lived only a few years. By this marriage she leaves one son living in West Baton Rouge parish. Her second marriage was to J. W. Reames, with whom she lived until 1889, rearing quite a large family—two sons and seven daughters—all members of the M. E. Church, South. The eulogy pronounced upon Mary might be truthfully given to her—"She hath done what she could."

Sue was, since my earliest recollection, a Christian, and one of more than ordinary faith in God. When a boy of seven years she encouraged me to read aloud and to her certain portions of the New Testament, and would correct me as I read, giving here and there a word of explanation. Thus in early life was the foundation of my Christian character laid. I shall not forget where or when I first read the third chapter of St. Matthew.

Mother was not afraid to die. She "knew in whom she believed." Many more things like the foregoing could be added, but I desist. I fully expect to meet my dear parents again when the storm of life is over.

HER ITINERANT SON.

HARRINGTON—On Friday morning, Oct. 5 1894, the pure spirit of HENLEY P. HARRINGTON was taken by death from its earthly abode to its heavenly vocation to enjoy the rewards awaiting the true and good. He was born in North Carolina, June 19, 1843. When a youth of seventeen years he came to Lauderdale county, Miss., settling near where he lived at the time of his death. He married Miss Mary Cochran, Dec 2, 1864, who, with five children, survive to deplore their irreparable loss.

This inscrutable providence that deprives our church and community of one so good and helpful we deplore as a calamity, and yet we must not question the wisdom and goodness of God's providential dealings.

He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, since 1873. For twenty years his influence and means have contributed to support the church of his choice. As a result of his godly example, all his children are members of the church to which he belonged.

He was sick about two weeks, and from the first seemed to have a premonition that his sickness would prove fatal. Just before death he said he was happy, and bade his family and friends farewell. May God bless the widow and fatherless children! D. G. W. ELLIS.

GIBBS—HELEN RIVERS, infant daughter of Needham and Roxie Gibbs, was born July 24, 1893, and died Sept 30, 1894, aged one year two months and six days.

Helen was a lovely little flower sent to brighten the home of her parents for only a short time, and then was plucked by the angel reaper to bloom in unfading beauty forever.

Dear friends, it was indeed hard to see your bright, beautiful baby go; but remember and take comfort in the thought that you have one more flower planted in the garden of God, and that some sweet day, if you are faithful, you will see and claim her as your own again.

May God comfort her parents and those who loved her and help them to meet her where partings will be no more! Be true and faithful, and then I know when your journey is over, when the path of life is trod, you will find the soul of your baby abloom in the garden of God. A FRIEND.

LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS.

IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS

Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the friend mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the added motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical tones, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves a abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by masculine imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Admiral Gherardi, of the United States Navy, retired from service on the 10th. His record is a long and honorable one.

It is said that there will be thirty-four contested election cases before the next Congress, on the part of Republicans and Populists.

A number of Democrats also claim that they were defeated by fraudulent means, but whether they will make contests is not yet definitely ascertained.

The twenty-fifth Annual Convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held at Cleveland, O., on Nov. 16. The convention will assume the nature of a historic anniversary.

The Southern Exposition, at Montgomery, Ala., was formally opened by the governor of the State, with great parade and ceremonies, last week. There was a large attendance of sightseers.

The strike situation is nearing a solution. The white sawmen will consent to take in a hundred colored men, and also make no objection to employment of colored labor by certain stevedores.

There seems likely to be a contest before the Legislature of Tennessee, which meets January, '95, for the office of governor, the Democrats claiming that there were frauds practiced by the Republicans in East Tennessee.

The election on last Tuesday was a Waterloo for the Democratic party. The Republicans will have an overwhelming majority in the Lower House of Congress, and with the aid of the Populists can control the Senate.

The Populist members in Washington take a roseate view of the result of the election. In all of the States west of the Mississippi river, which have formerly been Republican, except Iowa and California, the People's party was second in the race.

Not only will the Democracy lose control of the lower House of Congress, as a result of the land slide on election day; but the control of the Senate will be lost as well. Owing to the fact that the Legislatures of several States hitherto Democratic will be Republican, the Republican party will secure several Senators within the next few months.

It is said that England has laid claim to the head of the Chilkoot Inlet, 400 miles northwest of Juneau and near Mount St. Elias, Alaska. The claim is made as a result of the international boundary survey. The land will be used for the purpose of establishing a coaling station there.

The recent election in the State of New York disposed of several important matters, in addition to the defeat of Hill, Tammany and the Democratic Congressional candidates; and among them was the proposition for the consolidation of New York City with the cities and towns surrounding the metropolis, which was voted upon favorably.

The trial of the suit for the removal of the mayor of this city was begun on Nov. 8. The hearing of the testimony on the first count, relative to the Belt Railroad ordinance, was brought to a close on the ninth, and the prosecution took up for consideration the second charge, relating to the mayor's failure to suspend councilmen under indictment for bribery.

Gen. O. O. Howard, of the United States Army, retired from service on the eighth, having reached the legal age of retirement—sixty-four. He has been in military service forty years. He participated in twenty-two engagements during the late war. His activities have never been confined to military exploits. He has for many years been active in ecclesiastical and philanthropic work—Y. M. C. A., temperance, Bible cause, etc.

On Nov. 12 a very disastrous cotton fire occurred at Westwego, in the parish of Jefferson, opposite the upper portion of this city, but within the limits of the port of New Orleans. According to the best estimates obtainable something like 28 000 bales of cotton were consumed, as well as the wharf and shed belonging to the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, and about forty-five freight cars belonging to the same company. The total loss will aggregate $600,000.

Profoundly impressive ceremonies were held at the Russian legation in Washington, on Nov. 9, in memory of Czar Alexander III., whose remains now lie in state at Moscow, soon to be buried in the imperial tomb of the Czars. President Cleveland and the entire Cabinet, except Postmaster General Bissell, attended, accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland and the Cabinet ladies, the foreign ambassadors and ministers with their extensive suites, wearing their rich official and court dress, were present in a body, lending brilliant color to the solemn occasion.

FOREIGN.

A cloudburst near Valencia, Venezuela, killed 150 persons and damaged the coffee and other crops to the extent of half a million dollars. Houses have been leveled, bridges washed away and traffic generally suspended.

A feeling of apprehension respecting the stability of the home policy of Germany is amply justified by the ministerial changes, which everybody now agrees to be imminent. Prince Hohenlohe, the new chancellor, as stated in previous dispatches, is determined that every member of the Cabinet shall be in entire harmony with his views.

The remains of Czar Alexander were received at Moscow, on Nov. 11, with appropriate ceremonies, and placed in state in St. Michael's Cathedral.

It is now generally admitted that the restriction of the veto power of the House of Lords will be the first measure on the Ministerial programme for the coming session of the British Parliament, to be followed in succession by the registration bill and the Irish evicted tenants' bill.

After a contest lasting not more than three months, China has been compelled to admit that she is not prepared to cope with Japan, and that her territory is now practically at the mercy of the armies of the Mikado. This much, it is said, the Chinese government has freely admitted to the representatives of the great powers, and these same representatives have been requested to ask their respective governments to use their good offices to secure favorable terms of peace from Japan.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

By Rev. Henry H. Ahrens.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

WHAT WE KNOW.

(II. Tim. i, 12; II. Cor. v, 1; I. John iii, 14; Rom. viii, 28.)

Knowledge is a relative term. Absolute knowledge is omniscience. Religious knowledge is theory based on experience. Thus, and thus only, faith is possible. Religious knowledge is hence tantamount to being so persuaded in our own mind. Our texts indicate a few realms of religious knowledge.

I. "Know whom I have believed," etc.

(1) Found Jesus precious to our souls at conversion. Washed us in his own blood. Dear to our heart.

(2) When we prayed in his name, the Father heard and answered our petitions.

(3) Made good his promise to be with his people always. He sustained, comforted, led.

2. "We know if this earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved," etc.

(1) A poetical description of the death of this body. Our body an earthly house suited for life sublunar. Death is dissolution.

(2) At death our spirits shall be suitably attired, situated and surrounded, enabling us consciously to live and be happy.

(3) All things terrestrial are subject to the tooth of time. Change, declension, termination. But the house not made with hands is eternal in the heavens.

3. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

(1) An expressive and fitting description of regeneration: "passing from death unto life." Unregenerate, we are dead in trespasses and sins. Born again.

(2) The Christian's life, acquired at regeneration, succored by divine grace, dies not at death. "Whosoever believeth in me shall never die."

(3) Proof positive of living this life we have in loving the brethren. If this love actuates, impels us, we are indeed children of God. Love the brethren for Christ's sake.

4. Our fourth text indicates that the effects of sin have converted this earth into a vale of tears. With all its loveliness, God's curse rests on this earth. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain."

(1) Earth is a wilderness through which we, as pilgrims and strangers, journey.

(2) Death is to the Christian not a fearful enemy, a tyrant horridly odious, but is a friend, an emancipator, liberator.

(3) No wonder the Christian desires to depart and be with Christ; for

"In heaven above, where all is love—
Yes, there is no weeping there."

LEAGUE DOTS.

Are you a subscriber to the 'Epworth Era?" The paper is indispensable to you. How about the 10-cent assessment?

The New Orleans Epworth League Union held its monthly meeting in Parker Chapel, Nov. 8. The chapel was charmingly decorated. Attendance good. Meeting profitable and pleasant.

During the recent session of the Holston Annual Conference, Oct. 21-28, an entire evening was given to the deliberation of Epworth League affairs. Its history and philosophy, aims and methods, were ably discussed.

At its last meeting, the Louisiana Avenue Epworth League adopted the new Constitution provided by Dr. S. A. Steele's Board, and under the provisions of same, elected officers for six months. The following were chosen by ballot:

President, Mr. John Thomson Crebbin; first vice-president, Miss Louise Gowers; second vice-president, Mr. Herbert M. Norman; third vice-president, Miss Eloise Ahrens; secretary, Mr. Harry W. Spear; and treasurer, Mr. J. Fred. Barringer.

The attendance at the meeting was very large, and the reports made indicated that this League is doing good work.

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

Attacks on Washing-Powders

don't affect Pearline. Pearline is a washing-compound in powder form, to be sure, but quite a different thing. It's made so that it acts upon dirt as nothing else will, but can't possibly do any harm to substance, hands or fabric. Soap-makers are advertising against washing-powders, claiming that they ruin the clothes. They're more than half right. But chemical analysis and the experience of millions of women prove that Pearline hasn't the power to harm clothes that soap has. And it saves all that ruinous rubbing that you have to use with soap, besides.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 396 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

THE LIVING NOW.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new,
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you;
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed,
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds which smarted and bled
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever;
Bound up in a sheaf which God holds tight,
With glad days and sad days which never
Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go since we can not relieve them,
Can not undo and can not atone;
God in his mercy receive, forgive them;
Only the new days are our own.
To-day is ours and to-day alone.

. . . . . .

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And spite of old sorrow and old sinning,
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again.

Traveling a Circuit in Japan.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

We left Hiroshima, Saturday afternoon, Sept. 1, for Matsuyama. It was an ideal night—to one passenger on the little vessel, a holy benediction upon his silver wedding day with a bridal present, very precious, "descending out of heaven from God." There, under those oriental fires of heaven, was a double replighting of faith for another half-jubilee of years—both to the work of his Lord and to the brown-eyed bride far over the seas.

Arriving at Mitsugahama at 9:30 o'clock, we had a five miles' jinriksha ride to Matsuyama, where we found Bro. Moseley sick in bed with bilious fever, and eagerly awaiting our coming. Monday morning he was able to be up and speed the parting guests on their way to other appointments. Matsuyama is a city of 40,000 inhabitants, and the capital of a ken. It was a castle city in the days of the daimios—the feudal lords—and on the lofty mountain which overlooks the valley for miles is the finest castle and the best kept yet seen in Japan, much resembling the Edinburgh Castle, where Scottish chiefs and kings so long had home and throne. We had a quiet Sabbath, with morning and evening preaching to small, but apparently quite intelligent, congregations. Our faithful band here hopes before many months to worship in their new church—Lambuth Chapel—named in honor of the ascended saint whose frail body sleeps in a missionary's grave at Kobe. The corner-stone was laid in July; the cap-stone, I hope, will be brought forth with rejoicing before the new year. I was pleased with the large, well-selected lot, with ample room for church and parsonage, without disturbing some fruitful trees ladened with oranges, pomegranates, peaches, and figs. On Monday morning most of the native members called in a body, and I had the privilege of baptizing the baby daughter of our Japanese preacher.

Accompanied by young Bro. Toyosaki as guide and interpreter, we took steamer for Oita, on the Kinshu coast. After nine hours' steady sailing around wooded islands and across narrow straits—gateways to the great ocean—we reached our destination in Kinshu—the island of nine countries. Here in Oita, a city of 25,000 inhabitants, we were on historic ground—the very spot where the heroic—and shall I not say apostolic?—Francis Xavier lived and wrought so wonderfully in the name of our Lord. In five years he saw possibly two hundred thousand Japanese forsake Buddhism for Christianity. The Daimio of the province became an ardent convert, and his son was sent as special ambassador to Rome; but shortly thereafter, in the war of extermination against the Christians, the old feudal lord, having fought desperately, fled from his castle and committed suicide rather than die by knife and torch. At a place not very far from Oita thousands of Christians were brutally massacred. But through the more than two hundred intervening years—years of sleepless espionage and relentless hostility against Christianity—some secretly clung to their Christian faith, and at the first opportunity openly announced their allegiance to the long-despised Nazarene.

At Oita we have a prosperous, spiritual church. There was Methodistic heartiness in the worship, and a crowded house to hear the Word. For four years Bro. W. A. Wilson has labored here with gratifying success, having added substantially to the membership, and built both a handsome church and parsonage. This is a congregation of fine-looking, promising young men. From that church have already come several of our best native workers. Some facts in the early history of Oita Methodism are worthy of place in the chronicles of the skies.

One distinguished-looking old gentleman called who has two sons preparing for the ministry. He is a happy, earnest Christian now, and very proud of his preacher-boys; but he has only been in the faith two years, and, like Paul, breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the church for a time. When the first of his sons became a Christian he was enraged, and, with drawn sword, demanded that he recant on penalty of death. But the boy stood firm; said he would rather die than belie his Lord, and has had the joy to see the whole family kneeling at the same Christian altar and singing the same hymns of praise.

We made a jinriksha excursion to Beppu, a large village six miles from Oita, around the coast, famed for its hot springs and baths. Here the lame and halt come for healing, and the multitudes gather for the pleasure of steaming and plunging. I wonder that these little people are not parboiled—they are so fond of hot water. The familiarity and sociability of these baths wrought on the nerves of my American prudishness more than anything yet witnessed in this land of undress. Men, women, and children, without the slightest suggestion of a blush, mingled indiscriminately and gleefully in the steaming pools together. Such utter innocence of shame I did not think possible in the human family. No wonder that is regarded as a hard place for missionary effort; but nowhere in "the nine countries" is it more sadly needed.

A new circuit adjoining Oita, with Nakatsu for a center, and Bro. Callahan as pastor, has been enterprised, and, it is hoped, will prove a fruitful field.

On Tuesday night, in charge of Bro. Davis, who had come to meet us, we left for Uwajima, at the end of the Inland Sea, and the most distant point of our work. We arrived at 8:30 o'clock the next morning, ready for breakfast on land in Bro. Davis' hired house. The mistress of the manse was still at Arima in the mountains, so we did as we pleased and fared the best we could. Bro. Davis and his faithful wife labor for their Lord, with no missionary neighbor less than one hundred miles away. But that isolation identifies them more fully with the people, and they see more readily the fruit of their toil.

Thanks to "the lord of the hill"—a retainer of the Prince—we visited the castle grounds on the mountain, but could not enter the little pagoda-shaped building. That honor is denied to Japanese and foreigners alike. Some skilled military eye planted that ancient fortress, and there was no little engineering genius displayed in its construction.

Our church here has recovered from the trouble of some years ago, and is doing well. Its history contains incidents of thrilling interest. We had a good congregation out at night, and it is hoped the service was not without good results. A large, eligible lot has been secured, and before long we shall have a tasteful church in this beautiful outpost on the Inland Sea.

Leaving Uwajima on Thursday at noon, we took ship for Kobe, traveling the entire length of the Inland Sea, and arriving there on Saturday morning at 7 o'clock. Foreigners who sail over that "sea within the straits" in small boats must be provided with "bed and board"—cots and "coreys"—fu-tons and lunch baskets. The fu ton is a thick comfort which serves as a mattress. A well-filled basket is also a necessity. Foreigners are not fond of Japanese food, nor are they of ours. But thus provided, and being content with a small place on the floor with an indefinite number of sleepers, who snore and smoke at intervals during night and day, one can travel with comparative comfort. These things, however, are not worthy of mention in connection with the joy experienced while visiting the various appointments on this great Methodist circuit. I only regret not being able to stop with Bro. Myers at Tadotsu for a day, which would have completed the round. After a few hours in Kobe reading American mail, I ran up to Osaka to spend the Sabbath. And a delightful day it was with Bros. Utley and Towson. In the morning at East Osaka, where Bro. Towson is both pastor and presiding elder, there was a large congregation. They are worshiping now in a street chapel; but, thanks to the Board of Church Extension and the liberal gift of a consecrated woman, a representative church will soon be erected on an eligible lot. In West Osaka, where Bro. Utley ministers, and where at night I had the pleasure of preaching and baptizing four little Japanese, we also need and must have a good church. This is probably the greatest manufacturing and commercial city in Japan, with over 500,000 inhabitants, and increasing rapidly. I hope some other noble soul will help us plant permanently in that part of this great city. With two church-buildings and a system of street chapels, our work in that great center will move forward speedily. Ninety-one steamers and fourteen thousand sailboats are engaged in Osaka trade on the Inland Sea. Here the Imperial mint is located, and more large manufactories than in any city of Japan. I plead for this important place.

With the Sabbath at Osaka my circuit of the sea was completed, and my mission in Japan, for the present, ended. In two weeks I have traveled over one thousand miles by boat, railroad and jinriksha—one hundred by the last—have preached ten times, seen many phases of missionary work and life, greeted many earnest native Christians, kept perfectly well, and been happy all the time. How this mighty work calls out the energies and sympathies of the soul! I wonder not that these brethren are so devoted to it, and are reluctant even to leave for a few weeks of needed rest. We need more men to occupy inviting fields. I pray the church not to retrench, but increase her offerings, so that at this crucial time we may renew an aggressive movement upon this strategic island kingdom of the East. Now is the hour for assault as well as siege.

I leave to-day in the "Empress of Japan" for China, with many thanksgivings and blessed memories of delightful weeks in this "Land of the Rising Sun." My faith in the redemption of this country has increased daily. The adverse forces are strong and determined, but our Lord is moving steadily to conquest. May he speed the glorious hour!

The war absorbs all attention. A number of our best members are in the field as officers or private soldiers. The Emperor moves this week to Hiroshima, to be nearer the seat of war, and by his presence to inspirit his brave battalions. These people are determined to win in this struggle, and will exhaust the resources and credit of the kingdom in order to humble their giant neighbor, called by an enthusiastic Jap the "great sleeper."

Look on This Picture, Then on That.

The civilization introduced by Columbus and that brought over by the Pilgrim Fathers have been on trial for centuries. One has pined amid the wealth of tropical vegetation and fertile soil; the other has flourished amid the wintry winds and barren hills of New England. One, with its mines of silver and gold, has dragged its way on amid peonage and poverty. The other, with its sandy shores and inhospitable climate, has grown strong and rich and prosperous. One has been marked by tyranny, barbarism and perpetual revolution; the other has prepared the way for liberty, humanity, and a stable and prosperous government. The countries to which Spain gave the Inquisition and the Sunday bull fights are shunned by emigrants as if infected by the plague, while the land which was blessed with the Bible and the common school has sounding on its shores every year the tramp of a million of feet of those who come from all lands and climes to repose beneath the shadow of free institutions based upon the Word of God.—Hastings.

The Church Paper.

Twenty-five years ago there was occasion to investigate the case as to contributions to foreign missions by a certain circuit in our connection. The circuit was put down in the Minutes as having, in round numbers, 600 members. It was ascertained that less than 60 members gave all that was given, and that of the whole amount reported the presiding elder and the preacher in charge gave just one-fifth, and that two other persons gave another fifth. What losses the church sustains through this immense non-paying and non-working multitude! If all did something, our treasury would overflow; if one-half did something, the debt would be paid in a year, and our little army in the field re-enforced, and the spiritual power of the home church would be quadrupled.

But how are we to get all our members—even half our members—to do something when one-half (as there is reason to believe) of our people read no church paper? People feel no interest in enterprises of which they have no knowledge. They pay but little, and pay that little reluctantly, to advance a cause they do not care for.

There has come to us recently a statement that almost takes one's breath: there is, we are reliably informed, a Southern Methodist Church with full 600 members without a single church paper, except that taken by the pastor! What money the pastor gets from this church he will get by a dead-lift. If his assessment amounts to much, he will not get it, unless he pays it. And such a church will pay small salaries. If it ever contemplates an advance movement in its own interests, it will ask help from the Church Extension Board. It is only a question of time when such a church will suffer disruption, either by internal dissension, which would not break out in an informed membership, or by the coming of some fanatical outsider holding a meeting, whose only permanent result is division and anarchy.

Show me an ignorant, uninformed, non-reading church that does its part in God's work for the salvation of men, and we will retract this editorial, plead ignorance, and beg pardon for writing it.—Nashville Advocate.

College or Athletic Club.

Under the above heading last week's Wesleyan Advocate has a very sensible and timely editorial, from which we quote as follows:

"In college and university life the fashion now is football. It is worse than a fashion—it is a 'fad.' It is worse than either—it is a craze.

"We are evolving new ideas, and out of them new ways. Our simple-hearted fathers were under the delusion that colleges and universities were institutions for mental training. Some of them thought moral training of some consequence. Moreover, some thought that a college without Christ was worse than no college at all. In those days fathers told their sons to what schools they must go; nowadays very often the boys tell their fathers to what school they will consent to go.

"In the last month we have known more than one spoiled city boy to notify his father that he would not go to any college at all. His reason was, he 'did not wish to.' And the silly fathers yielded and let their silly boys take their own course—generally downward.

"The football college is the college now—wild boys being judges.

"Last Sunday one Georgia daily contained telegrams giving account of ten football games—fights, rather. Doubtless there were twoscore—maybe a hundred—intercollegiate college games played Saturday, Nov. 3, not reported to this Southern paper. In the paper before us we see for head-line, 'Vanderbilt Downs Auburn.' We have seen several times that 'Vanderbilt University' is deep 'in it.'

"Vanderbilt, our Vanderbilt, is even. Downed Auburn this year. The Vanderbilt captain 'sprained an ankle.' An Auburn man, however, had his 'jawbone broken.' So our boys are a little ahead.

"Think of the time taken in practice. They work themselves 'into condition' like prize fighters. What time taken from study! what vital force wasted! What fatal breaks in habits of study these long trips involve! what sums of money wasted!

"We are sorry to see 'Vanderbilt' so often figuring in these football telegrams. We were simple enough to have entertained other ideas concerning our leading (?) school on the Cumberland. One thing we ask, At this rate, whither does it lead? Our ten Bishops are ex-officio trustees of Vanderbilt. What do they think of this waste of the time and strength of the students? This squandering of the money of their parents?

"We have said nothing of the immoral influences that inevitably go along with these intercollegiate games. No one who knows young men and the times in which we live needs that we should say anything on this subject."

Dr. Parkhurst on Anarchy.

The anarchism we may well fear most is the unfledged, the ungraduated anarchism, the leaven of lawlessness that has not yet arrived at the stage of parading under a red flag, publishing carnage and manufacturing dynamite. The blossom does not look much like the seed; still it is the one life that stretches all the way from the seed to the blossom. Union laborers mauling and breaking the bones of non-union laborers are not anarchists even as the bud is not the blossom. Any violation of law has inhering in it some of the essence of anarchy. Anarchical movements and anarchical men exhibit on a magnified scale the same animus that is present in a quiet way in thousands of people that would feel themselves outrageously insulted if they were classed in the same category with Herr Schnabel and Herr Most.

There is a vast amount of anarchy that is inculcated at the hearthstone. Home disobedience is anarchy in swaddling clothes. Arithmetic is a good thing, and so is geography, but common sense is better, and obedience is the best of the lot. The greatest lesson you can learn at home or school, the lesson that will make you holy men and women, is to learn to do as you are told. Bread and meat are the stuff that makes your body; obedience is the stuff that will make your manhood and womanhood.—Exchange.

While the Word Was Being Preached.

"While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell." That is the focus! First meeting or second meeting, it is the entrance of God's Word that gives light. What I ask for first meeting or second meeting is to get God's Word entered. Why should it not enter while the people are sitting there listening? Our eyes were opened to this fact long ago by reading Wesley's Journal. Many conversions took place while he was preaching, and the converts came up at the close and reported the fact to him, and were immediately classified. The late Dr. Samuel Hanson Cox, addressing some ministers in this city, told them that he had had an extraordinary time preaching, and that a man came up to him and said at the close: "Dr. Cox, I am obliged to you for that sermon. While I was hearing it I gave my heart to God." "And," said Dr. Cox, 'I was such a poor, unbelieving sinner that I hardly knew what to make of it, and wondered if the man was crazy. Hereafter I intend to preach with reference to a man's giving his heart to God while I am speaking."

Let the Methodists ever remember that all the wonderful triumphs of those first seventy years in England, and the first forty-three years in this country, were before the introduction of the mourners' bench, or any method of the sort.—New York Advocate.

Methodism in Rome.

I spent a month in Italy. Preached in ten of our stations; examined our property; mingled with our people; and looked into the history, the character, methods and piety of our preachers; and whatever errors they may have committed in the past, I am free to say that I shall induce my friends to make large contributions to our missions in Italy, and shall give freely myself. We have a most competent superintendent, who is in every way adapted to his great work, and the rank and file of our preachers are devoted to their ministry. The great building which we are erecting in Rome will be a magnificent fact, a monument of Protestant Christianity, and will challenge the Propaganda for the control of religions thought in the Italian kingdom.—From Bishop Newman, in N. W. Advocate.

Kicking a Dead Lion.

I have heard of a man traveling around the country exploding this Book, and showing up "the mistakes of Moses," at two hundred dollars a night. It is easy work to abuse Moses at two hundred dollars a night, especially as Moses is dead, and can not talk back. It would be worth something, after hearing the infidel on "the mistakes of Moses," to hear Moses on "the mistakes of the infidel." When Moses could talk back, he was rather a difficult man to deal with. Pharaoh tried it, and met with poor success. Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, and it is said found a grave in the Red Sea. Korah, Dathan and Abiram tried it, and went down so deep that they have not yet got back. But now Moses is dead, and it is easy to abuse him. It does not take a very brave beast to kick a dead lion.—Hastings.

The Methodists in Peking appear to be appropriating heathen temples by the wholesale. Three have already passed into their hands, and their eager eyes are now fixed upon a fourth, which will be laid hold of as soon as the cash is forthcoming from America. —Central Methodist.

In the Living Present.

Nervously fussy, excitedly noisy, distressingly busy people effect but little in life. Calmness gives executive force. Steadiness secures ease. This ease prevents friction and wastage of resources.

We encourage all temperance movements, from total abstinence to prohibition. God-speed them! But we must confess that Gov. Tillman's "Dispensary Law" has not awakened sympathetic chords in our heart. Good may result, but the fact remains that South Carolina is a monopolistic liquor dealer.

Protestants and Papists alike hold that the Bible is a divine revelation. Both claim the Bible as the Christian's ultimate authority. Where, now, is the dividing line between the two? Luther held—Protestants hold—that the individual conscience is the final and authoritative interpreter of the Bible. Papism, however, declares that that interpretation rests with the church, represented by the Pope—the latter infallible.

A county convention of homeopathists, together with the associated allopaths, recommend the use of the individual cup at the holy communion. "What a pity," says an exchange, "that Christ was not aware of the possible danger from bacteria when he instituted this sacrament!" Homeopathists usually disagree with the allopaths on any given subject; but here they are agreed. Well, Pilate and Herod were made friends when Christ was being wickedly sentenced to die on the cross.

A preacher in Hamburg desired to ascertain the influence of the hard times on his congregation. He requested that all who could not pay their debts should rise. All but one person rose. That one person, looking seedy, hungry, and woe begone, was now requested to rise and state his sad case. Said he: "I publish a paper. The subscribers, including my brethren here, are greatly in arrears with payment"— He wished to say more, but the preacher interrupted him by saying, "Receive the benediction."

On the fifth of November the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Hans Sachs was celebrated at all prominent universities in Germany, specially in Nuernberg, his native city. Hans Sachs was a cobbler, but at the same time a poet of highest merit. His poem, of which appeared eleven editions in twelve months, called "The Nightingale of Wittenberg"—meaning Luther—rendered great help to the Reformation. The erudite of his age refused a long time to acknowledge his worth, because of his lack of university training. Disdainfully they wrote of him:

"Hans Sachs is a shoe-Maker and a poet, too."

But his exquisite productions are popular to this day, while his learned tradncers are forgotten.

THOU ART NEAR.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

"O Love divine, that stooped to share
Our sharpest pang, our bitterest tear!
On Thee we cast each earthborn care;
We smile at pain while Thou art near.

"Though long the weary way we tread,
And sorrow crown each lingering year,
No path we shun, no darkness dread,
Our hearts still whispering, 'Thou art near!'

"When drooping pleasure turns to grief,
And trembling faith is changed to fear,
The murmuring wind, the quivering leaf,
Shall softly tell us, 'Thou art near!'

O Love divine, forever dear;
Content to suffer while we know,
Living and dying, Thou art near!"

The Heroism of Foreign Missions.

BY REV. A. F. WATKINS

Bishop Phillips Brooks has an admirable sermon upon "The Heroism of Foreign Missions," in which is brought out in great strength and beauty the heroic spirit of those who carry the glad news of salvation to the regions beyond. The sermon would be altogether admirable were it not for the injustice which is done by implication to the laborer in the home field, in denying to him the unselfishness, which is one of the essential elements of the heroic spirit. Surely the spirit which actuates the true servant of God, whatever the field of labor in which he toils, is the same. Who can doubt that many an humble toiler in the obscure places of the home work possesses as heroic a heart and lives as heroic a life as any who ever consumed his consecrated energies in the fields beyond the seas? Heroism is not indeed a "thing of circumstance."

But, after all, whatever may be said about the spirit of the herald of the cross at home or abroad, is it not true that in the work of the church, the missionary work is the most heroic in which we engage? I shall not attempt to define heroism, but shall content myself with the mention of certain elements that must enter into every heroic impulse, and notice their relative importance in the activities of the church in the home and foreign fields.

First of all, there must be the spirit of unselfishness. The most splendid achievement, the most expressive labor, the most intense sufferings, are all transmuted by the hand of selfishness into the price paid for sordid gain or self-indulgent pleasure. Many a merchant or explorer has endured as much of privation, toil and peril as St. Paul in his missionary journeys; but the one was enterprise or ambition, while the other was Christian heroism. So the important work of building and adorning churches or erecting and furnishing homes for our preachers may be tarnished in the brightness of its real merit by the vanity and pride of which it is the expression. Not so the gifts of the foreign mission work. The impulse that unlocks the springs of liberality in this case is, in its unselfishness, akin to the spirit of him who came from heaven to earth that men might be won from earth to heaven. The nearest approximation of the human to the divine is in him who realizes that others have a want that he can supply and he is "straightened" until he has supplied it.

In no department of Christian service is bravery, as an element of heroism, so splendidly shown as in foreign missions. Nor is it less true that bravery is needed by the man who would consistently and efficiently champion, in the church at home, the cause of Christ in heathen lands. There is something akin to pity in the feeling with which many members of the church look upon an enthusiastic advocate of foreign missions. This is not an extreme statement of the case; this prejudice is deplorably prevalent, as many a pastor and many a member of the Woman's Missionary Society can testify.

Another element of the heroic that must enter into the spirit of the missionary workers, whether standing in the fore-front of the battle or at home providing the sinews of war, is faith. Many a sincere lover of God and his fellow-men has faltered just at this point. At home the result is often immediately visible, and we are encouraged to continued and increased effort. But in foreign mission work there seems to be no return or, at best, but an insufficient return from the energies expended. Such a statement indicates that the fact is lost sight of that "we walk by faith, not by sight." When visible results are demanded, it is not faith that actuates to further effort, but sight adds interest to the toil; it is only when we can not see the ripening harvest that we labor on in implicit trust in him who has promised that in the end our hearts shall be filled with laughter and our lips with the glories of the harvest song. The faith that is "blessed," though it has "not seen" him, is the faith with which the heroic toiler for undying millions labors on until the harvest time without seeing the reward of his labor. The reward will come when "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

And, last of all, the crowning glory of the Christian character, the sun of the Christian virtues, the most God-like element of heroic human souls, is benevolence or love. Love is the epitome of the divine nature, the spring of human joy, the genesis of human activities; with it the soul lives; without it there is death. Love breathes in the fragrance of the flowers, it speaks in every passing breeze, it moves in every snowy cloud that drifts across the sky, it sparkles in the cup of cold water given in Christ's name. In every deed of kindness and word of cheer love is eloquent. But in self-denying labor for the unseen myriads of our race, who live in misery and die in darkness, the spirit of the mortal becomes the spirit of the Infinite One, and God is seen in man.

What is the Question?

It is about time to call a halt in the current discussion about the Residue Theory of Entire Sanctification, long enough at least to learn what is the question. The disputants, pro and con, would be saved much valuable time and an indefinite amount of vagueness if we could all learn just what the question is. I beg all parties to unite with me in an earnest, prayerful effort to find the question.

1. It is not whether or not one may become holy, or perfect in love, or entirely sanctified, in this life. No Methodist denies this possibility. Let us be very careful not to misrepresent each other; for even ignorant misrepresentation is sin; for we ought to know that what we say of a brother is true, or we ought not to say it.

2. It is not whether or not this grace, so variously named, is subsequent to regeneration; for all Methodists agree, with Christ and Paul, that regeneration is the very beginning of the Christian life; hence whatever else of grace may come into that life must come subsequently to that life's beginning.

3. It is not whether or not those who profess this second blessing have had an experience of grace. These spiritual experiences are matters of consciousness; and I know of no intelligent Methodist insane enough to deny the testimony of consciousness. Many do not believe that the consciousness of an experience of grace is capable of settling the theological distinctions between two theories concerning the exact name and invariable number of that experience, and yet they do not question the experience.

4. The question is whether or not there is possible and needed a second cleansing or purifying subsequent to regeneration unless there be first a lapse from regeneration.

5 If it be proved that such subsequent cleansing is possible and needed then the question is: Wherein do these two cleansings or purifyings differ from each other?

Beyond all doubt, this double question—one depends upon the other—and this only, is the question at issue. Let this question be discussed freely, honestly, charitably—let the solution be prayerfully sought; and when found let it be cheerfully accepted and persistently followed. This is the way for sensible Christian men and women to do. All error is hurtful—all prejudice is unmanly—all anger is unchristian, unless it be levelled against sin and not the sinner. As Christians, let us study this question concerning our Father's will. Let us remember that this question is not to be settled—

1. By anybody's experience. I will not discuss the province and the limitation of experience in such matters. It has its province and its limitations—that province is not to settle questions of vital doctrine. If so, we would need no Bible truth on these matters—God never does a needless work. If we are to accept as infallible doctrine what any good man or woman may give as the result of experience we will be compelled to believe all the vagaries of spiritualism, all the abominations of Mormonism, all the etherial indefiniteness and palpable inconsistencies of Swedenborgianism, and all the dreamy impossibilities of that revived Buddhism called Christian Science. Perfectly honest men and women tell us that their experiences warrant them in accepting these strange, false isms. When God closed the canon of Revelation he said: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book:" and this indicates the estimate we are to place upon the Bible as the only standard of doctrine. Experience may corroborate and reinforce Bible truth, but set up a doctrine never. It is not one of "the Methodist standards."

2. This question can not be settled by any appeal to Wesley, Watson, or any other so-called standards of Methodist doctrine. No Methodist preacher or member is ever required by our church to promise to believe everything Wesley, Watson, or any other mere man, ever wrote. The hymn book is not our creed. In our Fifth Article of Religion we read: "The Holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation; so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation." Let us stand by this, and quit trying to convert each other by quoting Wesley and Watson and the hymn book. Good as these are, we all recognize the Bible as infinitely better, and as our only real and ultimate standard of doctrine. A brother was, a few years ago, charged before an Annual Conference with being a heretic because he could not say "shibboleth" to a certain current theory of holiness. He went before the committee, announced his position to be as charged, and then demanded what standards he contradicted. He was told that he was charged as a heretic because his positions contradicted Wesley, Watson and Ralston. He took Wesley, Watson and Ralston, and proved every position he held from each; and then remarked: "Now I will prove them from the Bible." "Oh," replied the committee, which was not all of one faction; "you are not charged with being out of harmony with the Bible;" and thus ended the farce.

Brethren, the question is a Bible question. Wesley was not a Bible writer—nor was Watson—nor is Carradine—nor is Boland. The hymn book is not one of the books of the Bible.

3. To call each other names will not convince anybody of anything except of the folly of the railer. Zinzendorfism may be very rhetorical in sound, but it has no logical force; fanatic and unmethodistic may sound forcible, but they prove nothing. For undergraduates to read such men as Dr. Walker out of the church, and for fiery young disputants to declare that their theory or infidelity must be accepted if a man be honest, may indicate that we have some very bold men among us; but it evidences no wisdom and converts nobody. What we want is Bible evidence proving one side or the other of this vexed question. If any brother has this to offer, let him be heard—if not, let him be silent.

I have risen to a question of order. I insist that the question is: Does the Bible teach that there is the possibility and need of a work of cleansing or purifying or removing canses of impurity subsequent to regeneration when there has been no lapse from regeneration?—and if there is, wherein does this work differ from regeneration?

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Reply to Dr. J. B. Walker.

Dr. Walker, in reply to my article, says: "Bro. Burt assails our orthodoxy, not because we do not agree with the Bible (for, a little singular to say, Bro. Burt ignored the Bible as the supreme source of authority), and labored to show that we were not orthodox according to 'thus saith Mr. Wesley.'" . . . "As it is from Mr. Wesley that we differ," etc.

Now, let's be positive about this matter, and let the cold, unmistakable facts in the case decide the matter once for all. I assailed the statements of Dr. Walker and Bro. Ellis because they were not orthodox according to the doctrines of the Methodist Church, to which they belong, and to which I belong, and I'll prove it. If not, then let them read me out of the Methodist Church. Although Dr. Walker asserts that these doctrinal statements are only Mr. Wesley's opinions, and that the Twenty-five Articles are the only doctrine of our church, yet it is a well-established fact that Wesley's sermons on justification by faith are held and adopted by our church as scriptural and true statements of this doctrine. The same is true of the sermons on the witness of the Spirit, and the same is true of the sermons on sin in believers and repentance of believers, and other sermons in this collection in which the doctrine of entire sanctification is plainly taught as a work wrought in the heart by the Holy Ghost subsequent to conversion. Now, no one would dare say that these sermons were incorporated into our theology by worthy and competent men without their knowing what they taught. The conclusion forces itself upon us that they were made a part of our theology because the church regarded them as in exact accord with the plain teaching of God's Word. If they had been taught without scriptural foundation, who could imagine a worse thing than a number of representative Christian ministers wilfully bringing into our theology and our course of study teachings that the very men believed themselves to be unscriptural, and then endorsed by General Conference after General Conference, remaining without the least change, perhaps, for a hundred years—young preachers required to pass examination in them, and if they fail or refuse to do so, they are rejected by the Conference?

No, Dr. Walker; it is not Mr. Wesley's opinions, but the accepted doctrine of your church; and you are under sacred obligations, as long as you remain a minister of the Methodist Church, to keep in line with them, and I reiterate what I said before: You have no right to inveigh against them. So, then, if they are true and scriptural, as the M. E. Church, South, holds them to be, then positively your position is both unmethodistic and unscriptural, and every well-informed Methodist knows it, too.

Dr. Walker says he wrote a book of some sixty pages, setting forth the views he now holds. The worse for the Doctor for writing it, and the Publishing House for printing it and advertising it for sale, in the face of our standards.

The Doctor thinks I have departed from, or collided with, my chosen authority. My chosen authority is the doctrines of the M. E. Church, South, which the church holds as scriptural, and, of course, I regard them so. I stand flat-footed on these standards, and Dr. Walker knows it as well as I do.

The Doctor claims the support of our Bishops in his views. Our Wesleyan standards found their place in the body of our theology before any of our living Bishops were born. They have never been authorized to change them, and have no more right to do so than Dr. Walker or I. If our preachers can, with impunity, assail our doctrines, and be indorsed in it by the high officials of the church, we may soon look for some Methodist preacher to rise up and declare the doctrine of justification by faith erroneous and unscriptural, and, perhaps, declare it unmethodistic.

Dr. Walker says he passed an approved examination on Wesley and others. If he passed an approved examination on all the doctrinal statements contained therein, then it is certain he has changed his views since that time. His committee, however, may have skipped them, or the Doctor may have answered the questions as per the teaching, but failed to tell the committee that he did not regard them as true.

The Doctor says: "Our church does not require, as a prerequisite to admission to membership, belief in the cognate doctrines of the second blessing theory." It requires its members to believe in its established doctrines. To say the least of it, our church requires its preachers to subscribe to them.

Dr. J. J. Tigert, Book Editor of the Publishing House, and editor of the Review, said, a few days ago, in a sermon preached before the Louisville Conference on "The Peculiarities of Methodism," that we had heard much lately of going back to Christ, which was right, but that Methodists needed to go back to John Wesley. He urged strongly that we should go back to Christian perfection as taught by our founder, and then we would go back to Christ. He avowed that though he did not possess this great experience, he believed in it, and was under solemn vow to groan after it, and he would never speak a word against it. Dr. Tigert is one of the "top" men of our church.

The Nashville Advocate, in a late issue, says: "As a work of grace in the soul, we accept holiness as set forth in the Scriptures and expounded in the standard works of Methodism. We believe in its possibility and experience, and we just as earnestly repudiate the idea that any soul, however honest, can grow into this gracious state."

Bro. W. B. Lewis, of Natchez, Miss., in reporting his meeting, says of Dr. Carradine, who assisted him, "His sermons are clear, logical, Wesleyan, and biblical," and everybody who knows Dr. Carradine knows that he is a clear-cut second-blessing preacher.

I will close by asking the kind editor to insert here paragraphs 19 and 20 of sermon on "Repentance of Believers," Vol. I., Wesleyan Standards.

"If any believes that whoever is justified is able to remove these sins out of his heart and life, let him make the experiment. Let him try whether by the grace he has already received he can expel pride, self-will, or inbred sin in general. Let him try whether he can cleanse his words and actions from all mixture of evil; whether he can avoid all uncharitable and unprofitable conversation, with all sins of omission; and lastly, whether he can supply the numberless defects which he still finds in himself. Let him not be discouraged by one or two experiments, but repeat the trial again and again, and the longer he tries the more deeply will he be convinced of his utter helplessness in all these respects. Indeed, it is so evident a truth that well-nigh all the children of God scattered abroad, however they differ in other points, yet generally agree in this: that although we may, by the Spirit, mortify the deeds of the body, resist and conquer both inward and outward sin; although we may weaken our enemy day by day, yet we can not drive them out. By all the grace which is given at justification we can not extirpate them. Though we may watch and pray ever so much, we can not wholly cleanse either our hearts or hands. Most sure we can not till it shall please our Lord to speak to our hearts again—to speak the 'second time, be clean,' and then only the leprosy is cleansed. Then only the root of evil, the carnal mind, is destroyed; the inbred sin subsists no more. But if there be no instantaneous deliverance after justification, if there be none but a gradual work of God, then we must be content as best we can to remain full of sin till death."

This is what the Methodist Church teaches, regardless of who was the author of it. She believes this true and scriptural; she teaches it to her young preachers.

Mr. Wesley was the author of the much-abused phrase, "second blessing," writing, I believe, to a lady, "You have received the second blessing, properly so called." He wrote his brother Charles, "Press the instantaneous blessing."

May God bless these dear old brethren; sanctify them, soul, body, and spirit! "Faithful is he that promised, who will also do it," if they will let him.

Correspondence.

On the Wing.

To travel eighteen or twenty thousand miles is no small work. "Gilderoy's" description of an agent's work is correct. However, it has its sunshine as well as its shadows—mostly shadows. Human nature is intensely local—that is, intensely selfish. To get a place one hundred miles from Millsaps College to help the college is a herculean task. But for an agent to be met at the train at eleven o'clock, on a dark night, welcomed and honored for his work's sake—treated with every courtesy—then for the church of which the brother is a member to send $200—this is sunshine. Shall I call the brother's name? No wonder every preacher who knows J. R. Bingham looks brighter when you mention his name! A gentleman by nature, a Christian by divine grace, he has been made tender and attractive by the companionship of his Christian wife.

We are especially indebted to Revs. T. W. Adams, J. G. Sibley, R. G. Porter, J. A. Leech, T. Y. Ramsey, Mrs. Jno. A. Ellis, Bro. Peter James, Bro. J. R. Bingham, Bro. J. T. Lewis, and Rev. H. C. Morehead for valuable service rendered. We are anxious to complete the Brooks Home for students soon. Let the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference help me at once. Let the children continue to send me their quarters and dollars. Let those who are indebted to our endowment fund pay their notes. You gave a regular business note. It is sacred. Let it be paid.

With gratitude for the success of our college, we turn our face toward the future with faith that God will bless the young men of Mississippi.

I. W. COOPER,

A Query.

I should like to know from some of those who profess sanctification by a second blessing, if they would have entered heaven had they died before receiving that blessing. "Follow peace with all men and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. xii, 14.) W.

Selections.

Made of Dust.

Little sympathy have I with that person who can not understand how another should be pulled down by special temptation. Because he does not drink, he can not understand why another should drink; and because he does not lose his temper, he can not understand how another should fly all to pieces before the vexation that comes.

Ah! yes. The shark never could see how a lion should be caught in a trap, and the lion never could see how a shark could be caught on a hook. The seas are filled with these wise lions having no sympathy with sharks. They are simply swimming and walking Pharisees, and both seas and woods would be better with them out.

The truth is that everyone is snared in some way. Dr. Johnson was snared of melancholy; Charles Lamb was snared of drink; Thomas de Quincy was snared of opium, and Wordsworth and Wellington and Edmund Burke were snared of irritable tempers all their lives long.

Well, I wonder what is to be the outcome of it all. Does it follow that these strong ones and these boasting ones who never know what it is to be flung of temptations, are going up to monopolize everything good in heaven? I tell you never. God is too kind and discerning for that. They shall have thrones, but they shall not take possession of every throne. Some of the highest honors in glory will be given to these tempted ones, many times ronted of sin, but still fighting on as best they can.

Why, if they are thrones only for those who have never been tempted, half the white seats will be empty. John Wesley will have no throne, and Wilbur Fisk will have no throne. One does not lose his reward by being rushed upon by sin, or even by being ronted by sin. So long as we do not wholly surrender, God will have a throne for us at last. The trouble is that we are made of dust, and dust is a poor thing to overcome with in every battle.—Miller.

Children in the Sanctuary.

The absence of the children from the services of the sanctuary is one of the alarming evils of our day. There are but few congregations where children can be found in any considerable numbers. No one will attempt to deny the sad consequences which must follow as the inevitable results of such a course. The children at eight years of age who have not already begun to form the habit of church attendance, and are not quite thoroughly established in it at sixteen, will stand a very fair chance of spending their entire life with little or no attachment for either the church or religious things. The non-church-going youth of this decade will be the Sabbath-breakers and irreligious people of the next.

Whatever our past failures and present shortcomings, we should seek prayerfully and studiously to acquire the talent which will enable us to touch the hearts, quicken the imagination, and instruct the minds of the children. If we can preach so the children can understand and be benefited, we may rest assured that we shall not fall with the older people.—Exchange.

Try Personal Work.

In every congregation there are souls who have been tarrying at the threshold for a long time. They are moral, thoughtful and earnest, but not religious. They have not hitherto been moved to consecrate themselves to Christ by the public services of the church, either ordinary or extraordinary. What remains to be done for them yet? We have an answer in three words, Try personal work. Go to them, after diligent effort to put yourself in working mood, and after assuring yourself that you are in touch with Him who alone can "give the increase." Seek a fitting season, and tenderly, prayerfully, anxiously lay before them your sense of their duty and their danger. Seek to get the approval of their judgment, and to ally yourself with their conscience. With tact, with delicate consideration, in the spirit of Christ, in earnestness of soul, deal with them as you would want some courageous and faithful man or woman to deal with you, in similar straits.—Bible Reader.

A smile is a song without words or music.

God delights in the heart in which pure thoughts are made welcome.

There is no greater genius in this world than the genius for doing one's best.

There are a hundred kinds of religion, but only one kind of piety.—H. W. Shaw.

It requires more grace to suffer patiently than to serve laboriously.—T. J. Jones.

Enjoyment of the Christian increases with the increase of faith and the growth of Christian love and knowledge.

Until we begin to learn that the only way to serve God in any real sense of the word is to serve our neighbor, we may have knocked at the wicket gate, but I doubt if we have got one foot across the threshold of the kingdom.—Lutheran.

One can cultivate a critical and censorious spirit until he will find fault with a rose, and growl at the sunshine. It is very easy for some people to be unhappy, and they seem to give themselves wholly to it.—Western Christian Advocate.

Religion prepares us for heaven only by first preparing us for all the duties of this world, and the religion which does not make a man a good husband, a good father, a good citizen, is a counterfeit religion which will not pass at the gates of glory.—Arkansas Methodist.

Disraeli says: "The great secret of success in life is for a man to be ready when his opportunity comes." Undoubtedly, but many do not perceive the opportunity and so fail, not because they are not ready, but because they fail to recognize the golden privilege. Still further, it is often true, instead of waiting for an opportunity, we should make one, and it will never come unless we do our part to create it.

When the higher critic has been unusually severe in his work of demolishing the Bible, he concludes his labors by assuring his readers that notwithstanding the conclusion to which he has been driven by science, his love for the Book has in nowise abated, nor has the Word lost any of its real value. Of course. A man may hack his grandmother to pieces with a carving-knife and still insist that he loves her as of old, and that she will continue to be as useful to him as she ever was.

Appeal for the Orphans.

To the Benevolent and Charitable People of Mississippi:

For many years it has been my duty and privilege to call public attention to the needs and usefulness of this noble charity. It is a duty, because of my relation to the several benevolent orders who are now so generously aiding it, and it is a privilege because of the good that I know that the Asylum is doing in receiving and caring for orphan children, and preparing them for usefulness and respectability in the world. The Asylum has been in operation seventy-six years, and although its treasury has often been without a dollar, and its larder often empty, its doors have never been closed to the unfortunates who have sought its shelter and protection.

The Asylum is absolutely dependent on the benevolence and charity of the public. It has no other resource. The Thanksgiving contributions by churches, fraternal orders and individuals last Fall, with occasional help from other directions since, have maintained it to the present time; and now that its treasury is again nearly empty, the lady managers are anxious about its support for the Winter now upon them. But while they are deeply concerned, they have an abiding faith in the charitable and generous people of Mississippi that their remembrance will be as prompt and liberal as their circumstances and these stringent times will allow.

I visited the Asylum on the third instant, and after a very careful inspection am pleased to say that it is under better management and in better condition than for many years. The Board of Managers has been reinforced by the addition of some of the best ladies of Natchez, and the new matron, Miss Hanson, is specially well qualified for the position. She had five years' experience in a similar institution in Baltimore. In addition to daily subsistence, some repairs should be made, and some dormitory furniture, mattresses, etc., are much needed.

Where Thanksgiving services are observed pastors are requested to give congregations opportunity to contribute. Contributions should be sent direct to Mrs. Mary R. Fleming, treasurer, Natchez, Miss. She will make a general report to me, and the same will be published for the information of contributors.

Self-Forgetfulness.

We believe that many Christians make a mischievous mistake in the perpetual habit of narrowly inspecting their spiritual condition. They get the idea that they can not do any sort of Christian work unless they are so regulated that they can not detect anything wrong in themselves, and hence they groan and wrestle, doing their utmost to get into a better shape for the Lord's business; whereas, the true way is to get eyes off from self, look to Jesus for help, and speedily lay hands on any work which God's providence shall bring within reach. Morbid self-inspection ham-strings hundreds of Christians, who might be of great service to Christ if they would only get away from themselves.—Indian Witness.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, South Vicksburg, Nov. 8: "South Vicksburg has not been heard from this year through the ADVOCATE; but we have been moving steadily on. We have held two revival meetings—one in March, conducted by Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Meridian; the other in September, conducted by Revs. P. H. Howse, of Meadville, and J. S. Hodges, of Cary. The Lord honored the labors of these brethren in the conversion of souls, the reclaiming of backsliders, and the strengthening of believers. Forty-three have been added to the church this year—29 by profession and baptism, 14 by certificate. The Conference collections are up in full, with eleven dollars over. This is due largely to the efforts of the children. They were organized the first of the year into a juvenile society to help in this work, and they succeeded in raising $35.64. May God bless the children! This has been a year of hard work; but the Lord has been with us and greatly blessed us."

Rev. Robert P. Howell, Shiloh, La., Nov. 12: "We have had a gracious meeting at 'Old Alabama Church.' We have a neat, comfortable building in course of erection to take the place of the old one. Bros. J. D. Harper and R. M. Blocker assisted me in the meeting. We had about twenty-five conversions and twenty accessions, the church revived, and seeking a higher walk. Old troubles settled, etc. This makes about 50 accessions to our church in the circuit this year. Strange things have happened in our district in the last two years, over which we are rejoicing. I mean the 'coming through' of some of our leaders on the question of evangelists. Some who two years ago opposed the expediency of employing evangelists have had a very gracious meeting conducted by a real live evangelist, and be not of our church. Well, praise the Lord! I told you so.' Hoping many more of the brethren (P. E.'s and P. C.'s) who need evangelists will 'come through' and employ them, I remain yours in favor of evangelists—when needed."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, Bewelcome, Miss., Nov. 9: "It has recently been my privilege and pleasure to assist Rev. B. F. Jones, of Port Gibson, Miss., in a series of meetings, commencing Oct. 21, and closing Nov. 1, '94. Having occupied my own pulpit the third Sabbath, I took the train on Monday following; was met at depot by Bro. Jones and conducted to the parsonage, where I was made to feel at home by him and his excellent wife. The parsonage is one of the best in our Conference—newly built, at a cost of two thousand and eight hundred dollars, and within two hundred yards of our college. The entire morning services, and the evening services for the first week, were devoted almost entirely to the Christians; the result of which was a continual refreshment from God. The evening services of the second week were in the interest of the unsaved, resulting in a number of persons coming forward for prayer, some of whom we have good reason to believe were regenerated, and two applications for church membership. This is Bro. Jones' fourth year with these good people, and a better people, I dare say, he never served."

Rev. D. W. Babb, Nov. 13: "We are nearing the close of our third year on Hebron circuit. This by far has been the most prosperous year of the three, especially spiritually. While but 15 have been added to the church, our membership has greatly revived in home altars and in prayer meetings. We have two well-attended prayer meetings at Hebron—our home church; ten persons who lead in prayer when called upon, and eight who will conduct the prayer meeting. We are told these are the first prayer meetings in the history of this church, which is fifty years old. We have lately overhauled this church in new foundation and new ceiling, also recovered another church. Our Sunday-school and Parsonage and Home Mission Society are doing well; also a larger number of ADVOCATES taken than ever before. We are much indebted to Revs. J. A. Bowen, of Macon station; W. R. Anders, of North Alabama Conference, and Bro. Browning, of Millsaps College, for efficient help during our protracted meetings. I think a brighter day is dawning on this circuit. We have as noble-hearted people as any man ever served. More religion has been the crying need. If our people were as religious, and had the various church interest on their hearts, as they do in some places, any man might well covet to serve them. Thank God they are growing in grace anyway, and we trust will soon be at the front in all church work."

Rev. W. W. Hopper: "On Sept. 30 Rev. Dr. B. Carradine, with Dr. E. T. Rinehart as singer, began a series of meetings in West End Church, Meridian, Miss. After a day or two the church was found too small to accommodate the congregations, and the meeting was moved to a tent in the central portion of the city; but on account of the ungovernable men disturbing our services, it was thought best to return to the church after six days. Bro. Carradine remained thirteen days, preaching with great power and unction, and under his clear and powerful presentation of the doctrine of entire sanctification the Holy Spirit brought hundreds under deep conviction for the blessed experience. But the enemy of souls had well fortified himself in the prejudices of the people. And from the beginning it was evident there were well-laid plans of opposition, and stubborn resistance of the truth, so that the victory was not as great as we had looked for, though a great work was done which will tell in eternity. Many of those who entered the experience of sanctification were from the towns and country immediately surrounding this city; so the holy fire is being scattered. Dr. Rinehart, the sweet singer, is a gloriously sanctified man, and rendered great help in the meeting in several ways. Upon Dr. Carradine's advice I wired Rev. U. E. Ramsey, a flaming young evangelist, to come and carry forward the work. He did noble work with us one week and hurried on to Eutaw, Ala., to press the great victory there begun under Bro. Carradine. The writer ran the meeting on till Oct 28, with the assistance of the sanctified people of West End and a few others. The meeting lasted four weeks and resulted in sixty-five sanctifications, and many conversions and reclamations. To God be all the glory."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Nov. 6: "We had a very profitable day, indeed, last Sunday at Wesley Chapel, Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference. Dr. I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College, was with us, and preached two very fine and much-needed sermons, to the great delight of pastor and people. Fortunate will be the pastor and people that secure his services for a Sunday. I wish the two sermons he preached for us could be preached in every pulpit in Mississippi, for surely it would have its effect for good in toning up the church and awakening sinners. And after the night service he delivered a very nice speech for, or in interest of, the college, which, while it only resulted in a small collection at the time, owing to the depressed state of business, will, doubtless, result in some boys going to the college in the near future, and continue to inspire hope in the minds of poor young men of one day going to Millsaps College. Come again, Bro. Cooper; our hearts and homes and every church on the Warren circuit will be open to you, and you will be privileged to represent your college in them. Bro. Cooper is certainly doing a good work, and a work that will tell out in the near future, and for years to come, on the educational interest of the State. I believe he has traveled about twenty thousand miles this year, preaching and lecturing, or speech-making for the college, and has had fine success in collecting boys, money, books, etc., for the school. May God graciously bless him and his family."

NEW PROSPECT CAMP MEETING.

New Prospect Camp Ground is situated in Jackson county, Miss., about twenty-one miles from Ocean Springs. It is in the center of Vancleave circuit, and has the cheerful and liberal support of the prominent members of that charge. The hundreds that attend the annual meetings at New Prospect are fed, free of charge, by the whole-souled men who own the tents. It is evidently a real pleasure to them to do so. It is a positive benediction to witness their constant manifestations of thoughtfulness for the comfort and enjoyment of all. They seem to feel that they are repaid for all their kindness and expense in the salvation of their children and friends, and in the enrichment of their own religious life.

There are several most excellent local preachers who attend the meetings every year, and contribute largely to their success. They are rarely gifted in song, and powerful in prayer. I doubt that a better set of local preachers can be found on earth.

The meeting for this year was held Oct. 26-30. It was eminently successful. The presence and power of God were manifested at every service. Revs. J. H. Holland, W. G. Evans, E. T. Breland, George D. Anders and T. W. Adams did the preaching. The sermons were plain and intensely practical. Some of them were delivered in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Sinners crowded the altar, pleading for mercy. There were about forty happy conversions. There were just as many sanctifications, of course. An unsanctified converted person is to me an anomaly. I never saw one; I never expect to see one. He is neither saint nor sinner; what is he? I do not know. An old lady, about seventy years of age, was powerfully converted. Twelve joined the church. The life of the church was greatly improved. There was great rejoicing among the people of God.

Bro. Huff, the popular pastor, had everything under his watchful eyes, and kept preachers and people in fine working trim. He is an expert at running a camp meeting. His prayers and exhortations were moving.

The meeting was fully equal to any ever held on the grounds; some thought it the best. It was indeed a season of grace and power.

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

A Hurtful Innovation.

It is contrary to all precedent for criticisms as to the propriety of specific appointments of preachers to be published in our church papers, and there are obvious reasons that underlie the customs and traditions of the church anent this matter. Various matters connected with the appointments of preachers are very properly discussed in a Bishop's cabinet which it would be highly improper to discuss through the press. If it is right for a church paper to make an attack at this point upon our Bishops, then it would be equally right for the Bishops through the press to give their reasons for making or not making certain appointments. Can not any man who has any discernment at all see what the effect would be of parading all the secrets of the cabinet before the world?

It is nothing strange for preachers to be dissatisfied with their appointments. We doubt whether an Annual Conference has been held since the organization of our church at which some brother did not feel afflicted by his appointment. Moreover, while a large majority of our preachers go uncomplainingly to their appointments, however hard they may be, it is not at all unusual for a brother who feels afflicted by his appointment to utter words of censure against some one—the Bishop, the presiding elder, or some layman. This has always been the case, and doubtless will be until we get much nearer the millennium than we are at present. Now, can any sane man hold that it is the proper function of a church paper to gather up these mutterings of discontent and publish them to the world? Such a course, it seems to us, would be manifestly improper, even if there were no impeachment of motives; but any publication which reflects upon the motives of the appointing power should most assuredly have no place in a Methodist paper. Against such an innovation upon the time-honored usages of Methodist journalism we deem it our duty to enter a vigorous protest. What possible good can come to the church from this sort of policy? Make our people believe that our Bishops in the exercise of their official functions are actuated by base motives, and "Ichabod" may be written upon our walls.

Ignorance of the Bible.

A recent issue of the Times-Democrat contains an editorial that furnishes food for thought on the part of all Christian people. The editor takes as his text an article which appeared recently in the New York Independent, from the pen of a college president in one of the Northern States. We did not see the article in the Independent, and, therefore, can refer to it only as quoted by the Times-Democrat. The article is a recital by the college president of the results of a test made by himself as to the amount of biblical information possessed by the members of the Freshman class in the institution over which he presides. The name of the president and the college are not given. The class consists of thirty-four young men whose average age is twenty. The young men are the sons of lawyers, preachers, teachers, merchants, and farmers. They are of religious families, the following denominations being represented: Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Congregationalists, Roman Catholics and Unitarians. Gathering these Freshmen together, the president submitted to them twenty-two extracts from Tennyson containing biblical allusions, which they were requested to explain. The allusions were these: The crown of thorns; manna; the smitten rock; wrestling with the angel; the backward-going shadow; the moon standing still; Esau's rough hands; the self-mutilation of the prophets of Baal; Ruth gleaning in the fields; the darkness of Egypt; Jonah's gourd; Lot's wife as a pillar of salt; Joseph of Arimathea; pearls before swine; turning water into wine; the mark upon Cain; Peter as a rock; the serpent eating dust; Peter's heaven-descended sheet; Jephthah's vow; Jacob's ladder; the angel in the tomb. Only fifty per cent. of these allusions were explained. One-half of them these collegians had never heard of—at least, had never heard of them in such a way as to make an impression on their memory.

To us this test is full of significance. Let it be remembered that these are not children, but young men—that they are from the higher walks of life—and that they are of Christian families. Note also the extreme simplicity of these questions. Most of the allusions are to those events in biblical story which have a fascination for the mind of childhood. If this test means anything, it means that the Bible is no longer read to any great extent even in Christian homes. We confess to a feeling of surprise, disappointment and humiliation in view of this publication. This is emphatically a Bible-making and Bible-selling age. In this respect it far surpasses any previous age. It is an age also when there are greater facilities for the study of the Bible than ever before. There was never an age when commentaries and helps of all sorts were so plentiful and so accessible by the masses on account of their marvelous cheapness. Periodical literature devoted to the explication of the Divine Word is one of the distinguishing characteristics of the present age. Nothing like it was ever known in any previous age. And this literature is marvelous in the affluence of its learning. The floods of light which have been thrown upon the teachings of the Scriptures by modern scholarship in its various realms of history, archæology and science are made available to the masses for a mere song. Then, too, there was never an age when Sabbath-schools flourished as they do now. No former age ever witnessed anything like the phenomenon that presents itself to our gaze on every Sabbath morning when multiplied thousands of children and young people repair to the house of God to study his Word. From all this it seems natural to infer that the children of the present day know more of the Bible than did the juveniles of a former generation.

This college president's test, however, seems to show that all this Bible printing, and commentary making, and periodical circulating and Sabbath-school teaching counts for very little in the way of giving the rising generation even a respectable knowledge of the Bible simply as literature, to say nothing of its higher uses. If this is true, then it is the strangest of all the strange things we have known in this age of marvels. We would like to see tests of a similar character made in other institutions of various grades from the common school to the university. If extreme ignorance of the Bible is indeed one of the striking characteristics of the nineteenth century, then it is time we were acquainting ourselves with the fact in order that we may apply a remedy.

A Triumph for Protestantism.

At the recent election in New York all of the thirty-three proposed amendments to the State Constitution were adopted. These amendments are of varying degrees of importance. Two of them are of vast significance to the country at large. One of these is that which protects the public schools from the aggressions of Romanism. This came none too soon. For years the interests of public education have suffered at the hands of the great Romish hierarchy. The other amendment referred to is that which protects the public treasury against sectarian appropriations in the name of charity. Of course, the application of this is to Rome also. It would be interesting and profitable to the general public to know just how much money paid by Protestant people has gone into the coffers of the Romish Church in the State of New York in the last quarter of a century. "The National League for the Protection of American Institutions" is to be congratulated on the notable victory it has achieved in this matter. New York makes, if we mistake not, the twenty-fifth State that has adopted similar measures of protection against Romish greed. We predict that the time is not far distant when all the States will follow this wise example. The entire separation of Church and State is one of the cardinal principles of American patriotism.

A New Industry for the South.

A pork-packing establishment is to be put into operation soon at Monroe, La. Why should this not be the beginning of a medium-sized revolution in the agricultural operations of the South? That cotton at five cents does not pay is universally admitted. A change of some sort is, therefore, a necessity. Now, while Southern soil is admirably adapted to the cultivation of cotton, it is, as a rule, none the less so to the production of corn. Why not, then, raise corn, and turn it into pork? Until recently the raising of pork for commercial purposes has been impracticable for climatic reasons. Science, however, has overcome this difficulty. Pork-packing now goes on uninterruptedly all Summer in St. Louis and Chicago, where the thermometer reaches a loftier altitude than it does here. The appliances for cold storage are just as available here as in the Northern cities—perhaps more so. There is, therefore, no reason why a large part of this immense business of producing pork, bacon and lard should not be transferred to the South. One difficulty presents itself. Whether it will be insuperable time only can tell. We refer to the deep-seated conviction of the Southern farmer that it his bounden duty never to put his foot elsewhere than in the tracks of his great-grandfather.

SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDIES; OR, EXPOSITORY AND HOMILETICAL NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL LESSONS FOR 1895. By E. E. Hoss, D. D. With colored maps. Nashville, Tenn.: Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South. 1894.

We have long wondered why some of the literary magnates about Nashville did not publish yearly a volume of notes on the International Lessons. At last we have one from the able, scholarly pen of the editor of the Nashville Advocate. The work is evidently not intended as a substitute for the Sunday-school Magazine, but as supplementary to it. The work is constructed rather on the plan of Pentecost's Notes than on those of Peloubet and Hurlbut—i. e., it does not take up the lesson verse by verse, commentary fashion, but treats it rather as a whole. This makes the work more entertaining to the average reader. It is written in the pure, vigorous, transparent style characteristic of the author. While there is no ostentatious parade of learning, the author's scholarship appears on every page. It has valuable homiletical hints that will be appreciated by many of our preachers as well as by Sunday-school teachers. The work will meet a long-felt want in our church. We commend it to preachers, Sunday-school teachers and Christian workers generally. The retail price of the work is $1.

BIG CYPRESS. The Story of an Everglade Homestead. By Kirk Munroe. 12mo. $1. W. A. Wilde & Co., 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

This latest book by Kirk Munroe is replete with practical information concerning pioneer life in a little known, but intensely interesting portion of the United States. It outlines the processes of "claiming," "filing," "holding down," and "proving up" a homestead; deals with the Seminoles of South Florida, the most picturesque American Indians of our day; describes those rare animals, the manatee and the crocodile, which are found in that portion of the United States only; tells of "wracking," or beach-combing; of the raising of pineapples and cocoanuts, and deals with a score of other subjects as unique as they are interesting.

At the same time, the story into which all these novel threads are woven is so fascinating that it will hold the absorbed attention of every boy and girl reader from beginning to end. Bound in cloth and attractively illustrated. 164 pages.

NOTES.

The Anti-option Convention, to be held in Vicksburg on the twenty-third, will be notable not only for its size, but also for the high character of the delegates.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of our church will establish soon two mission day-schools for the Spanish-speaking population of Tampa, Florida.

At Paulding, Miss., since the last revival, some twelve lay members not only pray in public, but lead in prayer meetings. Can any other place in Mississippi take the banner from Paulding?

In a contest at Syracuse, N. Y., Riordan, a professional pugilist, was killed by Fitzsimmons. A small affair like that, however, will not in the least diminish the crowds that will gather to witness the next contest. O tempora, O mores.

In a town in Canada, a short time since, a Protestant was arrested because he refused to lift his hat when a Catholic procession was passing. He was arraigned before a Roman Catholic judge, and his temerity cost him $160. That is liberty according to the Romish standard.

Remarkable testimony as to the efficacy of the new diphtheria cure comes officially from Berlin. The supply of the medicine having been exhausted in that city about the first of October, the death rate from diphtheria, which had been reduced by the use of the remedy to eleven per cent., rose at once to sixty per cent., and remained at that figure during the whole month of October.

A highly esteemed brother writes: "I wish to thank you, my dear brother, for giving us such a good, strong, clean paper. May God continue to bless you in your work."

The October number of Method is on hand with a very inviting table of contents. We heartily commend this periodical to our preachers and leading laymen as a periodical pre-eminently worthy of their patronage. It competes with no other, as there is no other that makes a specialty of methods of church work.

We found it difficult to recognize the old Richmond last week. It has changed its old bed-quilt form to the modern pamphlet-like style. The change, however, is only in form. There is abundant evidence that the same hand is still at the helm. Lafferty's wit can sparkle on a page of any shape. The old veteran has not forgotten how to mix oil with vitriol, or to wreathe his sword-hilt with flowers.

Miss Belle Kearney is making great reputation as a temperance lecturer. She lectured a few days since to an immense audience in the First Congregational Church, in Washington City. The Washington Post speaks of the lecture in very eulogistic terms, and says that at its close almost the whole audience gathered around the rostrum to make her acquaintance, thank her for her address, and ask her to come again.

The Belford Publishing Co., publishers of Mrs. Davis' Memoirs of Jefferson Davis, failed about three or four years ago, owing Mrs. Davis a considerable sum for books already sold. Mrs. Davis brought suit. The case has been decided in her favor, and she has come into possession of the stereotype plates and about 2,000 copies of the book. These copies will be put on the market, and another edition will be published.

The movement in favor of curtailing the power of the English House of Lords is assuming formidable proportions. A resolution depriving them of their veto power is to be introduced on the assembling of Parliament. The lords will, of course, oppose. An appeal will then be made to the country with "Down with the lords" as a slogan. Then we shall see what we shall see. That the power of the lords will be curtailed sooner or later seems to us absolutely certain.

Dr. S. E. Chaillé, dean of the Medical Department of Tulane University, has an article in a recent issue of the Times-Democrat, in which he advocates the founding of a plant in this city for the manufacture of anti-toxine, the new diphtheria cure. As the demand for the medicine is greatly in excess of the supply, this is a wise suggestion. The plant will cost only about $5,000, and we have no doubt that the money will be forthcoming in a short time.

The University of New York has had for the last five years a law class composed of women. The course consists of forty-eight lectures each Winter on the general principles of jurisprudence. The aim of the course is not to fit students for the legal profession, but to give them the culture and training which such a course affords, and also to impart information which may be serviceable in all the walks of life. The number of students enrolled during the present session is fifty, none of whom, it is said, have aspirations in the direction of the legal profession.

We are much pleased to receive the following note from Bro. Jaco. In common with Bro. Smith's numerous friends, we rejoice over his recovery.

Bro. Henry Smith, of North Mississippi Conference, is again able to be up, having been about three months battling for life with that persistent and dread enemy, slow fever. He worshiped with us last Sabbath, the first service attended by him in about three months. He expects to return to his work in a few days. May the Lord bless him with speedy and permanent recovery, that he may go up with us to the annual convocation.

A bill is pending before the Georgia Legislature creating a dispensary in each county of the State in which the liquor traffic exists. The bill does not apply to counties that have already voted out the traffic; and these constitute a large majority of the counties in the State. The Wesleyan Advocate favors the bill, provided nothing better can be had. The programme is: Let the dry counties remain dry, and let the wet counties have the dispensary instead of the saloon. The provisions of the bill are such that it would inevitably reduce largely the consumption of liquor. From what we know of the temperance sentiment of the Empire State of the South, we predict that this Dispensary bill or something better will go through, either now or very soon. The good citizenship of the State is emphatically hostile to the saloon.

If you have a boy in his teens, ask him to read the Home Circle Department of this issue.

By a vote of nearly five to one the people of New York City have expressed themselves in favor of an underground railway constructed and controlled by the city government. The adoption of the system will require an outlay of not less than $100,000,000. Several years will probably elapse before the system will be put into operation. Should it prove a success, no doubt Chicago and, perhaps, a few other large cities will follow the example of the great metropolis. The matter which will be of greater interest to the country at large than an underground system of railway, is the fact that the railway is to be owned and operated by the city. This indicates the trend of the times. In Germany, in England, and in some of the English colonies—notably in South Africa—government ownership of railroads is nothing new under the sun. Let New York take this new departure and make it a success, and it will not be long before street car lines will be owned and operated by municipal authorities in all sections of America.

The Cotton Growers' Convention which met in Montgomery, Ala., a few days since, resulted in the organization of a permanent association called the Cotton Planters' Association of the United States of America. The Constitution provides that the association shall meet at least twice each year, and that it shall be composed of four delegates from each congressional district in the cotton-growing States, and three additional delegates from each State appointed by the governor. Hon. John M. Stone, governor of Mississippi, was elected president of the association. The first semi-annual convention of the association will be held at Jackson, Miss., on the second Wednesday in January, 1895. The Convention adopted a series of resolutions, the chief of which we thus summarize: Reduction of cotton acreage; increased production of cereals and stock; legislative encouragement of manufactures; encouragement of immigration by dividing large plantations into small farms and offering them for sale; condemnation of cotton seed trusts; A PETITION TO CONGRESS TO PASS THE ANTI-OPTION BILL.

When the famous Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad went into bankruptcy its records became for the time being the property of the United States Courts; and thereby hangs a tale. A careful examination of the records explains the mystery of the road's bankruptcy. The enormous sum of seven millions of dollars has been paid by the managers of the road to favored shippers in the way of rebates on freight. This is not only a fraud upon the stockholders of the road, but also a palpable violation of the Interstate Commerce law, both upon the part of the railroad managers and the favored shippers, for whom an unenviable fate seems in waiting. That the managers of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad granted this seven-million-dollar favor to a handful of shippers out of pure love may be believed inside the walls of a lunatic asylum. Outside a different opinion will prevail. This case can not fail to raise in the public mind the inquiry whether this is the only road that grants rebates. If it is a frequent custom of the managers of railroads to defraud stockholders and the general public in the interest of a few favored magnates of the commercial world, then the people want to know the fact. Give them the facts, and they will devise a remedy.

The Democratic Party during the recent campaign made a bid for the Roman Catholic vote and got it. It got that vote almost solid, and it got something else—viz., defeat. Is there any connection between the two things? Many believe that there is. The staid, conservative, old Presbyterian paper, the Christian Observer, says, "No party in this country dare allow itself to appear to be dominated directly or indirectly by the Romish hierarchy." The St. Louis Advocate, equally removed from the realm of partisan politics, speaks as follows:

If either one of the old political parties is anxious to swallow Romanism bodily, it has a perfect right to do so. And Protestantism has a perfect right to govern itself accordingly. The election in this city meant, in part, that membership in a particular denomination is no longer to be considered a necessary requisite for office. Fitness for the position will hereafter have a little more to do with the matter than a recommendation from a parish priest.

The hand-writing is on the wall against a monarch on the east bank of the Tiber ruling a certain city on the west bank of the Mississippi.

Doctor Buckley says in a recent editorial in the New York Advocate:

Our deliberate judgment is that it is both proper and necessary to watch Roman Catholic priests, policies and plotters. Also, that it is wise to watch those, whether Protestant ministers, editors or politicians, who have much to say against all who endeavor to preserve our liberties, and nothing to say against those who are constantly sapping and mining them.

To the Missionary Societies of the North Mississippi Conference.

Dear Sisters: Does it occur to you how rapidly our fiscal year is passing? Already two quarters are gone, and soon Dec. 1 will be here—time for third quarterly reports and remittances. Those for the first and second quarters have been very meager, and we appeal to you for a larger one for the third quarter. Can not each of the Auxiliary treasurers set aside a day for the collection of delinquent dues? Much of this kind of service is really needed for our Lord.

Let me also call your attention to the week of prayer, and Thanksgiving (including our National Thanksgiving Day), appointed by the Board, and urge the observance of it. Let every Auxiliary observe it, following out as far as possible the programme laid down in the Woman's Missionary Advocate, for November. Where it is not possible to meet every day, let one meeting be carefully arranged and prepared for at which special prayer shall be made as set forth in the programme. Our country Auxiliaries might arrange for an all-day "missionary tea" at some home in the community, and observe the programme and make their thank-offerings. The need for a very liberal offering at this time is urgent. Mrs. Trueheart writes that property has been purchased in Petropolis, and the Board is depending upon the thank-offering this month to equip the school and send the needed missionaries. She adds, "it is a grand opportunity to take South America for Christ."

Sisters, you see the great need. Shall we fail to come up to the help of the Lord? Let every Auxiliary unite in prayer, that our local Auxiliaries, our Board, our work and workers abroad may be baptized with power from on high, and let everyone make a liberal thank-offering to God for his goodness through the year, that funds may be placed in the hands of the Board sufficient for its present need. Sister, I appeal to you. What shall you render unto the Lord for all his benefits? Show your gratitude now by making it possible to send tidings of great salvation to our sisters who sit in darkness. MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

Union Meeting of Sunday-School Workers.

At 3 o'clock, on the first Saturday afternoon in December, and every Saturday afternoon thereafter, there will be held at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, 15 Camp St., a union meeting of Sunday-school workers for the purpose of studying the lesson for the ensuing Sabbath. These meetings are under the auspices of the Orleans Parish Sunday-school Association, and during the month of December will be conducted by Bro. E. P. Mackie, of Carondelet Street Church. All interested are cordially invited to attend, and as Methodists should always be foremost in every good work, the Methodist members of the association are especially desirous of seeing a large representation of the workers in our schools. TRUST IN GOD.

(Ps. cxxv, 1; Prov. iii, 5; Jer. xvii, 7.)

Trust, have faith in God. Trust, have confidence in, depend on, give credence to, rely on God. In God you can confide, repose faith. Never has he abused man's confidence and trust.

1. Make God your confidant. Entrust him with your individual affairs.

(1) The heart craves for friendship, a sympathetic repository. It is human at times to be desirous of unbosoming ourselves.

(2) It is rarely wise to be exceedingly intimate with man. Has not your confidence been repeatedly betrayed?

(3) God appreciates our revelations. He is faithful and true. Full of tender compassion. Apprise him of your hopes and fears, your joys and sorrows.

2. Trusting in aught else than God is vain. "Broken cisterns which hold no water" prove all human resources for succor and strength. Some trust

(1) In friends. But friends follow us only to the grave—no further.

(2) In money. But how insecure! Captive eagle, well fenced in. But the wings have grown again. He ascends; laughs at fences; flies away.

(3) In the understanding. But our wit's end is readily reached. Life's problems baffle the keenest acumen.

3. Trust in God as your

(1) Savior.

(2) Protector.

(3) Guide.

(4) Comforter.

4. The advantages of having trust in God are great. "Are like Mount Zion that can not be removed."

(1) Are built on a rock. In vain do life's storms and floods beat against us. Are safe.

(2) The heart is at rest. No longer any harrowing vacillation. "The heart is fixed, O Lord, the heart is fixed."

(3) Leaning on the strong arm of God, we are strong. If he be for us, who can be successfully against us? Are victorious in life, victorious in death, victorious evermore.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible

FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant tracee of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. Home Circle.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

Stealthily the black-robed angel
In the shadow hovered nigh,
And a little soul had vanished
To its home beyond the sky.
Now, tho tender hnd, transplanted,
Blooms in heaven's purer air,
Bnt our tears will spring, unbidden
O'er the little vacant chair.

In the circle rounnd the hearthstone
There's a gap that can't be filled,
And we miss the lisping sweetness
Of the voice forever stilled.
Now the little form lies tranquil
And the cheeks are waxen lair,
And we turn away in anguish
From the little vacant chair.

The Price of Success.

The world over, if a young person expects to succeed, he must work. I care not what the calling. It may be packing goods down in the basement. It may be selling goods upon the first floor. It may be driving pegs in the shoe factory. It may be distributing tracts or teaching a Bible class or leading a prayer service, if he ever hopes for promotion, it must be up the old, rough steps of earnest, faithful work.

Away with this idea that a person can play the sluggard in any work and still blossom out into a grand success. He can not do it. All this talk about Dean Swift and Doctor Chalmers and Sir Walter Scott being incorrigible drones has no application to any young man to-day. The chances are a thousand to one that if you are a drone a young person, you will be a drone an old person, world to the end, and no sure pledge of improvement even in the world to come.

I bless God, day after day, that in our land, at least, success and promotion are, for the most part, commensurate with the effort put forth. The question ringing out from all our professions is not, Who was your father? or, Who was your mother? but, Who are you? What acquirements have you made, and how much can you bring to pass for God and man?

The truth is, that not many rich fools or royal fools are crowned in these days. Occasionally one of this class will be hoisted into a throne-chair, but no sooner does he get fairly seated than up the steps will come some Edison from out a baggage car, or some Garrison from a printer's case, hurling him out and taking the place amid the hand-clappings of a nation.

Oh, young men and women; I dare not limit your doing, if you will only be faithful! It seems there are no obstacles too great to be overcome. Samuel Drew put to flight his poverty, and John Milton conquered his blindness, and Robert Hall overleaped his sickness, and pen and crucible and spade and yardstick, with a will back of them, have routed whole armies of opposition contesting the way. More and more I am coming to believe that the only difference between success and failure is simply a difference of plodding. One man pulls at the oars and goes up stream, another man sleeps at the oars and goes down stream, and no power in earth or heaven will ever work a miracle to change their course.—H. T. Miller.

Seeking a Better Earth.

Do not be afraid of missing heaven in seeking earth. Be sure that down to the last and pettiest detail, all that concerns a better world is the direct concern of Christ.

Where are you to begin? Begin where you are. Make that one corner, room, house, office, as like heaven as you can. Begin. Begin with the paper on the walls, make that beautiful; with the air, keep it fresh; with the very drains, make them sweet; with the furniture, see that it be honest. Abolish whatsoever worketh abominations—in food, in drink, in luxury, in books, in art; whatsoever maketh a lie—in conversation, in social intercourse, in correspondence, in domestic life. This done, you have arranged for heaven, but you have not got it.

Heaven lies within, in kindness, in humility, in unselfishness, in faith, in love, in service. To get these in, get Christ in. Teach all in the house about Christ—what he did and what he said, and how he lived and how he died, and how he dwells in them, and how he makes all one. Teach it not as a doctrine, but as a discovery, as your own discovery. Live your own discovery. Then pass out into the city. Do all to it that you have done at your home. Beautify it, ventilate it, drain it.

Let nothing enter it that can defile the streets, the newspaper offices, the booksellers' counters; nothing that maketh a lie in its warehouses, its manufactures, its shops, its art galleries, its advertisements. Educate it, amuse it, church it. Christianize capital, dignify labor. Join councils and committees. Provide for the poor, the sick and the widow: So will you serve the city.—Prof. Drummond.

What to Read and How.

A young man found that he could read with interest nothing but sensational stories. The best books were placed in his hands, but they were not interesting. One afternoon, as he was reading a foolish story, he overheard one say, "That boy is a great reader; does he read anything that is worth reading?"

"No," was the reply, "his mind will run out if he keeps on reading after his present fashion. He used to be a sensible boy till he took to reading nonsense and nothing."

The boy sat still for a time, then rose, threw the book into the ditch, went up to the man who said that his mind would run out and asked him if he would let him have a good book to read.

"Will you read a good book if I will let you have one?"

"Yes, sir."

"It will be hard work for you."

"I will do it."

"Well, come home with me, and I will lend you a good book."

He went with him, and received a volume of Franklin's works.

"There," said the man, "read that, and come and tell me what you have read."

The lad kept his promise. He found it hard work to read the simple and wise sentences of the philosopher, but he persevered. The more he read, and the more he talked with his friend about what he read, the more interested he became. Ere long he felt no desire to read the feeble and foolish books in which he had formerly delighted. He derived a great deal more pleasure from reading good books than he had ever derived from reading poor ones. Besides, his mind began to grow. He began to be spoken of as an intelligent, promising young man.—Exchange.

The Business Man's Lesson.

He was an upright business man. In his heart he believed the religion of Christ to be true. But he was very busy, and when Sunday came he was thoroughly tired. He had become interested, too, in his Sunday paper, so he gradually dropped off going to church. His wife went regularly, and sometimes the children. One morning, just after his wife had set out, he was comfortably seated reading the money article, when he heard his boys talking in the next room. Said eight-year-old Willie:

"When you grow up, shall you go to church as mother does, or stay at home like father?"

"I shall do neither," said the one, decidedly. "When I'm a man I shall have my horses, and be on the road Sundays, and enjoy myself."

The newspaper suddenly lost its attraction. Between the father and it there came a picture of his boys associating with loose men, and drifting into a godless, reckless life, and of himself looking on it in his old age as the fruit of his self-indulgence. Five minutes after he was rapidly walking toward the church. When the service was over, his wife, coming down the aisle, saw him waiting at the door. There was questioning, glad surprise in her eyes, but he only remarked that he had taken a walk, and thought he would join her on her way home. Next Sunday, however, the whole family were in their pew, and all the rest of the day there was a kind of peace about the house that reminded him of his boyhood happy days in his father's home. And who will say that he was the less fitted for another week of business life by his share in the services of God's house, instead of "staying at home all Sunday to rest?"—Sunday-School Times.

Serving Jesus.

A little bootblack shined a gentleman's boots very nicely, and the gentleman said, "Do you think that will please me?"

"I don't know," replied the boy, "but I think it will please my Father in heaven."

"Poor fellow," said the man, "then your father is dead, is he?"

"Oh, no," said the boy, "I don't mean that. My Father in heaven is God."

"Then," replied the gentleman, "you think that blacking my boots so nicely will please God, your heavenly Father, do you?"

"Yes," said the boy, "I think he is pleased to have us do everything the best we can."

This boy was beginning early to be one of Jesus' followers, and to try to serve him.

He was doing as Jesus did when he was a boy. Do you not want to please God by doing the best you know how?

In reading a chapter in the Bible, see how much you can put to immediate use. For example, if you come across a prayer, pray it; if you find a song, sing it; if a promise, try it; if a pattern, measure yourself by it.

Let young men make themselves ready for positions of trust, and they will be called to the positions at the right time. God's clock is never too slow.—J. R. Miller.

From

High Government Authority.

No authority of greater experience on food products exists than Dr. Henry A. Mott, of New York. Dr. Mott's wide experience as Government Chemist for the Indian Department, gave him exceptional opportunities to acquaint himself with the qualities and constituent parts of baking powders. He understands thoroughly the comparative value of every brand in the market, and has from time to time expressed his opinion thereof. On a recent careful re-examination and analysis he finds

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

"New York, March 20th, 1894.

I find Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be superior to all others, for the following reasons:—

1st. It liberates the greatest amount of leavening gas and is consequently more efficient,

2nd. The ingredients used in its preparation are of the purest character.

3rd. Its keeping qualities are excellent.

4th. On account of the purity of the materials and their relative proportions, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder must be considered the acme of perfection as regards wholesomeness and efficiency, and I say this having in mind certificates I have given several years ago respecting two other baking powders.

The reasons for the change in my opinion are based on the above facts and the new method adopted to prevent your baking powder from caking and deteriorating in strength.

HENRY A. MOTT, Ph. D., L. L. D."

Hygiene.

Be Good to Yourself.

There is a common admonition, and it is full of important meaning. A man should take as good care of himself as he does of his horse; but how few do this. If you do not take care of yourself, no one can take care of you. Take care of your body. Consider its needs. "Make up your mind firmly not to abuse it. Eat nothing that will hurt it; wear nothing that distorts or pains it. Do not overload it with victuals, or drink, or work. Give yourself regular and abundant sleep. Keep your body warmly clad. At the first signal of danger from any of the thousand enemies that surround you, defend yourself. Do not take cold; guard yourself against it; if you feel the first symptoms, give yourself heroic treatment. Get into a fine glow of heat by exercise. This is the only body you will ever have in this world. A large share of the pleasure and pain of life will come through the use you made of it. Study deeply and diligently the structure of it, the laws that should govern it, the pains and penalties that will surely follow a violation of every law of life and health."

Glorify God in your body, and let your body be a temple of the Holy Ghost, that God may dwell in you and walk in you.—Ex.

Read the following about alcohol.

1. Alcohol is a poison. Taken into the system, the greater portion is not combusted, but eliminated in its normal condition through the various organs of exeretion.

2. In its passage through the system it destroys the tissues by coagulating the albumen and absorbing the water.

3. It lowers the temperature by disturbing the physiological and chemical processes of the body.

4. It lessens the amount of carbon dioxide excreted by the lungs, thereby loading the system with this poison.

5. It diminishes the power to withstand extreme heat or cold.

6. It weakens the power of the heart and paralyzes the entire vaso-motor nervous system.

7. By its interference with functions of the various organs, it lessens the power of the human body to withstand disease.

8. It does not strengthen or stimulate, but depresses and diminishes the capacity for mental and physical exertion.

9. There is no disease afflicting the human body that may not be more successfully treated without the use of alcohol than with it.

Cream Layer Cake.—Beat the whites and yolks of three eggs separately. Add to the yolks one cupful of sugar and beat until very light. Add to the well-beaten whites, with one cupful of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in jelly cake tins for twenty minutes in a quick oven. When cool fill with the following:

Filling.—Scald three cupfuls of milk, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, and stir until dissolved. Mix two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch smooth with a little cold water; add to the scalded milk and stir until it is heated. Then add one egg beaten light without separating and cook, stirring constantly until it thickens. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla, and when cool put between the layers of cake.—Selected.

Queen Pudding.—To make queen pudding pour one quart of boiling milk on one pint of bread-crumbs. Add sugar to taste, a little salt, and the grated rind of one lemon. Beat the yolks of four eggs and add to the mixture. Bake it until it is sufficiently done, then spread over the top a layer of preserved or stewed fruit of any kind. Whip the whites of four eggs until stiff; add four tablespoonfuls of fine white sugar and the juice of the lemon, and spread it over the top. Return it to the oven until it is slightly brown. May be eaten hot or cold.—Ex.

To Preserve Quinces White.—Take the fairest you can get; coddle them tender, core with a penknife; pare smooth and weight them; use equal weight of quinces and refined sugar dipped in water or pippin-jelly; boil and skim the syrup, boil quinces quickly, and cover with their own jelly.

LONG STRING of diseases and derangements have their origin in torpor of the livor. Deranged appetite, constipation, headache, sour stomach, gassy belching, indigestion, or dyspepsia, are due to sluggish liver.

Mr. John A. Berry, U. S. Inspector of Immigration at Buffalo, N. Y., writes as follows: "From early childhood I suffered from a sluggish liver. Doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines afforded only temporary relief. I tried Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, taking three at night and two after dinner every day for two weeks and then one "Pellet" every day for two months. I have in six months increased in solid flesh, twenty-six pounds. I am in better health than I have been since childhood. Drowsiness and unpleasant feelings after meals have completely disappeared. EVANS—WESLEY CRUMP EVANS, brother to Rev. C. F. Evans, D. D., of Memphis, Tenn., died in Meridian, Miss., Oct. 31, 1894, aged forty-two years ten months and twenty-seven days. He was born in Shreveport, La., but reared and educated in New Orleans. While quite a young man he went to Elizabeth City, N. J.; but not finding that climate congenial, he returned to his native Sunny South. His brother Charles, who had from the death of their father filled the place both of brother and father, was now stationed in Pine Bluff, Ark., whose attraction drew him to this point. Here he met, wooed and was wed to Miss Belle Griffin. This happy union, after nearly sixteen years, is severed by death, leaving six lovely children to mourn with the mother their sad loss. They moved to Meridian nearly two years ago. Here he was becoming more and more established in business and in the favor of the people. When I met him here last December, and first heard his sweet, clear tenor voice in the choir, I looked on him as the handsomest specimen of physical manhood that I had seen. But a few short months, and I was called to look on the same form, though wasted by disease, still beautiful and placid as he slept in the arms of death.

His sufferings for several weeks previous to his death were great; yet as he approached the margin of the last river his peace and joy in the Lord grew bright and his faith triumphed over every doubt. The third Sabbath in October was to him the brightest day he ever spent on earth. He was thought to be dying. His mind was clear, his voice distinct and lifted in raptures of loving praise. He spent the day on Tabor's heights, often joining in the songs that were sung in his presence. Many anxious friends visited him and wept at hearing the sweet strains of his familiar voice as it grew faint and fell on the ear like echoes from the spirit land. The presence of his brother whom he so dearly loved was of great comfort. Though after this he was delirious, much of the time, in all his lucid moments, the same joy abounded. His earthly life finally went out gently, and he sleeps in Jesus.

E. S. WOODWARD, Pastor.

CHILDS—SISTER CHARLOTTE CHILDS was born in Jackson county, Fla., Feb. 1, 1826, and died Oct. 1, 1894, at her home in St. Landry parish, La.

Her father moved with his family to Arkansas, where she grew up and married. Her husband refugeed to Texas during the war, and at its close moved to St. Landry parish, La., where they spent their last days. Her husband preceded her to the good world nearly two years. Five of their children still live. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church when a girl. She has been a great, but patient, sufferer for fifteen years, being deprived much of the time from attending her church; but she had faith in God that did not waver. She always rejoiced at the prosperity of the church. She loved the association of Christians, and loved the songs of Zion. She always enjoyed the visits of her pastor, sometimes saying when he left, "I may be with the angels before you get back." And so it came to pass.

She lived to see her children all grown and in the church, and among our most enterprising people. This was a great comfort to her in her last hours of suffering.

Her last few days were days of intense suffering. She had no dread of death. "Ready to go" was upon her lips to the last, and without a struggle she left us for the "land of the unclouded day."

May her mantle fall upon her children, and may their last end be as peaceful as hers!

J. S. SANDERS, P. C.

GRAY—Died, at his residence in Sunflower county, Miss., MR. RUDOLPH, son of Richard and Rosa Gray. He was born Nov. 28, 1867, and died Oct. 10, 1894. He made a profession of faith in Christ at the age of twelve years, and attached himself to the M. E. Church, South, of which he lived a consistent member until his death. He was married to Miss Ellen Foster in 1889, to which union five children were born.

As a Christian he was conscientious, bold in condemning the wrong, earnest in advocating the right. He was a dutiful son, an affectionate husband and a kind friend. His was an unselfish nature, seemingly preferring the happiness of others to his own. Though young in years, he had a ripe Christian experience, showing to the world by his daily walk and conversation that he had been with Christ. We will miss Bro. Gray. May our kind Father comfort his loved ones!

J. J. BROOKS.

Whereas, Our heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our midst our brother, Rudolph Gray; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in his removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased on the separation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to him who orders all things for the best, and whose chastisements are meant in mercy.

Resolved, That this heart-felt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the family of the departed friend, and a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

ELIAS BEASLY,

FITZHUGH—MARTHA E. BATTS was born in Prince George county, Va., Oct. 8, 1825, and moved with her parents to Rankin county, Miss., in the year 1837. In 1840 she was happily married to Mr. Drew Fitzhugh, formerly of Virginia, with whom she lived until his death in 1875. God gave them six children, only two of whom remain to mourn for her, viz.: Mrs. William Easterling, with whom she lived during her widowhood, and Prof. L. T. Fitzhugh, president of Belhaven College.

She joined the Methodist Church when quite young. She loved the church, and gloried in its doctrines. The weary itinerant preacher always found a royal welcome in her home. In May, 1893, she was stricken with paralysis from which she never fully recovered. On Sept. 23, 1894 she passed away almost without a struggle.

She loved her Bible, and when she could no longer read it she clasped it to her bosom and called it her "precious treasure." She understood her social duties so well that it was a treat to share her hospitality. There was in her home a pure, sweet influence which called to mind the wise king's description: "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." Her influence, like the aroma of a bruised flower, lingers in the minds and hearts of those who knew her. Many sorrowing friends followed her remains to their last resting-place.

J. F. ROBINSON.

CAMMACK—FRANCES ELLEN CAMMACK was born in Catahoula parish, La., July 13, 1871; married Jan. 17, 1889, and died in Avoyelles parish, La., Aug. 21, 1894. In 1889 she joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a true, earnest Christian up to her death, which was triumphant in the love of Jesus.

There was a degree of patience that she possessed which only the few ever obtain. For more than a year she was a great sufferer, and often told her husband she could not possibly get well; yet he did all that could be done for her to the last—still medical aid was of no avail. Her only regret in dying was she was separated from her husband and two of her children, for the youngest was with her when she died. To leave three little children—the oldest not five years old—seems sad; but the Lord knows best, and we do not murmur. They will never again know a mother's love.

She was the daughter of Mr. Jackson Book, and wife of Rev. Edward Cammack, of Larto Lake, Catahoula parish, La. The Lord bless the bereaved ones!

J. WHITE DAVIS.

CLARK—ROBERT LUNDA CLARK, son of R. C. and Laura Clark, was born in February, 1873, and died Oct. 20, 1894. He joined the Methodist Church last August, and professed the faith of Christ.

Lunda was a dutiful son from childhood. He took his flight forever from this world to a brighter one; this sweet, loving boy, the joy and pride of a mother's and father's love. For nine days he bore his sickness with patience. Oh, how hard it is to give up our loved ones, but how sweet to know some bright day we will meet the sweet boy, never more to part!

Weep not, dear parents, for the loss of your loved one; one less on earth, but one more in heaven. Lunda is waiting and watching for mama, papa, sister, brothers and loved ones to meet him on the other shore. He leaves a father, mother, one sister, six brothers and many relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

May God bless and help the bereaved family to meet him in the sweet by-and-by!

His cousin, DELLAS.

POW—LEMUEL POW was born in Hinds county, Miss., Nov. 23, 1852, and died in Livingston parish, La., Oct. 23, 1894.

Bro. Pow was a true Christian gentleman; he was a man that eschewed evil in all its forms. He was true to his country—always doing what he believed to be the best for himself and his fellow-countrymen. He was also loyal to the church of his choice, and while he was not blessed with much of this world's goods, he was as obedient and dutiful in the discharge of his Christian duties as an affectionate son would be to his gentle father. He was a kind husband and a loving father. Without fear, but with perfect safety, can I recommend the life of the husband and father to the good wife, two sons and sweet little girl for imitation, who mourn his loss. May the good Lord be as precious to them on their dying couch as to him while passing through the valley of the shadow of death!

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

Nobody ever made life any brighter for another by growling and grumbling.

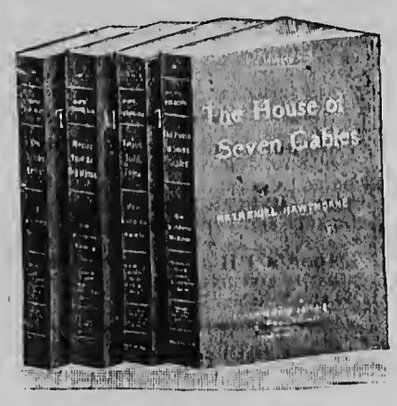
HAWTHORNE'S BEST WORKS.

Four Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large type on good paper and substantially bound by a new process.



Mosses from an Old Manse,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Another delightful companion for idle hours is this collection of magazine papers, which Hawthorne entitled "Mosses from an Old Manse." Like all his works, it is distinguished for its simplicity and truth.

Twice-Told Tales,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Hawthorne, the most distinctly American and by far the most popular of our writers, has given the world an undying book in "Twice-Told Tales." They have all the felicity of expression, as well as the subtlety of thought and insight, which are the special charm of the author of "The Scarlet Letter."

The House of the Seven Gables,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

This masterpiece of Hawthorne's is full of the imaginative charm of romance. In felicity of touch, its author is unapproached by any writer since his own day. The work is, perhaps, the purest piece of poetic prose in all the range of American literature.

The Scarlet Letter,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

A romance of intense interest, exhibiting extraordinary power of mental analysis and graphic description. For an artistic exposition of Puritanism, as modified by New England colonial life, we have nothing like it in our literature.

THE official reports show that no baking powder received an award over the Royal at the Chicago World's Fair.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

New Iberia, La., has had a twenty-five-thousand-dollar fire.

The impeachment trial of Mayor Fitzpatrick goes wearily on.

Several towns were swept away in Colorado last week by forest fires.

It is said by experts that the crop of oranges in Florida will reach 5,000,000 boxes this season.

The Pope has ordered the Peter's pence collected in this country to be paid over to Mgr. Satolli, instead of being forwarded, as hitherto, directly to Rome.

At the session of the Knights of Labor in this city, on Nov. 17, Mrs. Durwood, the fraternal delegate of the W. C. T. U., delivered an appropriate address. She presented the liquor question in all its phases, in order to prove the use of liquor as a beverage a great curse.

The twenty-first Annual Convention of the W. C. T. U. opened in Cleveland, O., on Nov. 16. Every State had delegates present. Miss Frances Willard delivered her yearly address. The treasurer's statement showed the organization to be in good financial condition.

Importers and brokers say the price of tea will advance unless the Chinese war ends very soon, and even then, if China has to pay Japan an indemnity, as seems certain, China will have to raise at least $200,000,000 to pay her war expenses, and on what could she raise it easier than on her teas?

Renben F. Kolb, Populist candidate for governor of Alabama, has issued an address to the people of the State in which he claims that he is the governor-elect, and that he will be inaugurated on the first of December. Gov. Jones states authoritatively that Col. Oates was duly elected, and will be inaugurated. So Alabama seems likely to have two governors for a while at least.

Arrangements have been practically completed for the trans-Mississippi Congress, which will meet in St. Louis, on the twenty-fifth instant, to discuss at the call of States all questions which may affect the interests of the people of the territory lying west of the Mississippi river, and which may be the subject of legislation by the United States Congress, and to express through resolutions and otherwise the sentiments of the Western people.

The new treaty between the United States and Japan has been concluded in all its essential features. The great questions involved are those dealing with the treaty ports and immigration of Japanese to the United States. As to the former the Japanese feel that their judicial system is now conducted on such modern and enlightened lines that it can be safely trusted in the trial of cases arising at the treaty ports of Japan in which Americans are parties.

A large detail of police was called out in Chicago, on Nov. 17, to quell a bread riot in the City Hall. Two hundred and fifty discharged employees of the water department gathered about the comptroller's office and demanded the wages due them. The comptroller sent a clerk to inform the men that there was no money in the city treasury to pay them. Instantly the crowd became riotous. Cries of bread and threats of instant vengeance were howled forth by the angry crowd, and the comptroller, gathering his clerks, barred the doors to his office and sent a hurried call for policemen.

FOREIGN.

There are numerous signs that trouble is brewing in the Latin-American countries to the south of us. Reports from Central America indicate that Guatemala is massing troops close to the Mexican frontier and is actively enlisting recruits. President Barrios is also said to be endeavoring to organize a Central American league, composed of the five Central American republics, against Mexico.

It is officially announced that the marriage of Czar Nicholas and Princess Alix will take place Nov. 23.

The earthquakes in Sicily and Southern Italy last week have caused heavy loss of life and property. The village of San Procopio was destroyed and sixty persons were killed there.

Stormy weather and floods prevailed over the south of England last week, and the loss of life and damage to property is great. The river Avon has reached the highest point of the century. Thousands of people are homeless, and are being fed by the authorities in various public buildings.

Rheumatism in the back, shoulders, hips, ankles, elbows, or wrists, is caused by accumulation of acid in the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla neutralizes the acid and cures rheumatism.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver medicine. Harmless and reliable.

A very startling story of wholesale butchery and outrage comes to us from the Asiatic possessions of the Turkish Empire. It is related that the Turkish regular troops, assisted by hordes of fanatical savages, under pretext of repressing a revolt, fell upon defenseless Armenian Christians and murdered thousands of men, women and children.

How It Acts.

After using Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, according to direction, for ten days, Mr. John W. Boyenton, of Hampton, Va., writes that he can walk and attend to business, which he could not do before. This Remedy has a remarkable record of cures—not only relieving pain, but restoring all the functions of the crippled limbs. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of their remedy, with full directions for use. Agents wanted.

That the event of Prince Hohenlohe as chancellor means an end, at any rate for a time, of the submissive chancellor regime, as it existed during Caprivi's tenure of office, is now a generally accepted fact. Every indication is that Hohenlohe is determined to have things his own way, and the Emperor apparently is inclined to give him a free hand.

General Prudente Moraes was formally installed on Nov. 15 as President of Brazil. General Prudente Moraes, upon assuming the presidency, issued a manifesto, in which he says that he recognizes the difficulties of his position, but that he counts upon the support of all friends of the republic to assist him in overcoming them. He guarantees that respect shall be observed for the liberties of the people. He also promises to exercise strict control of the finances of the country.

Nagging is not a means of grace. There is a more excellent way—the way of love. It is better when we wish to correct faults in others, to be careful to let them see in us, in strong relief, the virtue, the excellence opposite to the defect we see in them. It is the habit of a certain good man, if one of his family or friends mispronounces a word in his hearing, never pedantically to correct the error, but at some early opportunity to find occasion to use the same word, giving it the correct pronunciation. Something like this is wise in helping others out of their faults of character or conduct. An example is better than a criticism. —J. R. Miller.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all these sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness and superior quality of the "Royal:"

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canadian Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical in use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

The entombment of the remains of the late Czar Alexander III. took place, on Nov. 19, in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, St. Petersburg. The cathedral was packed with distinguished persons, including representatives of all the imperial and royal families of Europe. The funeral services were conducted by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg and by the Metropolitan of Moscow.

THANKSGIVING ODE.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems of gold;
Once more, with harvest song and shout,
Is nature's bloodless triumph told.

Our common mother rests and sings,
Like Ruth, among her garnered sheaves;
Her lap is full of goodly things;
Her brow is bright with Autumn leaves.

O favors every year made new!
O gifts, with rain and sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due;
The fullness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, and flowers bloom on;
We murmur, but the corn-ears fill;
We choose the shadow, but the sun,
That casts it, shines behind us still.

God gives us with our rugged soil
The power to make it Eden-fair,
And richer fruits to crown our toil,
Than Summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmurs at his lot to-day?
Who scorns his native fruit and bloom?
Or sighs for dainties far away,
Beside the bounteous board of home?

Thank Heaven, instead, that Freedom's arm
Can change a rocky soil to gold;
That brave and generous lives can warm
A clime with northern ices cold.

And let these altars, wreathed with flowers
And piled with fruits, awake again
Thanksgivings for the golden hours,
The early and the later rain!

From Dai Nippon to Great Cathay.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

With many regrets the dear brethren in Japan were bidden a loving good-by on the night of Sept. 12. Six delightful weeks had passed, and every hour's association drew them nearer in heart, and every day's observation heightened appreciation of their great work. Southern Methodism has occasion for rejoicing that our Japan Mission, so wisely planned, is being conducted with unabated zeal and unexcelled consecration.

On Wednesday morning, before taking ship for "fair Cathay," I attended the formal opening of the Kwansei Gakuin, and had the privilege of speaking some words of salutation and parting to the fine body of young men who had assembled for another scholastic year. The year begins auspiciously, and I hope will be the most gratifying in the successful history of that admirable school.

At eight o'clock in the evening we left the batoba in a sampan, accompanied by Bros. Moseley, Turner, and Yoshioka, Mrs. Moseley, Mrs. Waters, and Dr. Kin, for the Empress of Japan, anchored fully a mile away. As the oarsmen made the phosphorescent waves gleam and sing, we talked of the joyous weeks together, and of the days to come, and then, with tremulous voices, sang the "Sweet by and by." The echoes woke responses from other boats, and brought the passengers on the Empress to the deck railings, who may have fancied the coming of a Salvation Army corps. It was a holy hour. May its benedictions and vows of reconsecration never fade or fail!

All day Thursday we sailed down the Inland Sea, of whose glories every traveler sings, but whose beauties can never be adequately described by tongue or pen.

On Friday morning early the ship's long whistle aroused our slumbers and announced that we were entering the harbor of Nagasaki—the last treaty port of Japan, and the most historic place in Kinshin, "the island of nine countries." I arose at once to enjoy the view as our proud Empress swept on into the bay escorted by a steam launch, in order to avoid the deadly torpedoes planted, I suppose, for their enemies across the Yellow Sea. Soon we were surrounded by sampans filled with men and women, who quickly adjusted their improvised ladders, and made ready to re-supply the ship's bunkers with coal from immense barges which came alongside. The skill and speed with which those little men and women pass the coal baskets up the swinging ladders is really remarkable.

Shortly after our vessel dropped anchor, one of the officers announced that a lady wished to see me. To such an unexpected and agreeable announcement I responded, to meet Miss French, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, who extended a cordial invitation to go ashore for breakfast, and a visit to the city. Of course, we gladly accepted. With Mrs. Van Patten, Miss French, and Misses Payne and Fry, of the Coreau Mission, we had a delightful morning meal, and much talk about the mission work of our sister Methodism. These noble women have charge of a large school for girls—150 in attendance—and find it necessary to erect an additional building to accommodate the increasing patronage. I had the privilege of seeing the young ladies in chapel, and of speaking a few encouraging words. Misses Payne and Fry purposed returning on Saturday, though at considerable peril, to their post in Corea. Heroines of the faith! they seemed not at all afraid of wars and rumors of war. We also had the pleasure of taking tiffin with Dr. Correll and his charming family, of the M. E. Church. Dr. Correll, though a young man, is a veteran missionary, having been in Japan twenty-one years. He has the reputation of being the most fluent and eloquent speaker in Japanese of any foreigner in the field. I was told that even the Japanese envy his perfect accentination and his readiness of speech. It is most important, though very difficult, for every missionary to master this language as soon as possible. Preaching through an interpreter is very unsatisfactory. To speak the vernacular of the people gives one immense advantage.

Over the dreaded and treacherous Yellow Sea we had a smooth passage, with not the slightest indication of a coming or retreating storm. Between lighthouses on the Japan and China coasts the Empress was only twenty-three hours. On Sunday morning we were awakened for early breakfast to find our ship anchored in the yellow waters of the Yang-tse-Kiang, and at the mouth of Woosung river. My first thought was of the lower Mississippi, so much did the "Child of the Ocean" resemble the Delta and turbid tides of the "Father of Waters." From here passengers on the largest vessels are taken up to Shanghai, fourteen miles, on a steam launch. When at eight o'clock the little tug came alongside our stately Empress, waving handkerchiefs from the deck—China's flag of truce—assured us that, at least, some in great Cathay had surrendered their hearts at our coming. Bro. Bonnell and wife were there to welcome their daughter, Miss Marion, from a four-years' stay at the Wesleyan, in Georgia, and, together with Miss Mary Allen, to extend cordial hospitality to the brethren with a message and commission from the church at home. Glad was the family greeting, and most joyous the brotherly welcome. How different when Dr. Charles Taylor sailed into the Woosung forty years before! A lonely, adventurous picket on the perilous front line, he was content not to be discovered, and had no dream of open gates and hearts. But our Lord has been at work, and what hath he wrought!

Past the mud fort intended to guard the mouth of the Woosung we swept, and up the winding river crowded with vessels of every shape and size, and flying every national flag except the Japanese.

At the wharf Dr. Young J. Allen awaited our coming, and a few minutes' jinriksha ride brought us to his hospitable home. Here also are Bro. Loehr and family, with all of whom delightful and profitable days have been spent. At six P. M. I had the privilege of preaching to a good congregation, composed largely of missionaries, in the Masonic Hall, and under the auspices of the Shanghai Free Christian Church. It was certainly an inspiration to meet so many heroic men and women who have consecrated everything to the uplifting of this vast country. Again on Tuesday afternoon, at the weekly "missionary prayer meeting," we had a refreshing hour together. On Tuesday evening I attended the Presbyterian "jubilee meeting," a celebration of the semi-centennial of the Presbyterian Mission in China. Several interesting historical papers were read, and an insight given into the work being done by that Board of ample means and many men.

On Monday morning we attended chapel exercises at the Anglo-Chinese College, and spoke a few words to the splendid-looking boys, Dr. Allen kindly acting as interpreter. The school has opened the new term fairly well, with prospects of a good year. It was a privilege to meet the polite and learned old Chinese teacher, Bro. Sung Tse Hong, now eighty-seven years of age. For more than twenty years he has been connected with Dr. Allen's work, and, being an earnest Christian, is enjoying a happy old age. According to Chinese custom, and with the grace of a well-bred gentleman, he welcomed us by shaking his own hands. That is universal.

We made a pleasant call on the American consul-general, Hon. Thomas R. Jernigan, of Raleigh, N. C. Most cordially and considerately did he welcome his Southern constituents, and promptly secured passports for our tour of the interior. Such authority is not ordinarily needed, but he thought it best during these days of war excitement and turmoil. The last news is beginning to stir the country. China is being aroused, and what the next several months will develop even the oldest residents hesitate to prophesy. Every missionary's prayer is that this strife may tend to the furtherance of the gospel. And that is the general conviction. It is believed that a great opportunity for the church is near at hand. However the controversy between the two nations may terminate, China will, of necessity, change her attitude toward Western thought. God grant that the church may be ready to meet the weighty responsibilities and momentous exigencies of the coming hour! Already indications are seen of a great social and religious revolution. One of the viceroys a few days ago sent one thousand taels to a society with which Dr. Allen is connected for the dissemination of knowledge. He did this after reading a book recently translated. Another fact is suggestive: Boys from the Anglo-Chinese College, and other mission schools, employed in government service at Tien-Tsin, write that, in response to requests from several missionaries, they have been excused on the Sabbath, and allowed to attend Christian worship.

The day of reaping seems to have dawned. Bro. Reid reports the accession of sixty-three members and one hundred and fifty probationers this year in Shanghai. I attended a service in Central Church, Wednesday night, and took knowledge of the methods of work being pursued. The congregation was large, and, for a Chinese audience, quiet and attentive. Fully two hundred remained during the service, and many faces expressed intense interest and anxious inquiry. Cheerful reports come also from other points in the Shanghai and Soochow districts. The brethren I have met are hopeful even to buoyancy, and the noble women, pursuing their wisely-organized and splendidly-equipped work, are enthusiastic and happy. Of Mo-Tyeire Home, Trinity Home, and the ten additional day-schools with their two hundred children, I shall write later. I made a tour of the day-schools yesterday with Miss Hughes, and was profoundly impressed with the wisdom of their planning and administration. Of the number enrolled—all from heathen homes, and all daily taught the catechism and some Bible history—fully one hundred and fifty attend the Sunday-schools and preaching at Central and Trinity Churches. The examinations of the classes assured me that these schools are an evangelistic agency of inestimable value.

A profitable and most enjoyable visit was made to the hospital and school of the Woman's Union Missionary Society of America, located at the West Gate. Bro. Reid preaches there regularly on Wednesday afternoons, and has received probably forty members into his church during the past several years from that work. Here I had a new experience. Outside the hospital stood great crowds, while the large waiting room was filled to its utmost capacity. There they were waiting to be healed of all manner of disease. A pitiful picture—just such a company, I doubt not, as pressed about Simon's house in Capernaum when the Lord was there. In the waiting-room two Christian women—natives—were exhorting and expounding the "Jesus doctrines." They take advantage of the waiting to heal the poor heart, and pray that the diseased body may also be made whole. And that is done morning and afternoon for hours every day. Two lady physicians are on duty daily, and the number treated averages one hundred and thirty, exclusive of those in the wards, and occasional urgent visits to the homes of the people. Through the wards of the hospital we were conducted, each bed endowed by the liberal gift of some godly person in America, and saw how heathen faces were brightened by Christian love, while their bodies were being healed of suffering and disease. One appreciated privilege we had, not accorded to travelers, and rarely ever experienced by missionaries—we saw the unbound compressed foot of a Chinese lady. She hesitated for awhile, but at length modestly yielded to persuasion. It was probably about three inches long, and she a lady of average size and twenty-three years old. The toes, except the large one, were turned under the foot, and imbedded in the flesh. The instep was pressed out of shape, and the whole so drawn back that the heel was pushed down below the sole like the heel of a shoe. The sight sickened. I am glad to have seen it, but do not wish it repeated. And all this torture and maiming of the human body in obedience to fashion.

Over at the Bridgeman Memorial Home we had service in the chapel, Bro. Reid interpreting, and then a delightful four-o'clock tea with the missionary ladies. Miss Melvin has charge of the Home, and is efficiently assisted by a band of consecrated workers, who count not life dear to themselves, that the heathen women of China may be brought to Christ. That afternoon will ever be one of the inspiring memories of life.

Accompanied by Dr. Allen, we visited an opium palace—a large three-story building, leased and licensed for the purpose. What a ghastly sight!—men in every stage of drunkenness and degradation. Some were just preparing the drug, purchased at the counter below, for the pipe. It is heated on the end of a large needle until down to a certain consistency, and then pushed into the curiously-shaped pipe. Others were inhaling the smoke, in a reclining position (all recline on couches against the wall). Others were in the first stage of exhilaration, their eyes dancing and tongues chattering. And yet others were in a dead stupor—dead so shame, conscience, and God. A ghastlier picture I have never seen. And Christian nations are responsible for this degradation.

Coming out from there we witnessed the procession through the streets of the new Tao Tai—a high official of great political power. He was returning the calls of the several consul-generals. Before him, beating gongs, bearing spears, pikes, banners, etc., were fifty or more persons gaudily dressed. Two were on horseback gaily caparisoned. Then came the Tao Tai in a sedan chair, covered with rich green velvet, borne by four coolies, and followed by other chairs, in which rode his four or five secretaries and retainers. The days of such ornateness this nation will not always wink at. This official procession and means of locomotion—six coolies to carry one man—indicate a stubborn conservatism that must yield to the conquering march of Christian truth, which emancipates manhood and dignifies every condition and relation.

Anti-Option.

The Anti-Option Convention, held at Vicksburg on the twentieth, was no pigmy affair. The Times-Democrat speaks of it as comprising "the brain and statesmanship of Mississippi and North Louisiana." State Senator D. W. Pipes, of Clinton, La., was elected president, and B. W. Griffith, president of the First National Bank, Vicksburg, secretary. Of the many prominent citizens present as participants in the proceedings, we name the following: Hon. A. J. McLaurin, United States senator; Congressmen Catchings, Hooker and Spencer; Ex-Chief Justice Simrall, State Treasurer Evans, Auditor Stone, Col. J. L. Power, and Hon. M. F. Smith.

Addresses were delivered by Congressmen Hooker, Catchings and Spencer, and Senator McLaurin. A long letter was read from Senator George, in which he expressed himself vigorously in favor of anti-option legislation, albeit he thinks the Hatch bill is defective and unconstitutional.

The following letter was read from Gov. Stone:

"I deeply regret that I am prevented by imperative reasons from attending your convention. In the promotion of the purpose you propose, you have my best wishes. The best authorities and the greatest number of those engaged in growing and placing on the market the agricultural products of the country, have come to the conclusion that the custom of option or future dealing in said products, with a purely speculative intent, is a great commercial abuse and a potent weapon in the hands of the buyers of the same to force prices down to the very lowest figures.

"While it has not usurped the law of supply and demand, the custom has enabled great and secret combinations of said buyers to forestall, confuse and delay the operations of this law to the serious detriment and loss of the farmers. If the power exists within constitutional limits to prevent this evil or to restrict it within the bounds of actual fair trade, it should be exercised. I hold myself ready at all times to render such aid and co-operation to this end as may be within my power."

From the speech of Senator McLaurin we quote as follows:

"It is not the purpose of the Hatch bill, or of this convention, to interfere with any citizen's right or contract, to interfere with anyone's promise for the future delivery of cotton or wheat; but it is our right to interfere with men taking that contract as an excuse for gambling in futures when the negro is prohibited from gambling with craps, and all other kinds of gambling is prohibited.

'We all know that this future system, this purchasing of commodities to be delivered in the future, giving an option to deliver it or pay the difference in the price, is nothing but a system of gambling. If crap-shooting, lotteries, etc., are gambling then cotton future speculation is gambling. If it is wrong to do one, it is wrong to do the other. The law takes a negro by the collar who has been caught crap-shooting, brings him to justice, and his crime is denounced. They punish him and send him to the county farm, putting a ball and chain around his leg. A man who gambles with cards in Mississippi is punished for it. The man who gambles in futures is just as guilty as these two. Why haven't they as much right as the cotton man who says he will bet so much that cotton will be such a price at such a time? If he makes an option contract, it is not a legitimate one, for chance is at its base. To show this, you will find that there is seven times as much cotton bought and sold as there is produced. In New York alone there is more cotton sold in one month than there is raised in one year. It is no contract if a man says he will deliver so much cotton at such a time when he knows it can not be done. All that can be said in favor of a statute against any other species of gambling can be said against cotton future gambling, and a great deal more can be said against it.

'Why is it that the price of cotton fluctuates? Why does it not go up steadily? Take out this element that enters into the contracting of the price of cotton, and all this fluctuating will be eliminated, and the price will be governed by the legitimate rate of supply and demand. The price will go up or down as the supply is large or small, but it will not fluctuate.

"There is more money engaged in this future gambling than there is in the channels of commerce. If this is the case that money is being used for the means of putting cotton prices up or down, ruining the producers, the producers' rights suffer. To protect these gamblers, some good, moral men have opposed the anti-options law on the ground that it is a violation of their right to make private contracts; but it is not a legitimate contract, and when more than half of the money of the country is taken out for the purpose of gambling, then the producers must suffer.

'As to the constitutionality of the Hatch bill, I will say that it passed the House with many able lawyers, including Catchings, Allen, Money, Stockdale, and others of Mississippi. I have a right to believe that it is constitutional when it passed through such hands as these and the able men on the Judiciary Committee, including that intelligent and profound lawyer, Judge Culberson, of Texas. It could not be that there is a constitutional clause that tends to prohibit the passage of so good a law as to prevent this cotton future gambling.

'As there are only three months left in the Senate before its complexion is changed, it should be accomplished in that time, and I believe that the bill, with the proper modifications, can be passed and will receive the President's signature. I propose to cast my vote in favor of an anti-options bill."

These are just such words of wisdom as were to be expected from our Methodist senator. Those who know him expect always to find him true to his constituency and true to the right.

The following resolutions were adopted by unanimous vote:

"Resolved, That it is the judgment of this convention, composed of planters, merchants, cotton buyers, bankers and representatives of all business, professions and vocations, that the species of gambling known as dealing in futures exercises the most baneful and hateful effect upon the prices of cotton, grain, and other commodities embraced in the so-called contracts, through which such dealing is conducted. The law of supply and demand, which we fully recognize, has long since ceased to be the chief factor in fixing and regulating prices. A large part of the business of the exchanges in such cities as New York, New Orleans and Chicago comes as a result of the rapid growth of this form of gambling. By the making of future contracts, which are not intended to be executed by the delivery of the commodities named in them, the commodities themselves often remain without purchasers, glutting and depressing the market, while at the same time through these fictitious contracts they are nominally bought and sold in unlimited and impossible quantities.

"A reference to the fictitious dealings in a single exchange will suffice to indicate their extent. For many years the New York Cotton Exchange has done little except to bet on the price of cotton. At this exchange, in a single month, the sales (bets) of fictitious option have reached the total of the average crop of the United States—8,000,000 bales—and in one year over 50,000 000 bales, while the sale of actual cotton during the same year at New York was only 193 000 bales, and the net receipts of actual cotton at that port were only 107 000 bales. The operation is simply gambling as to the prices of these commodities, and those engaged in it, finding it easier and, therefore, more profitable to themselves to depress prices, systematically labor, by means of fictitious sales, exaggerated estimates and hostile predictions, assiduously disseminating through circulars and other publications, to create a general opinion that will demoralize the market and lower prices.

"The following extract from a pamphlet received, issued by Latham, Alexander & Co., of New York, who are large dealers in futures, shows clearly that prices can be controlled by such gambling transactions: 'If any market for contracts (cotton futures) smaller than ours should attempt to sell down prices of cotton, dealers in New York could within a few hours buy all they had to sell. If they attempt to advance prices against quotations in New York, dealers here could within twenty-four hours offer to sell more cotton than they could buy.'

"We indignantly repudiate the insolent contention of these schemers and gamblers, that the producer obtains through such transactions a steadier and more wholesome market, and, on the contrary, assert the belief that great good would result if the whole brood should be prevented from pursuing their nefarious occupation, and compelled to earn their livelihood by honest and legitimate methods.

"The nature and magnitude of these gambling transactions that so affect and distress our people are such as to make them a national evil, and in the judgment of this convention all the lawful powers of the Federal government should be exerted to extirpate it, root and branch. We venture to express the belief that the Congress of the United States can find some means to give us relief, and the hope that the distressful conditions that environ us will urge our lawmakers to give our needs their sympathetic and friendly consideration.

"Resolved, further, That we most earnestly appeal to the Senate of the United States to take prompt action upon the bill on this subject lately passed by the House of Representatives, and either agree to the same or some other measure, so that suitable and efficient legislation may be enacted by this Congress before it expires in March of next year.

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to all members of the Senate and House of Representatives."

These resolutions will meet a hearty response from the masses everywhere. Now, let the patriotism and the statesmanship of other sections follow this illustrious example, and we will soon be rid of this infamous business.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is receiving much hearty commendation for the work which it has done in arousing the people on this subject. Yet it is said that there are persons in the world who think that a religious paper ought not to intermeddle with questions of this character. Well, as to that, we have just this to say: We believe that speculating in futures is the most colossal, the most popular, the most fascinating, and the most demoralizing species of gambling ever known on this sin-cursed planet. The Louisiana Lottery, in its palmiest days, was a mere bagatelle in comparison with it. It exercises a more depressing influence upon agriculture, commerce, and every legitimate business than all other forms of gambling combined. It adds to the enormous wealth of a favored few at the expense of the toiling masses everywhere. It is a prolific source of demoralization to young men. It is all the more harmful because of its pre-eminent respectability, having, as it does, the countenance of men in high standing in the world of commerce and social life. This being the case, it is our judgment that a paper that is too pious to wage war upon such an iniquity is entirely too pious for this world. It ought to be furnished with a pair of wings to fly to heaven.

A PRAYER.

O that mine eyes might closed be
To what concerns me not to see:
  That deafness might possess mine ear
  To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue might always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
  That no vain thought might ever rest,
  Or be conceived in my breast;
That by each deed, and word, and thought,
Glory may to my God be brought!
  But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
  On thee is fixed, to thee I cry!
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part.
  And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it, too,
  For that is more than I can do.

Regeneration.

What does the Bible teach us about it? Let us see:

1. It is a radical change. The very terms used to express it indicate this: "born," a change from insensate to sensate life; "created," a change from not being to being—begotten, "new creature"—"new man"—"regeneration." All of these terms are New Testament terms used to express this idea: and they certainly mean that regeneration is a radical and complete change, or they are grossly misleading. They mean that regeneration is a change not only complete in itself, but complete and radical in its sphere. Its sphere is the soul. Jesus indicated this when he said, alluding to regeneration, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the spirit is spirit." For a soul to be but half "born," half "begotten," half "created," half "new creature," is absolutely unthinkable.

2. Regeneration is full salvation. When Jesus said, "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God," he certainly meant that if a man is "born again," he shall "see the kingdom of God." St. John says: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." This means full salvation from sin. St. Paul speaks of the regenerate as "children of God"—if we are "born of God," we are very certainly "children of God"—and says: "If children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." This is certainly full salvation.

The concomitant grace, justification, used by a common metonymy, to include regeneration, is also spoken of in the same way. "Being justified by faith we have peace with God . . . and we rejoice in hope of the glory of God." "Being now just fied by his blood we shall be saved from wrath through him."

The condition of salvation as presented in the New Testament indicates this: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; and thou shalt be saved." Both justification and its concomitant regeneration are conditioned on this faith in Christ: as nobody denies this I need not take time to prove it. The grace conditioned on this faith is salvation—there is no indication that it is partial or incomplete salvation. Such expressions as these are abundant: "He that believeth on him is not condemned"—"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life"—"Whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have eternal life"—"As many as received him, to them gave he the right (or honor) to become the sons of God"—i. e., to be regenerated—"even to them that believe on his name"—"The just," i. e.—the justified ones—"shall live by faith," i. e.—"shall begin and continue the justified life by faith." Now, faith involves complete self-surrender and implicit trust. God can not demand anything more—the sinner could not give anything more; and nothing less will avail. Now, when the sinner gives this, he is to have justification, regeneration, salvation, "eternal life;" so say these texts. Nor is there any intimation that the regeneration, salvation or "eternal life" here promised is in any sense partial or incomplete. They mean that when the sinner gives all God gives all. Regeneration is certainly full salvation.

The man just regenerated may be very properly styled "a babe in Christ"—yet he is "in Christ"—completely "in Christ;" and as fully saved as he will be when he shall have grown "in grace" to "a full-grown man (andea teleion), unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

3. Regeneration is the undoing of Adam's work of ruin. Paul, using the term justification instead of its concomitant, regeneration—all agree that the two are concomitant—says: "By the offense of one (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness (dikaioma, the mending of the wrong) of one (Christ) the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." This means that by Adam's sin came depravity to all men; and by Christ's death came the atonement to all men by which all may have justification, which involves eternal life—justification, therefore, is the undoing of the fall. When Jesus said: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the spirit is spirit—marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again," he meant to set regeneration over against the natural birth—as Mr. Wesley puts it: "Ye were born in sin; therefore, 'ye must be born again,' 'born of God'—by nature ye are wholly corrupted; by grace" (the grace mentioned in the text is regeneration) "ye shall be wholly renewed."* That which the fall of Adam brings to us, the regeneration bought by Jesus removes. St. Paul, as if in view of the objection that the fall brought physical death and all its train of ills, and the regeneration does not remove these, says that we "are waiting for the adoption"—used by metonymy for regeneration—indeed, the two are one—"to wit, the redemption of our body." He tells us in another place when that shall take place: "At the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed: for this corruptible (body) must put on incorruption, and this mortal (part of man) must put on immortality." The teaching of these passages is plain: The corruption of nature engendered of the offspring of Adam is removed from the soul in regeneration, of which justification is a concomitant; and this same inheritance from Adam is removed from the body in the resurrection. So Christ's "unspeakable gift" to us involves the regeneration of the soul at the moment we believe in him, and the regeneration of the body "at the last trump"—then, indeed, we shall be "wholly renewed," soul and body; and Adam's work of ruin will be undone.

I shall close this paper with the words of Mr. Wesley, not given as proof (the new Testament is my only source of proof, and the texts above cited abundantly prove the propositions laid down); but I quote these words because they aptly express my own conclusions: "We allow that the state of a justified person is inexpressibly great and glorious. He is born again, 'not of blood, nor of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.' He is a child of God, a member of Christ, an heir of the kingdom of heaven. . . . His very body is a 'temple of the Holy Ghost,' and 'a habitation of God through the Spirit.' He is 'created anew in Christ Jesus:' he is washed, he is sanctified. His heart is purified by faith: he is cleansed from the corruption that is in this world." (Vol. I., p. 185. Nashville Ed. 1872.) Of "the nature of the new birth" he says: "It is that great change which God works in the soul when he brings it into life; when he raises it from the death of sin to the life of righteousness. It is the change wrought in the whole soul by the almighty Spirit of God when it is 'created anew in Christ Jesus:' when it is 'renewed after the image of God in righteousness and true holiness;' when the love of the world is changed into the love of God; pride into humility; passion into meekness; hatred, envy, malice, into a sincere, tender, disinterested love for all mankind. In a word, it is that change whereby the earthly, sensual, devilish mind is turned into 'the mind which was in Christ Jesus.'" (Vol. II., pp. 269 and 270.) "This is the foundation of the new birth—the entire corruption of our nature. Hence it is that, being born in sin, we must 'be born again.' Hence everyone that is born of a woman must be born of the Spirit of God." (Ibid., p. 266.)

*I quote from Wesley, not as proof; but because he puts the Master's meaning so well.

Which? Why? What Then?

Controversy merely to overcome an opponent is hurtful; when barbed with sarcasm and driven to the quick of personal feelings, it is unbrotherly and unlovely; but, conducted properly, it should tend to awaken thought, promote investigation, and lead towards the truth, and as well to a better knowledge and love of each other. I have been interested in the recent articles in our ADVOCATE on the "residue theory," sanctification, etc; for old as it is, it is a live subject. The subject of "the standards," of course, comes in—what are they? how far do they bind our opinions or our teachings?—and follow some standard on this or other subjects we all certainly will, to some extent; for few will claim originality in construing Scripture. The question comes to us, Which? not Wesley or Paul; but Wesley in construing Paul, or the Calvinists or the Baptists or the Campbellites or the Romanists in their views of Bible doctrine. Every church has its standards of doctrine, and these from well-defined, generally accepted views on the teachings of the Bible. These standards differentiate—that church from every other—and are held to be correct interpretations of the truth. The standards of Methodism are not independent of, but according to the Word.

Bro. Parker's position that Dr. West's book, on "Sin and Salvation," in the course of study for young preachers, is as much a standard as Wesley and Watson, would, if correct, hold good in reference to Tigert's Logic, Porter's Science, and Broadus on the Preparation, etc. The course of study is one thing, and the "standards of doctrine" another. We have the Scriptures as "the only rule," etc.; but we also have the standards. May a Methodist preacher teach election as a Calvinist, baptism as an Immersionist, regeneration as a Campbellite, or depravity as a Pelagian? But we say they do not follow the Bible on these points. So say they of us; and both are sincere. But which view shall we take? Certainly the view held in the Methodist standards of doctrine. Verily, they are important to us, and should be respected by all Methodists and known by them likewise, even though some might not in all points agree with them. Bishop McTyeire, that learned historian and wise expounder of Methodism, says concerning them: "Some of the leading and characteristic doctrines of Methodism are not mentioned in technically called 'Articles of Religion,' and these 'established standards of doctrine' the church is as fully pledged to and as much obliged to maintain as the Articles. Usage and general consent indicate these standard expositions of the Bible to be Wesley's Sermons and his Notes on the New Testament, Watson's Theological Institutes and Wesleyan Methodist Catechisms and the hymn book." (Manual, page 131.) Why do some continue to hold up what the standards teach; and insist on them as authoritative in this matter of entire sanctification? For the same reasons that they do in other doctrines—they believe the standards truly interpret the Scriptures—are harmonious—are the pronounced opinion of universal Methodism—they have been tried and accepted—and work out rich results. There may be statements in them at times contradictory (seemingly) but they agree in their general tenor.

The positions of the standards on this subject are not always clearly stated by their friends, and very often these statements are misunderstood. For instance, Bro. D. G. W. Ellis writes as if the advocates of the residue theory confound sin and remaining depravity in one, and hold both as bringing guilt and needing pardon; as believing in partial pardon; in "sin subdued" and "sin regnant;" "consciousness of divine favor and yet bondage to sin," etc. These things are not held by the "second-blessing brethren" (so called) as are not many other things charged against them. I find nothing more taught in the residue theory than I find in Wesleyan Catechism No. 2 (studied when I was a boy) page 16; Wesley's Sermons on Christian Perfection, Sin in Believers, Repentance of Believers, and The New Birth (quoted from lately by Bro. Weems); Watson's Institutes, Vol. II., page 450; Clarke's Commentary, Vol. VI., page 904, and in the late address of our Bishops in which they say: "The privilege of believers to attain unto the state of entire sanctification, or perfect love, and to abide therein is a well-known teaching of Methodism. Witnesses to this experience have never been wanting in our church, though few in comparison with the whole membership. Let the doctrine still be proclaimed and the experience still be testified."

Bro. Weems wisely urges the reading of Wesley's sermons by our people. I am glad this discussion is on; and the "holiness movement" has begun anew these late years. Even if it begins (as Bro. Parker says) in "the revival of a corpse laid buried for fifty years," it will do good; for it is proving "a lively corpse," and I trust may be followed by such a resurrection as is described in Ezekiel, chapter 37. What then? Let the work go on, and none discourage what the other is doing to further it. We do not here see "eye to eye," nor can we always approve views or methods; but whatever the devil, the world and the flesh object to and fights, should certainly unite all of Christ's followers. If we are agreed on the thing, let us not fight about the terms representing it. Let us read, meditate, pray, repent, examine ourselves, "groan after," believe and get the experience. At all times "let brotherly love continue."

HENRY E. PARTRIDGE.

Correspondence.

Columbia Annual Conference.

Our Conference has been held, and the preachers, like good soldiers, have received their orders, and all gone to the front for another year of conflict. We were disappointed in the postponement of Conference to October, for October in the Willamette Valley means rain, rain; but, to our surprise and gratification, the clouds lifted on the first day of Conference, and we had a delightful time. It gave us a chance to enjoy the scenery in and around Oregon City; and, though Oregon preachers are accustomed to beholding the marvelous, yet all of us spent all our leisure viewing the falls, the immense machinery to utilize this magnificent water power, not only for this city, but for Portland, with its nearly 100,000 people, fifteen miles away. The day is not far distant when these will be one, making a city thirty miles in length and several miles wide. It was wonderful to see the rush and push in business even in these dull times. Many large business buildings were being erected. Then there were the heights, from the summit of which we could see no less than seven snow-capped mountains. One day I was looking across the river, up one of these high hills, and wondering they should have such a large school-building when I could see so few dwellings. "Why, there are about 400 pupils now enrolled in that building, and more to come yet." "Where do they come from?" said I. "All around there." I began to look more closely, and sure enough where it was so steep there had to be a stairway for two continuous blocks. People would get a lot or block, maybe, paying thousands of dollars for it; build terrace after terrace, and on the upper one build a residence costing from $10,000 to $50,000.

When, in November, 1870, I was transferred from the Memphis to the North Mississippi Conference, I thought surely Water Valley was the hilliest place I ever saw.

In 1876, on my return from the Centennial, I spent a day in Lynchburg, Va. In many places there were steps from one street to another. I thought that would do pretty well for steepness, but here we take two whole blocks, streets and all, with a real stairway; many of them with banisters. You of my readers who are in the prairies or valley, how would you like to ascend and descend them to all your meals, as thousands of these people do?—and this is not in the mountains, but merely on some hills from a spur of the cascades, forty or fifty miles away, which reaches to the river.

But to the Conference: Bishop Fitzgerald, though still feeble, seemed well, and was in his finest mood and best humor, willing and ready for any task or labor we might lay upon him, gratifying all our wishes (unless it was some of those private ones where "a special case or condition" existed). The same was true of Dr. Morton, who was also with us. He was much help to us. He and the Bishop carried the Church Extension Board above high-water mark at the anniversary. At the missionary anniversary we just took a quiet hat collection amounting to $10. We are surely growing, for it took us till Monday evening to adjourn. I must not forget to mention that though we met in so large a place, there was a fine attendance of the people at our sessions. The reporters hunted me each evening for a report of the daily proceedings for the daily papers. Our sessions were preceded each morning with a half-hour's prayer meeting. Could we get there in time?

Let me tell you: One brother, R. C. Oglesby, felt he did not have the means to come to Conference by stage and railroad; so he, wife and daughter came in their buggy nearly 500 miles, and across two ranges of mountains, and they were as happy as if they had ridden in a Pullman. I tell you some of these preachers exhibit heroism; but, then, we find the same in all our Conferences. There were—and perhaps are yet—men in the North Mississippi Conference who have just as hard a time as any here. One material difference is, that there is not that home feeling, that cordiality that makes you feel that the people are always glad to see you. You seldom hear one complain for your not visiting; still visiting is just as efficient for good, but it takes courage—sometimes a kind of audacity—to enable one to do it.

We had quite a falling off in our domestic missions. The Board was able to pay less than twenty per cent. on the appropriations; but we paid more on foreign missions than last year. The Conference decided to make no assessment for domestic missions this year, but to bend our energies in an effort to pay all our foreign assessment, which, by the way, is quite large—a little more than fifty cents per member. Were the whole church assessed at the same rate, it would foot up more than $700,000; so, in the face of these facts, it was pretty hard on us for the Parent Board to cut off our appropriations more than thirty per cent.; still we decided that though we were on the picket line, and our rations were curtailed, we would cut off our domestic missions, so as to help the Board out of its indebtedness; and more: that we would still further divide by inviting others to join us; so we received one—John L. Jones—(recently from Alabama, in answer to my letters in the Alabama Advocate) on trial; two—J. A. Crutchfield and C. E. Kirk—by transfer; two—J. T. Thornton and C. U. Cross—readmitted, and two—L. W. Morrison and H. F. Dennis—supplies. Let none conclude that because all our charges are supplied, that we have enough men. No, no, no. We could employ a score or more, and send all them to territory where there are thousands of people who hear no preaching, unless they go from ten to fifty miles, and people are not generally interested enough to do this. Bro. Oglesby has territory enough and people enough in Lake and Klamath counties for a large district; so of Bro. Thornton; and a large portion of these people sympathize with us, and we could reach them better than anyone.

There was an increase in Epworth Leagues, Sunday-school scholars, baptisms, churches, parsonages, and their value, church extension, foreign missions, W. P. and H. M. S., and an increase of members of nearly twenty per cent. The Bishop stated that if the whole church had such a net gain, there would be 370,000 increase this year.

I would like to write more, but press of work forbids me.

Next session goes to Oakland.

Col. Edwin G. Cook.

Col. Edwin G. Cook was born in Virginia in October, 1810, and removed with his parents to Mississippi when quite a youth. He lived in and near Vicksburg until the war between the States; then removed to Hazlehurst, where he has lived since, and where he died on Oct. 9, 1894.

He was twice married: first to Miss Henrietta Harris, daughter of Dr. Hartwell Harris, of Warren county. His children by this marriage were Mrs. Dr. James M. Hunt, of Vicksburg, and Hartwell H. Cook, late of Hazlehurst. His second marriage was to Miss Olive Cook, daughter of Rev. William Curtis, of the Mississippi Conference. His widow and two children—Edwin G., of Hazlehurst, and Miss Olive, now Mrs. Vogler, of San Antonio, Texas—survive him.

He was one of the kindest of husbands, and was an affectionate and tender father. Indeed, in all the relations of life, and in his association with his fellow-men, he was ever true and gentle, pleasant and considerate.

For many years he was an office holder in Warren county. His fellow-citizens, recognizing his faithfulness and efficiency, were glad to elect him to positions of honor and trust. In his case the office sought the man—not the man the office.

Col. Cook was a man of decided literary tastes; was a very great reader, and often wrote for the newspapers. His sketches of men and things of the early days were written in a style peculiarly popular and attractive, and contained information highly interesting and worthy of preservation.

Having satisfactorily settled in early life the claims of the Christian religion to his faith and practice, he embraced the truth with all the energy of his nature, and his whole after life was a faithful and consistent exemplification of its teaching.

He was licensed as a local preacher by the Vicksburg station of the M. E. Church, South, and did much good, particularly in localities where the gospel was not otherwise provided. When health and circumstances permitted, he kept up regular appointments to preach, and was always ready to speak for the Master's cause. His style of preaching was entirely his own—unique, striking, original.

For several years he was in charge of the Methodist Book Depository in Vicksburg, and under his management it succeeded well, until the occupancy of Vicksburg as a military post brought an end to its career.

Col. Cook was in many respects a representative man, and his life furnishes a good example for the rising generation to follow. He was always temperate in his habits, and in his views of life and duty quiet and self-possessed. He was always on the side of right, and his influence and example could be relied on. He honored God by obeying his laws and standing for his cause, and God honored him with long life, with an honorable career among his fellow-men, and with a peaceful end. C. G. ANDREWS.

Selections.

Bread.

Nowhere does the Master point to thrones and palaces and beautiful pictures and exquisite music, and say, "All these are yours simply for the asking." No, no; what he talks about is bread. What he talks about is fish. The promise is bounded. It does not go with limitless sweep about everything, but only about the necessary nutriment we must have to meet the manifold hunger that evermore besieges and distresses our nature.

Now, you can see why so many of your prayers have not been answered. You have been asking for things way outside the promise. The Master said, "Bread;" the Master said, "Fish;" the Master said "Eggs:" but you have been asking for a larger income and a richer dress and a finer house and days of prosperity when the sun would never go down. Of course, such prayers have not been answered. He never promised to answer them. The trouble is that you ran out of the door yonder in the very middle of His sermon, and this is the reason why you have been doing the strange thing of asking for luxuries, when if you had waited until the sermon was through, you would have found it was the necessaries of life He was talking about, and the necessaries of life alone.

But, O, the willingness of God to hear and answer our prayers when we will confine ourselves to the circle of the promise. Do you want daily bread? It shall be yours. Do you want growth in grace and in the knowledge of Christ? It shall be yours. Do you want your lamp re-lighted, blown out by sorrow's wind? It shall be yours. Do you want anything good and needful, for body or soul, for time or eternity? It shall be yours. Do not halt before a single one of these trials. God is your Father. You are his child. He loves you with an everlasting love.—Selected.

Every individual is, in a true sense, "gifted." If he can not find in himself just that which makes a great poet, or statesman, or military leader, or scientist, there is one thing which is peculiarly his own, which is not duplicated, and which the world can neither give nor take away. He has the gift of a personality. In this lie possibilities all his own. It is not his tastes, nor his passions, nor any one thing, but the resultant of all his powers, which constitutes him a being unique in the world. His mission is not to express some one else's personality in word or in act, but his own. To live out the life, the personality, that God gives us, is to honor God with our gifts, even though the world does not count us gifted.—Sunday-School Times.

We need not cultivate sadness, nor go out of our way to hunt for crosses; but we can meet our fate and face our trials as we take the changes of the weather, not trying to count the raindrops, nor minding the gusty flaws that blow across the road we must travel. Some degree of discomfort is an incident of the journey; we must count it as a part of our necessary expenses, and forget it in the same way.—Rev. Charles G. Ames.

Through the week we go down into the valleys of care and shadow and toil. But our Sabbaths should be hills of light and joy in God's presence. And so as time rolls by we shall go from mountain top to mountain top, till at last we catch the glory of the gate, and enter in to go no more out forever.—H. W. Beecher.

Without earnestness no man is ever great, or does really great things. He may be the cleverest of men, he may be brilliant, entertaining, popular, but he will want weight. No soul-moving picture was ever painted that had not in it the depths of shadow.—Peter Bayne, LL.D.

There is no use guarding a corn field with a gun when you can rig up a scare-crow for nothing that will do the work just as well. When the devil is too busy to look after a church himself, he gets a vinegar-faced saint to occupy the highest seat in the synagogue.

A genuine revival is known not by the number of professions, the number added to the church, the amount of shouting, etc., but the consistent walk and steadfastness of professors after the so-called revival is long past.—Arkansas Methodist.

The one certain cure for worrying is to bring the soul into such relation to Christ that it will be willing to accept anything from his hands. Given perfect faith, and there will be no fretful Christians.

A great many people speak well of the Bible not because they really admire it, but because it is so much easier to compliment it than to read it.

Those who have made the highest attainment in holiness are never those who make the highest profession.

An Open Letter to Rev. T. L. Mellen.

My Dear Brother:

I do not know that I am required by any law of controversy to notice your little bit of repartee in the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 1, and would not do so but for the reason that you seek to destroy the force of argument by a species of sarcasm.

That you may have something more to do than stand by the old shoes of your heroes, and snap at every passerby who declines to try them on, I hope you will try to answer a few plain, but pertinent questions in regard to the teachings of, at least, one of the "safe leaders" on whom you so confidingly lean.

Is the "Eternal Sonship of Christ" a Methodist doctrine, and if not, why not?

Is Baptismal Regeneration a Methodist doctrine, and if not, when did it cease to be such?

Does the Methodist Church teach that "Immersion was probably the ancient apostolic mode of baptism," and if it does not, when was the "standard" changed, if at all, and by what authority?

Do you accept Wesley as a "safe leader" in all things, and if so, how do you manage to follow Fletcher, Watson and Clarke, who directly opposed him in some of his teachings?

If Wesley was "off" on some of the cardinal points of Methodist doctrine, what guarantee have you that the residue theory was not one of those points?

Is there a single passage in the New Testament which recognizes the so-called inadequacy of the new birth, or that one "born of God" is still not holy?

These, Bro. Mellen, are not idle questions, nor asked in any spirit of bombast; and I know you are frank enough and straightforward enough not to answer them evasively.

Fearing that you are somewhat over-zealous in your devotion to the heroes of the past, and are following them on an idea too closely to see their errors, I remain, Yours truly,

J. A. PARKER.

How It Acts.

After using Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, according to direction, for ten days, Mr. John W. Boyenton, of Hampton, Va., writes that he can walk and attend to business, which he could not do before. This Remedy has a remarkable record of cures—not only relieving pain, but restoring all the functions of the crippled limbs. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of their remedy, with full directions for use. Agents wanted.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Indian Bayou charge, Louisiana Conference: "At Perry's Point, where I organized a church this year, we had a good service yesterday, which concluded in a subscription of more than $100 towards building a church at that place. We have over $200 pledged towards the building of a church at Bethel. Had 124 conversions and 6 sanctifications this year. Baptized 53 children and 2 adults. Expelled 10 and received 51 into the church. Conference claims will be in advance of last year."

Rev. J. T. Howell, P. C., Winona, Miss., Nov. 17: "I am now making my last round on my second year on the Winona circuit. Have added to the church roll 109 names during the time. Have put about $250 in improvements on the parsonage, making it a respectable house to live in. Have tried and am still trying by begging and persuasion to get the collections ordered by the Conference; but I haven't got them, 'as yet,' and no fair prospect of reporting them in full. Some of the people on the work are doing well, and some are not. Much to be done. The ADVOCATE needs to be read."

Rev. James G. Sibley, Columbia, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, Nov. 15: "Bro. W. G. Forsythe, of Easlabuchie, has been down and preached a week for us here at Columbia to the delight and edification of us all. Socially, he is quite pleasant and entertaining, but dignified without stiffness. As a preacher, he has few superiors in the circle of my acquaintance, and he is an earnest and successful worker. My people were much pleased with him, and would appreciate his coming again. Bro. H. E. Partridge was present on Saturday and Sunday of the meeting, and held our fourth Quarterly Conference, and preached twice to the edification of all. The meeting was reasonably successful, although many things conspired to hinder. To me and mine this has been a year of sickness, suffering and sorrow. God bless you!"

Rev. T. W. Dye, Cockrum, Miss.: "Our four meetings on the Cockrum circuit resulted in 44 accessions to our church. Many in the church were mightily quickened by the Holy Spirit. Prayer meetings and family altars rebuilt attest the gracious work done. Bro. C. W. Perkins, of Tyro, did noble work for us. We all hold him in love and esteem. What an untiring worker he is! Talk of evangelists if you will; but give me Perkins and O'Bryant, and the work will go on. Bro. O'Bryant helped me in a great meeting at Greenleaf Church. Many were made to rejoice, and the church greatly built up. We all love O'Bryant in this part of the vineyard. I am satisfied that if our second-blessing people could hear Perkins, and observe his methods, 'it would from many a blunder free them.' The above-named brethren are full of the Holy Spirit and stress regeneration. The church holds no truer, purer men."

Rev. L. D. Worsham, P. C., Lexington and Tchula: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his assistant, Rev. J. A. Leech, began a meeting at Lexington, Sept. 13, which resulted in about 300 conversions and reclamations. One hundred and sixty-four committed themselves to join the church of their choice the first opportunity. Seventy-two joined the Methodist Church, forty-two joining the church at Lexington. We had with us during the meeting the following brethren, who aided greatly in the meeting: Revs. J. H. Mitchell, P. E.; J. W. Anderson, T. J. Freeman, G. W. Bachman and W. S. William, of the North Georgia Conference, besides brethren of other churches. Then on the second Sunday in October Bros. Leech, Mitchell and myself began a meeting at Tchula, being assisted by Bros. George and McBride, of the C. P. Church, which resulted in a gracious revival and 31 additions to the Methodist Church. Preachers' salaries will be paid in full, and we are trying to bring up full collections."

Rev. H. B. Cottrell, Lake City, Miss.: "Some churches need a radical and thorough breaking up in order to edification; and in vain may you send any other style of preacher to them than a rough John the Baptist or a Boanerges. Jehu reformers are sometimes indispensable. We have an illustration of this truth on the work here. Our pastor is the very man for this place. The church has greatly improved under his administration, and the whole community has been hopefully affected by his fiery zeal, forceful sermons and indomitable perseverance. He 'waits not for wind or tide,' and laughs at turbid overflowing Woolf Lake when in his Master's cause. In view of this obstruction, with the help of a brother, he built himself a boat soon after he came here. I verily believe that he would build a 'bridge of boats' if necessary. He has carried the war into the enemy's camp and conquered a peace, and can truly say with Cæsar: 'Veni, vidi, vici.' He is not such a stickler for ecclesiasticism as to confine his meetings to the church, but goes to those across the Lake who will not come to him, and by weekly prayer meetings from house to house, and by preaching when circumstances favor, he excites a church-going interest which is manifested in an unusual attendance upon regular services in the church. He mingles with the people, hunts and fishes with them, and so far from compromising his Christian integrity, they are certain to hear from him if they don't walk straight. His impulsive, unselfish and generous nature may cause him to err in some respects, but who is faultless? The sentiment here is, 'His work is not finished here, and, therefore, we hope our little Jehu may be sent back to us next year.'"

Rev. M. H. Moore, Brookhaven, Miss., Nov. 21: "We closed at this place last week a meeting which was pronounced by the older members of this church as one of the best that has been held here in quite a number of years. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in each service. Rev. W. M. McIntosh, one of the joint presidents of Grenada Female Institute, did most of the preaching, as well as conducting the altar services. God owned his preaching in the conviction and conversion of sinners. He insists on the converts bringing 'forth fruits meet for repentance.' I heartily commend him to anyone desiring his services. He is a man much given to prayer, and will do you much good. Of course, it is beyond our power to tell how much good has been accomplished. Many hearts, doubtless, were touched that will not give any evidence of it for some time to come. Some of the visible results are: the church has been considerably revived, several backsliders have been reclaimed. Quite a number who have been working in the church heretofore, I am confident, will be more zealous in the future. I think altogether there were something like fifty reclamations and conversions. We have already received by letter and on profession of faith thirty-six; there are five more still to be received into our church; four signified their determination to unite with other churches. Quite a number pledged themselves to begin family worship. This I regard as a good sign as to the permanent results of the meeting. Our church is, I am confident, in a much better condition, spiritually. The spiritual condition of the young ladies attending Whitworth College is, I think, worthy of special mention. Everyone of the boarders profess to be converted, and will pray in their young ladies' prayer meeting. President Chambers is constantly exemplifying the wisdom of the Board of Trustees in electing him to this important position. Send your girls to Whitworth College if you want them in a good moral and religious atmosphere as well as having the very best literary advantages. In different ways we have had eighty accessions to the church here this year. We are making strenuous efforts to bring up a good financial report to Conference."

INDIAN MISSION.

We held the fourth Quarterly Conference for the Indian Mission on the fourteenth instant. The place was changed by the preacher in charge from Tali-Chulok to Cushtusa, so as to be more convenient for me. The meeting was pleasant every way and, we trust, profitable. Bro. Cammack now reports forty members. Jas. Johnson, who was licensed to preach three months ago, proves to be an active worker in the mission. Before I reached the house where we held the meeting I overtook some Indians who had walked from Tali-Chulok that morning, a distance of ten miles, to be at the meeting. From a physician who does some practice among the Indians I learn some remarkable things about these people. There is no deformed ones nor idiots, except one partially so, nor deranged ones.

PEARLINGTON'S PENTECOST.

On Oct. 28 Mrs. Mary McGee Snell closed one of the grandest meetings ever held in this town. Backsliders were reclaimed, sinners were converted, and saints rejoiced in full salvation. Some of the hardest cases were reached, and the whole community awakened to a better life. I have never heard a richer, fuller, sweeter presentation of the gospel of Christ from anyone. The temperance feature of her work was superb; nearly four hundred men, women, and children, white and colored, took the white ribbon, and are standing faithfully by the precious pledge. The whisky business has received a blow here from which, I trust, it will not recover. A vigorous Y. M. C. A. and W. C. T. U. have been organized as a result of the revival. Forty-three joined the church. Many happy souls say fervently, "God bless Sister Snell!" Rev. F. M. Keen accompanied her, and led the singing, and did it well. The free-will offering to these two servants of Christ was generous, and so joyously made. I never saw a purse more gladly given. So kindly did the people feel, that on the following Sabbath they made a snug little free-will offering to the pastor, and paid the sexton a year's salary at once. Some time ago one member presented the pastor with a handsome suit for Conference, and during the year the "hired house" has had many substantial tokens of good-will and appreciation from many kind-hearted people here.

Logtown's loyal little congregation has enjoyed a good degree of prosperity. They went to work and remodeled the church, building a handsome tower and vestibule, putting on blinds and repainting the entire structure. The tower is capped with a gilded finial and presents a beautiful appearance. They helped the pastor in two special meetings, and were greatly revived, having about thirteen additions, making a total of sixty-seven in the charge this year. We expect to report in full all collections at Conference. The Lord has greatly blest us. Blessed be his name! J. V. PENN.

Scrofula in the Neck

Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Speedily Cured by

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"My wife was suffering from a fearful cough, which the best medical skill procurable was unable to relieve. We did not expect that she could long survive; but Mr. R. V. Royal, deputy surveyor, happened to be stopping with us over night, and having a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with him, induced my wife to try this remedy. The result was so beneficial, that she kept on taking it, till she was cured. She is now enjoying excellent health, and weighs 160 pounds."—R. S. Hirsch, M.D., Sassy, Ga.

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

"The Stand is among the handsomest in design. Finely japanned. Has large drive wheel."

This machine is manufactured by an old and reliable company, who guarantee the machine for ten years.

Dr. Walker's Golden Wedding.

Dr. Walker's golden wedding was celebrated in the lecture-room of Carondelet St. Church on Monday night, Nov. 26 The house was most elaborately and tastefully decorated. An immense crowd was in attendance. At the appointed time all the Methodist ministers of the city marched in in a body, followed by a number of small boys and girls, gayly attired, bearing baskets of flowers. Then came the bride and groom. After they had taken their seats upon the rostrum exceedingly appropriate addresses were delivered by Dr. J. T. Sawyer and Dr. J B. A. Ahrens. Dr. Walker made a most felicitous response. After a prayer by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, "Coronation" was sung, and then congratulations were in order. The exercises continued from five to nine o'clock P. M. Toothsome refreshments were served by young ladies appointed by the ten Methodist Churches of the city. But for the fact that our columns are very much crowded this week, we would give some extracts from Dr. Walker's address. We may do so at another time.

One item not down on the original programme was the baptism by Dr. Walker of a six-months-old grandchild, the son of Prof. W. W. Walker, of Brandon, Miss.

The following resolutions, adopted by the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, were read at the golden wedding by Dr. J. T. Sawyer:

Whereas, By the blessing of God, our beloved brother and sister, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Walker, have reached the half-century of wedded life, so infrequent in the history of human lives as to be worthy of special commemoration; And, whereas, They have been so intimately related to the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in this city during nearly all of this period; And, whereas, Our brother has been so honored by God as an instrument in His hands for the salvation of many souls who are still a large part of the membership of our church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we give grateful thanks and praise to God for their long and useful lives.

Resolved, That we, the preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of the city of New Orleans, most gladly express in this, our congratulations to our brother and sister on this auspicious occasion, as suggestive of the golden memories of their lives, as of the golden anniversary which they today celebrate; and that we extend to them our hearty Christian "good wishes," and express the hope that the remainder of their lives may be crowned with the riches of the grace of God, and their hearts filled with the peace of God and the joy of the Holy Ghost.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The Report of the Strike Commission.

The report of the Strike Commission appointed by President Cleveland is naturally attracting attention. The report consists of two parts: (1) a recital of facts, or what are supposed to be facts, and (2) suggestions looking to a solution of the great labor problem of the day. The first item of the report we regard as of far more importance than the second.

We deem it of vastly more importance to the country at large to know the facts that led up to the great strike of the present year than to know what the three individuals composing the commission think as to a remedy for our social ills. On the latter point there are thousands of men in the various walks of life whose opinions are worth as much as theirs. Facts—indisputable facts—in regard to the origin of the great strike the world had a right to expect from this great national commission. Has this commission presented facts? They present a mammoth array of what they call facts; but these so-called facts are disputed from a source that commands attention. The Railway Age makes a most positive and emphatic denial of many of the statements of the commission. The commission, in its report, states that "a general union of employees was never attempted until the railroads set the example." This statement the Age denies. It says that the various labor organizations on different roads had united and stood together long before there was any attempt at union on the part of the railways themselves. The commission's report says that the Pullman reduction in wages was 25 per cent. The Age presents a table showing the reduction in different lines of work, and makes the average cut for all employees only 19 per cent. The commission's report says, "Throughout the strike the strife was simply over handling the Pullman cars, the men being ready to do their duty otherwise." The Age denies this statement in toto, and makes specific mention of several railroads on which no Pullman cars were used whose operatives were nevertheless engaged in the strike.

The commission's report says, "There is no evidence before the commission that the officers of the American Railway Union at any time participated in or advised intimidation, violence or destruction of property." In reply to this the Age says, "The evidence before the commission not only included the testimony as to the specific speeches in which the vice-president of the union, amid much grossly violent and offensive language, recommended the use of coupling pins, but the vice-president stated that the language he used on those specific occasions he had also used at hundreds of other places. Is it possible that the commission does not regard the recommendation to hit a man with a coupling pin as intimidation or violence?"

Such a conflict as to questions of fact would be quite bewildering but for the fact that many of the statements of the commission pertain to matters concerning which there are many sources of information open to the general public no less than to the commission. Take the statement, for instance, as to the strike being only against the hauling of Pullman cars. It is a very easy matter for anybody to ascertain whether the Age's statement is true that certain, specified roads did not use the Pullman cars. On this point we have not a doubt that the commission has made a misstatement. Then, again, as to whether a union of labor organizations came after a union of railways, the world is not shut up to what the commission says.

We believe that the commission has published to the world as a fact what it can be easily shown is not a fact. The inaccuracy of the commission on its statements as to matters of fact will detract very much from the weight of its suggestions as to a remedy for our labor troubles.

At Terry, Miss.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. W. T. Griffin, we gave a lecture on Wednesday night, Nov. 21, at Terry, Miss. From McComb City up we had the pleasure of the company of Sister Hays, widow of the late J. D. Hays, of the Mississippi Conference. The Crystal Springs pastor boarded the train at that place, and went up to take in the lecture. We were met at the depot by Bro. Griffin, and escorted to the hospitable home of our old friends, Col. S. B. Thomas and his excellent wife, whose generous hospitalities we have enjoyed on several previous occasions. We also made a call at the parsonage, where we spent a delightful hour, meeting for the first time the pastor's wife and mother. The lecture was well attended for a place of the size, and the attention could not well have been better.

Bro. Griffin is winding up his third year at Terry. During that time he has nearly doubled the membership, and has built a church and a parsonage. The church is quite a neat structure and of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community. Some inside work in the way of painting or staining is yet to be done, and better seats are to be provided. There is no debt on the building. The parsonage is quite a tasteful structure. It is rather small for the average itinerant's family, but is so constructed that other apartments can easily be added. Bro. Griffin is certainly to be congratulated upon his success in this, his first pastoral charge.

Temperance.

MR. EDITOR: As all our people do not read our Discipline, or the Annual Minutes, or our church papers, would it not be well to publish our church's official deliverances and laws on the subject of temperance?

For more than one hundred years the "General Rules" have prohibited "drunkenness, or drinking spirituous liquors unless in cases of necessity."

The General Conference, held at Richmond, Va., May, 1886, enacted this rule (Discipline, ¶ 216, p. 97): "Let all our preachers and members abstain from the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage." . . . "If any member shall violate any of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be deemed guilty of immorality." Paragraph 556, page 303, treating on the decision of the college of Bishops, relates that a member was arraigned for selling intoxicating liquors with a reasonable knowledge that it would be used as a beverage. He was excluded. He appealed to the Quarterly Conference. The Quarterly Conference sustained the decision of the committee. The excluded member desired the decision of the Bishop. That Bishop and the whole college of Bishops sustained the ruling and the decision, and so the excluded member remained excluded.

Every person who is received into our church is asked this question: "Will you be subject to the discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions?" To this a voluntary answer is given—"I will endeavor so to do, by the help of God."

Every preacher who is received into an Annual Conference is required to answer in the affirmative this question: "Are you willing to conform to the discipline of the church?" Every preacher is forbidden to "mend our rules," and required to "keep them."

The Louisiana Annual Conference, at its last session, held at Homer, December, 1893, passed this resolution:

Resolved, That we will free ourselves from the accusation of complicity with this infamous business, enforcing the Discipline against all liquor sellers in our church." (See Minutes, page 25) Z.

"Early Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40 otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2 40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer. This great work will surely be purchased if seen.

We repeat, the book complete, or entire series of twenty-four parts, will sell regularly for $6. We will present the complete work to anyone sending us five new cash subscribers to the ADVOCATE, at our regular price of $2 a year.

PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES. A Commentary on the Sunday-School Lessons for 1895, by Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D. D., and M. A. Peloubet. 316 pp. Illustrated. $1.25. W. A. Wilde & Co., 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

The Select Notes have, for many years, been the constant companion of thousands of leading Christian workers, who have found in them just the condensed matter that they desired when it was not wise or convenient to consult the more elaborate standard commentaries, and the popularity of the book has been steadily increasing, because both the editor and publishers have in every respect sought out and furnished only the best things. This year the first six months completes the study of the Life of Christ, and the Notes supply an abundance of the most helpful and interesting material regarding both the action and aim of the last years of our Master.

In July the International Lessons go back to the Old Testament, and with great skill the editor has garnered such facts, illustrations, and explanations as will so illumine the text as to make it intelligible and profitable to every teacher and scholar. The whole volume is freely illustrated, and with its finely drawn, accurate maps and beautifully printed pages is a delight to possess, both for its external beauty and its positive helpfulness to every student of the Bible.

THE WIT AND WISDOM OF REV. CHARLES H. SPURGEON, with an Introduction by Rev. William Wright, D. D. Baltimore: R. H. Woodward Company. 1894.

The above-named book is well printed on good paper and beautifully bound. It has a hundred and eighty pages and retails at fifty cents. It consists of extracts from the writings of Spurgeon. A few of the extracts are from sermons; but most of them are from other publications. Spurgeon was an exceedingly prolific writer. He published several books besides his sermons, and also wrote much for the periodical press. His pen was of that racy sort which is attractive to the masses everywhere. The selections for this little volume have been very judiciously made. The work is one which will prove attractive and profitable in any household. It contains as much good, hard common sense as can be found in the same compass anywhere. It has a number of pictorial illustrations which really illustrate.

Orders for the work can be sent to this office.

PHILIP LEICESTER. By JESSIE E. Wright. 12 mo. $1.25. W. A. Wilde & Co., 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

The writer of this charming story, who, by the way, is the daughter of Julia McNair Wright, and inherits her literary ability, has already produced several books which have been accepted and pronounced good by the critics, and have been read and enjoyed by boys and girls everywhere. In this new story the author has produced a story which possesses the rare merit of being of equal interest to both old and young. The story itself deals with Philip Leicester, born in Boston of excellent parents, and lost in London while a baby. Philip goes through many trying scenes, comes to Boston from London, and finally is found and claimed by his family. The book is handsomely illustrated and attractively bound in cloth. 264 pages.

HIGGLE HORSE BOOK: A Concise and Practical Treatise on the Horse, Original and Compiled. Adapted to the needs of farmers and others who have a kindly regard for this noble servitor of man. Philadelphia: William Atkinson Company. 1894.

The above is a small 16 mo. of one hundred and twenty pages, neatly bound and printed. It is quite profusely illustrated. The author, Judge Higgle, has been for many years a contributor to the Farm Journal, of Philadelphia. He wields a facile and vigorous pen, and is thoroughly posted in every department of horseology. He is a staunch advocate of kindness in dealing with the brute creation. Farmers and others who have to do with the equine race would do well to possess themselves of this little book. Price, fifty cents.

NOTES.

A Methodist orphanage has been established at Waco, Texas, the five Texas Conferences having united for its support.

Five accessions, ten conversions and a great increase of spiritual power in the church mark the results of the meeting at Craps Street.

Prof. A. T. Prescott, of Baton Rouge, has been elected president of the Industrial Institute at Ruston, La. The school is to open next September.

The Protestant pastors of this city have united in an invitation to D. L. Moody to hold a meeting here some time during the Winter or early Spring.

The Knights of Labor, during their recent convention in this city, took a backward step by admitting bar-keepers to membership in the order. They will find in the end that the new recruits will be a source of weakness instead of strength.

Rev. R. D. Smart, D. D., of the Little Rock Conference, has been transferred to the Memphis Conference, and stationed at First Church, Memphis.

Our readers who respond to advertisements in our columns will confer a favor on us by mentioning the ADVOCATE. This is of more importance than you may think.

On Sunday, Oct. 25, Dr. C. G. Andrews, pastor of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, received ninety persons into membership in the church as the result of the Culpepper meeting.

Rev. L. F. Jackson, pastor of our church at Algiers, preaches a sermon five minutes long to our children every Sabbath just before the regular services. An example worthy of imitation.

Rev. C. G. Rankin, pastor of Shearn Church, Houston, Texas, is waging a Parkhurst crusade against municipal crookedness in that city. He preaches to a packed house, and his sermons are the talk of the town.

Rev. George T. Vickers, a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home in Covington, La., on the twenty-second of this month in the seventy-fourth year of his age. A memoir will appear in due time.

Rev. H. T. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been transferred to the Southwest Texas Conference, and stationed at Sherman Street Church, San Antonio. North Mississippi parts with Bro. Cunningham with great regret. We heartily commend him to the church in Texas.

The newspapers report that the Catholic priest and the Episcopal rector at Monroe, La., both preached last Sunday in opposition to the prohibition movement in progress there. A minister of the gospel of Christ posing as a champion of the saloon—the vilest infamy of modern civilization. Whew! What next?

It is our private opinion publicly expressed that an anecdote which is too coarse to be told in the presence of refined ladies should have no place in a church paper, and especially in one whose circulation is chiefly among young people. No one need write his name under this picture unless he recognizes the portrait as his own.

Rev. W. C. Bass, D. D., died at his home in Macon, Ga., a few days since. D. Bass had been connected with Wesleyan Female College for more than thirty years. He resigned the presidency of the institution at the last commencement. He was a man of decided ability and force of character. A great man in Israel has fallen.

1894 will pass into history as a year of revivals. In every section of the country where our church has an existence there have been revivals of remarkable extent and power. And these gracious visitations have not been confined to our Zion. Other branches of Methodism and Protestant Churches generally have had the presence of God manifest in their midst in the conversion of sinners and the edification of saints. Above everything else this should be a cause for profound thanksgiving to the great Head of the church.

Preachers, stewards and others who have to do with church affairs should put forth special effort in behalf of home missions. As a rule, no class of men among us renders more faithful service than do our home missionaries; and no others manifest a more heroic, self-denying spirit. In a time of financial stringency like this the home missionary is apt to be one of the first to suffer. This is a good time for men who have been prospered of the Lord in their finances to manifest their gratitude by increasing their contributions to the home mission cause. In saying this we do not in the least depreciate foreign missions.

Has your preacher's salary been paid? If not, who is to blame? You say, 'The church." Well, are you not a part of the church? Perhaps the blame rests as much upon you as anyone else. Times are hard, but they are no harder for you than for your preacher—perhaps, not so hard. This matter of the preacher's finances is a thing worth looking into, and now—just before Conference—is the right time to do it. If your preacher should be moved at Conference with his salary unpaid, you know you are not going to pay it afterwards—no, not even if he has left debts behind that were incurred in reliance upon the promise of the church to pay him a stipulated sum. See that all his salary is paid before he goes to Conference.

The Memphis Conference reports a net increase of three thousand members. It also reports the Conference fund overpaid. Let Mississippi and Louisiana take note and do likewise.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Conference, and to Those of the Mississippi Conference in the Florida Parishes—

Brethren: Please add to the items required to be reported in the Finance Table the following, which we are accustomed to include in our statistics: Current Expenses, Centenary College (let this include all moneys raised specially for Centenary), Relief of Poor, Special Mission Contributions, Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Societies, Woman's Foreign Mission Societies.

Let the "Total from All Sources" include everything raised by the church and Sunday-school for all purposes whatsoever, whether specially reported or not. Let the column "For Other Objects" include all amounts not specifically reported under other headings, and only these.

Do not report in the column "Foreign Missions" in the Finance Table amounts raised for that purpose by the Sunday-school, if you report it also in the Sunday-school Table. Report no amount twice.

The latest blanks prepared by the Publishing House must be used, and no others. See Discipline, ¶578 (Episcopal Decision, 1837). If you have not these blanks, they may be had of Rev. Fitzgerald Sale Parker, 473 Dryades St., New Orleans.

Please file your statistical reports on the statistical secretaries' desk the first day of Conference, as the tables must be made up early in order to the information of the several Boards—Sunday-school, Church Extension, Education, Joint Finance, Missions, and others—in order that they may proceed intelligently with their business, and make exact reports.

Don't make changes after the first day of Conference, as the figures will then have been entered and, as far as possible, footed up. One correction entails a great deal of labor.

Those preachers who can not be present the first day of Conference, will confer a great favor upon the secretary by mailing their reports to Rev. Fitzgerald Sale Parker, 473 Dryades St., New Orleans, so that they will be received not later than Wednesday, the fifth.

The secretary's apology for so minute directions is that in some cases they seem to be needed. Inadvertence or neglect on the part of a few may cause hours of labor.

It's Time That Tells.

NEW FANGLED IDEAS DON'T COUNT FOR MUCH AFTER ALL

People are going ahead so rapidly in life that they are likely to run rough shod over health—Timely words of advice to all—Stick to what you know is legitimate.

One good way to test the merit of a preparation advertised to benefit health is to look carefully into its record. In times like the present, when there are so many worthless preparations in the market and so many new schemes for making money questionably, you will do wisely if you buy only a preparation which has stood the test of time.

Another important thing is to look out for secret compounds. It is unfortunate that the laws of nature make it impossible many times to trace the origin of many vegetable concoctions, for the medical world might be able to expose their worthlessness. But it may be well for Scott's Emulsion, however, that the laws are as they are, for Scott's Emulsion can say that it is one of the few preparations whose ingredients can not be concealed and whose formula is endorsed by the whole medical world.

In these days of worthless mixtures Scott's Emulsion stands out conspicuously. It has honesty back of it, the endorsement of physicians all around it, remarkable curative properties in it and permanent cures ahead of it.

For twenty years Scott's Emulsion has been growing in public favor until it is now a popular remedy in almost every country of the world. Its growth has been somewhat remarkable, when viewed on the surface, and still it is only natural, for Scott's Emulsion is the natural outcome of many human complaints.

Scott's Emulsion presents the curative and wonderful nourishing properties of Cod-liver Oil within the reach of everybody. It is unnatural to take plain Cod-liver Oil, as it is in a form that taxes the stomach, and yet for a person who is wasting to go without Cod-liver Oil is to refuse the very thing which is the best adapted to wasting conditions.

Scott's Emulsion really has over fifty years back of it, for all the plain oil taken for thirty years before Scott's Emulsion was made had to be made exactly like Scott's Emulsion before it could be assimilated. So Scott's Emulsion saves the digestive organs the work of preparing the oil for assimilation and it also aids the digestion of other food.

Loss of appetite, loss of flesh, loss of strength and general physical vigor, are speedily overcome by Scott's Emulsion. These ailments usually mark a decline of health. Unless a nourishment especially adapted to overcoming this condition of wasting is taken, the patient goes from bad to worse, and Consumption, Scrofula, Anæmia and other forms of disease surely result.

Scott's Emulsion is not an ordinary specific. Besides soothing and curative properties which are useful in curing Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat and Inflammation of Throat and Lungs, it also contains the vital principles of nourishment. A little Scott's Emulsion given to babies or children goes more to the making of solid bones and healthy flesh than all of their ordinary food. Babies who do not thrive soon grow chubby and bright on Scott's Emulsion, and children who are thin and have the appearance of growing too fast do not seem as though they could grow fast enough.

To Consumptives Scott's Emulsion is life itself. There are thousands of cases on record where Scott's Emulsion has actually cured quite advanced stages of this dreadful disease.

Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, and all of the phases of Emaciation and decline of health, are cured by Scott's Emulsion when all other methods of treatment fail. For sale by all druggists. Price, 50 cents and one dollar. Pamphlet free on application to Scott & Bowne, New York.

A Necessity.

For some time past all the Northern papers have been actively engaged in the work of waging war upon the innumerable impure and deleterious food products that are thrown upon the markets by unscrupulous manufacturers in all parts of the world. This is what started the Pure Food Expositions being given throughout the country, the success of which has been unprecedented. They have placed consumers in a position to know exactly what food products are apt to prove unhealthy or even fatal to consumers. It is the aim of the managers of the Pure Food Exposition, to be given in this city next month, to down the rascality that permeates almost every branch of the food-packing or manufacturing trade, for it is very necessary that in an undertaking of this kind the direct attention of the consumer should be attracted to the evil in order that it may eventually be stamped out or, at least, diminished.

A Marvel of Cheapness.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. HOME CIRCLE.

WHERE IS HEAVEN?

BY JUDGE LUCIUS P. LITTLE.

When the sun sinks down the west,
And glory bathes each cloudy crest;
Enraptured by a scene so fair,
Fancy whispers, Heaven is there.

When all the starry hosts on high
By night are mustered in the sky,
I oftimes deem some orb I see,
The far-off better world may be.

I know not where! My loved and lost
Unto its shining shores have cross'd;
But whether far or near it be,
There I know they wait for me!

—Exchange.

Influences That Mould.

It is often a problem with parents whether it is better to save for the children or to spend for them; whether the wiser way is to live very frugally and plainly, keeping a watchful eye on every expenditure in order that a fortune may accrue by the time the little ones are grown, that land may be added to land and house to house, so that the father, when it comes to making his last will and testament, may have something to leave and distribute among his heirs, or, on the other hand, whether a judicious investment of means all the way on is not really the better thing for the children.

In the one case lessons of self-denial and thrift are certainly instilled—the boys and girls learn the value of money; sometimes they learn to look upon money as the only good rather than as the means to an end. In the other case they are surrounded by beautiful things during the period when impressions are most readily taken, and when character is moulded, and the style of the future man and woman formed for life.

One thing may be set down as absolute, without exception: there is not only folly, but lack of integrity, in deliberately living beyond one's means, and children who are brought up in a home where they see little care for the payment of just debts promptly and fully are in great danger of becoming themselves dishonest. Granting, however, that the parents have a sufficient income to pay their way without too much anxiety, it would seem that the truer economy of life would be to spend freely rather than grudgingly.

A beautiful environment helps to mould character. Children who grow up in a home in which they are used to elegance and refinement absorb these qualities from the atmosphere. If the mother has sufficient help in doing her work to enable her to give much of herself to the children, the children are the gainers. Contact with pictures and books is in itself elevating. It is a good thing to live in a house where books abound, even if one does little more than become familiar with their bindings, and the chances are that in a house where books multiply there will be a good deal of household reading. Every fine engraving helps to form the child's love of art. Music and musical instruments assist in producing that gentleness and sweetness which go far to oil the machinery to living.

Upon the whole, they are wise who discount the future and sow largely and liberally in the sunshiny present. Whatever may be taken from children amid the chances and changes the years may bring, the pleasures which are freely given them while they are growing up become part and parcel of life and thought, and never can be taken away.—Harper's Bazar.

The Boy Ben Franklin.

Few of you small people who are familiar with the name of Benjamin Franklin are acquainted with the circumstances of his childhood, nor do you realize how much of his fame was achieved through persistent, untiring effort to master the many obstacles which would have crowded success from the pathway of a less persevering character.

Born in the city of Boston, Mass., in the year 1682, one of the seventeen children of an obscure tallow-chandler and soap-boiler, his very early childhood was passed in poverty.

He seems to have been exceedingly clever, and his parents thought at one time of educating him as a clergyman, but owing to their poverty were unable to do so. He was put to learning writing and arithmetic, but was removed from school at the age of ten, his father intending to make a tallow-chandler of him. After some months spent by the sturdy little boy, who was to become so illustrious a man in cutting wicks for candles, filling molds, going upon errands, and doing all the drudgery connected with his father's business, he took so strong a dislike to the trade that he resolved to go to sea rather than continue at it. Finally, however, he was indentured as a printer to his brother James, and at this time his real life seems to have begun.

We read of how he was known to spend whole nights in study of his attempts at writing poetry and prose, of his love of reasoning and of his wonderful self-denial, and, indeed, we find in the boy Ben Franklin fascinating promise of future greatness. Energy and perseverance characterized his whole life, than which there is none in the history of our great country which offers greater encouragement or more splendid lessons to boys who wish to impress themselves upon the times in which they live. The pale-faced, discontented, ambitious and stout-hearted errand boy in the tallow-chandler's shop knew how to make golden opportunities of leaden obstacles by the simple alchemy of determination. You remember, do you not, old Midas of the golden touch? He turned base metal into shining material gold, but our immortal Franklin's was the noble power to make stepping-stones of barriers, and a glorious and shining career from poverty, obscurity and discouragement.—Exchange.

A Noble Youth.

How many young men, just budding into manhood, have taken the first fatal cup! And, not stopping at the first, as they may have thought of doing, they have taken a second soon after the first, and so on, until their ruin was complete.

There was once a young man who was clerking in a large dry goods store where many other young men were employed. Some of the latter urged the newcomer to accept a social glass, but he refused. The young men laughed at him, calling him a "baby," and they also said that "one glass would not hurt him."

"Ah, no!" he replied; "if I should take one glass, I could easily be persuaded to take another. My mother taught me to shun the fatal cup; and when I was a little child she taught me this verse, among many others: 'Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.'"

The lads laughed and sneered at him, but it was useless to try to remove his scruples.

"My father," the brave boy continued, "went the downward path, and at last filled a drunkard's grave. I do not intend to follow in his footsteps."

If other young men would only stand their ground firmly for the right, doing nobly as this one did, there would be a great many less drunkards' graves and a great many more happy hearts and homes.—Young People's Paper.

A Lost Opportunity.

A very young child—too young to go to Sunday-school—sat in the gloaming with her mother. There was a cry in the little heart which she did not know how to put into words, and yet so eager was the desire to know that she sought to express it: "Mama, what is it like to be a Christian?"

That Christian mother, absorbed in her own thoughts, did not recognize the Spirit working in her child, and put her off without any definite teaching, which, just then, would have sunk like the sweet rain into a thirsty soil. Never again did that mother hear a like question from the lips of her child, and some day, in another life, she may learn how she lost the sweet privilege of leading her child into the kingdom through a failure to recognize the Spirit's work.

How eagerly should the teacher called of God to lead the little ones watch for the Holy Spirit in the little flock! How careful to guard the sweet dew of youth from the glare of the sun of carelessness and unbelief! Get the conviction from God, if you have it not, that the Spirit does indeed work "mightily" with the very little ones, and work "together with him" in the strength of that conviction.—Sunday-School Journal.

Begin Early.

The truth is, we can not commence too young in saving the children. When I remember how active every bad influence is over them, I am spurred to the wildest endeavors, that the good may be just as active. The evil can not be shut out. Into their hearts the hateful, deadly seeds are falling continually, and up will they spring. You can no more keep a child entirely pure than you can keep your fingers entirely white when dipped into the pitch barrel; and unless in every way the good is brought to bear, your child will be bad, and thoroughly bad without redemption.—H. T. Miller.

A man may speak pure words now and then out of a rotten heart, but no man ever spoke rotten words out of a pure heart.

Its Fame Will Live.

STATUE OF THE REPUBLIC COURT OF HONOR WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

The World's Columbian Exposition marked the climax of human achievement. It will live in memory of the crowning glory of modern times. No other development of the closing century can compare with it in practical benefit to mankind.

Who that exhibited is not proud of it? Who that failed to exhibit does not regret the omission? The former are the people of to-day. The latter are relics of the past.

No honor so high as that embodied in an award at the fair. Competition was world-wide, the fruits of ripest experience and noblest endeavors were submitted for examination.

Honest tribunals, composed of eminent scientists, examined and passed upon the claims of exhibitors. Their judgement based on inquiry and justice, proves conclusively the value of any article they commend.

Their approval was stamped on

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

It received the highest award at the fair from a jury headed by the Chief Chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Dr. Price's was officially commended for highest leavening power, purity, keeping qualities and general excellence.

HYGIENE.

Relative Values of Meats.

All who are engaged in physical labor should have an abundance of highly nitrogenous foods, and can vary their diet by combinations of all healthful dishes that are obtainable. Underdone beef and well-cooked mutton are the meats they need. Pork should be eaten only by those who have constitutions of iron, who work hard in the open air, and never know what an ache or pain is. There is not a disease that human flesh is heir to which pork may not cause, nor a pain it may not produce. A well-known New York physician, referring to pork, has said: "It is the parent of dyspepsia, neuralgia, headache, sleeplessness, biliousness, constipation, hypochondria and every other physical ill." If it must be eaten, be sure that it is thoroughly cooked. The red and dark meats are more stimulating and more readily assimilated than white meats, owing to a property called osmazome contained in the fibrine. It is that principle which gives to meat soups their aroma and taste, and the darker the meat the more osmazome is present. It is almost absent from veal and all young meats, and from the white flesh of poultry.—Demorest Magazine.

London Temperance Hospital.

Our readers have, from time to time, heard through these columns of the success of the London Temperance Hospital. Its twentieth anniversary was celebrated a few weeks ago. The experience gained by it is strikingly in favor of non-alcoholic medication. During all these years none of this drug has been used and no medicines are prepared in it.

The hospital contains nearly one hundred beds which in 1893 accommodated 1,036 persons. Dr. Collins, surgeon for many years, says that, although not a total abstainer, he must confess that of the 2,000 cases that have passed under his care, not one has suffered in any degree from the non-administration of alcohol. His experience proved that the patients whose systems were entirely free from it, made the more rapid and satisfactory recovery.—Journal of Hygiene.

Bathing.

Weak constitutions that can not stand a great amount of vigorous bathing will find an excellent use for the flesh brush in taking what might be called a dry bath. There are seasons when, from having a cold or some other ailment, one becomes particularly sensitive; and at such times a brisk rubbing with a good flesh brush will do much toward keeping the skin clean and smooth and the flesh firm, and may with advantage take the place, say every other morning, of the regular daily bath. But the dry bath is only for unusual occasions, the proper use of the flesh brush being as an adjunct to the bath, not as a substitute for it.—New York Advocate.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

THANKSGIVING PUDDING.—Six crackers, three pints of milk, a pound of raisins, a cupful of sugar, a quarter of a cupful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, the same of cinnamon, a saltspoonful each of clove and allspice, quarter of a nutmeg and six eggs. Roll the crackers until fine and soak them in the milk after they are soft, add the butter which has been creamed with the sugar, the spices and beaten eggs. Bake in a deep buttered pudding dish four hours in a very moderate oven.

BOILED TURKEY WITH CELERY.—Chop half a head of celery very fine. Mix with it one quart of bread crumbs, two scant tablespoonfuls of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter and two eggs. Stuff the turkey with this, sew up and truss. Wring a large square of white cotton cloth out of cold water and dredge it thickly with flour. Pin the turkey in this and plunge into boiling water. Let it boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then set back where it will simmer. Allow three hours for a turkey weighing nine pounds, and twelve minutes for every additional pound. Serve with celery sauce. The stuffing may be made the same as above, only substitute oysters for celery, and serve with oyster sauce.—Good Housekeeping.

BAD COUGH, SPIT UP BLOOD,—CONSUMPTION.

MR. K. C. MCLIN.

K. C. McLIN, Esq., of Kempsville, Princess Anne Co., Va., writes: "When I commenced taking your 'Discovery' I was very low with a cough, and at times spit up much blood. I was not able to do the least work, but most of the time was in bed. I was all run-down, very weak, my head was dizzy, and I was extremely despondent. The first bottle I took did not seem to do me much good, but I had faith in it and continued using it until I had taken fifteen bottles, and now I do not look nor feel like the same man I was one year ago. People are astonished, and say 'well, last year this time I would not have thought that you would be living now.' I can thankfully say I am entirely cured of a disease which, but for your wonderful 'Discovery,' would have resulted in my death."

OBITUARIES.

WINDLEY.—With the last departing rays of the sunset of Aug. 27, 1894—as gently, as peacefully, as sweetly as dies away an autumnal evening zephyr—so passed into that life beyond the "sunset's golden glow" the sweet spirit of Mrs. KATE LEMLY WINDLEY. Mrs. Windley was born in Salisbury, N. C., on Sept. 29, 1834, and when but a child moved with her parents to Jackson, Miss., where she has resided, with but an interval of, perhaps, a year or two during the Civil War, ever since.

She was born of pious parents, her father, Mr. Samuel Lemly, being for many years before his death a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church in Jackson, Miss., who trained up his children in the way in which they should go; and when old they did not depart from it. This was especially true of Mrs. Windley. She served her God faithfully and well till he said: "It is enough; come up higher."

In 1853 she was happily married to Mr. Henry E. Windley, of the firm of Robinson & Windley, merchants of this city, to whom three children were born. Mr. Windley died in 1864, also the oldest child, Hallie. In June, 1872, death deprived her of her oldest daughter, Eva, a bright and beautiful girl just blooming into womanhood. At the same time her youngest sister, Mrs. H. H. Hines, died and left to her care an infant seven months old, to whose training she devoted her life, giving all a mother's attention, love and care.

Years before her death she always expressed no fear of dying, but said she was ever ready to obey God's will, and when he called she would submissively obey; and this was verified in her last hours.

Dear, sweet Sister Kate, we will not grieve for thee when we have such an assurance that thou art at rest in our Savior's loving arms.

To the sorrowing daughter, Mrs. Myrtle E. Hines, from whom she has never before been separated, and for whom she gave the best energies of her life, we would say, Grieve not, but strive to meet the dear mother in that TAGGERT.—Bro. WM. TAGGERT was born in the State of South Carolina in the year 1820; came to this State early in life; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, when young, and died at his home, seven miles east of Columbus, Miss., NOV. 7, 1894.

Bro. Taggert was a good man, a good citizen, father and husband, respected and loved by those who knew him best. Peaceable, kind, and industrious, he had been a man who enjoyed unusual health, until taken with la grippe two years ago, after which he went down unto death.

He died in his right mind, realizing that he had lived out his probation here. He said frequently, "The will of the good Lord be done." It was truly encouraging to see the old saint so resigned to the divine will, and die in perfect peace. He leaves a wife and two sons and two daughters to mourn his loss. With him it is well.

K. M. HARRISON.

WINDHAM.—On Nov. 5 HUGH G., son of James C. and Lillie Windham, died at his father's, near Fairfield, Ala. He was ten years old fourth of March last. His death was the result of a fall on the play-ground at school. He was just the age to render much help to the family, by his quickness and devotion to them, which was promising much to his parents; but, alas! for human hopes, in a day they may all be disappointed.

Hugh G. was devotional from early habit. When in a dying condition he insisted on kneeling at his bed and saying his prayers. He was at Sunday-school on Sunday; the next he was on the shores of the last river. How uncertain is life! Let us all be ready for death.

D. W. BABB.

McQUEEN.—It was my privilege to know Mrs. H. H. McQUEEN, late of Meridian, Miss. I knew her in her public relations—as a member of the church, as a citizen of the community, as a neighbor and friend. I knew her in her home—as a wife and as a mother. Now that she is dead, and has passed from earth to heaven, I would pay this tribute to her memory, and speak of her from the impressions of a most intimate and pleasant acquaintance.

She was a most intelligent, devout and consecrated Christian. This was the one distinguishing feature of her whole life, manifested in all her conduct and conversation, in her public walk and private ways, in the social and in the family circle, abroad and at home. As she fully trusted and sincerely loved her Master and breathed his Spirit, she seemed ever ready for his service, willing to do, to bear, to suffer, as his gracious will might dictate. For her to live was Christ—ministering to distress, helping and relieving want, and doing good. She had a warm, sympathizing heart, a ready, helping hand for all that was good.

She loved her church, and was always deeply concerned and ready to labor for its good. She loved her pastors, sympathized with them, gladly helped them, and lovingly ministered to them. To her heart and to her home there was for them always a warm greeting and a cordial welcome. By her pastors and brethren she was, in turn, greatly esteemed for her noble worth and for her work's sake; and by the community she was held in the embraces of warmest friendship and love. Her adorning was that of a meek and quiet spirit, which, in the sight of God, is of great value. Meekly, quietly and gently she moved in all circles, doing woman's Christian work in woman's way. The heart of her husband safely trusted in her, and during a long affliction, and in the dying hour, he leaned confidingly and hopefully on her sympathizing bosom and her helping arm. Her children rise up and call her blessed, and now that she is gone, cherish her memory as a rich legacy God has left them.

In the death of her honored and devoted husband, which occurred several years before her own, she was deeply bereaved. So honoring and esteeming him, so tenderly and affectionately attached to him, so patiently and lovingly ministering to him in a long affliction, when God took him she gave him up with great sorrow. With Christian faith and fortitude she submitted, and walked the sad, lonely remainder of the way with cheerfulness and hopefulness.

In her own last sickness, though suffering long, and at times greatly, she was calm, patient, quiet and hopeful, and often expressed herself as being ready and willing to lay down life's burdens and cares, and cease from its labors and toils, and go home to rest at the call of her Savior. She fell asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wakes to weep.

Mrs. McQueen was born in Harris county, Ga., May 17, 1830. She joined the Methodist Church when eleven years old. September 17, 1851, she married Rev. H. H. McQueen, for some years a member of the Georgia Conference, but who was forced to retire because of ill-health. She moved to Tuskegee, Ala., in 1858, and from there to Meridian, Miss., in November, 1871, where she lived till her death, September, 1894. An only son and an only daughter still live in Meridian, loved and respected.

FELDER.—Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in his wise providence, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, R. K. FELDER; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the fourth Quarterly Conference, Port Vincent circuit, Mississippi Conference, Nov. 3, 1894, that in his death our country has lost one of its best and most valued citizens.

Resolved, That this body and the Methodist Church has by his death lost one of its most consistent and useful members. He was a just man and upright Christian, ever ready to contribute of his time and means to advance the cause of Christ, having served his church faithfully as steward, Sunday-school superintendent and trustee, which last position he was filling at the time of his death. We are glad he left behind him indisputable evidence that all was well with him, and that he was at peace with his God.

Resolved, That while we deplore his death, we bow in submission to the will of the Master, realizing that our loss is our brother's gain.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother, to whom we extend our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, and that a copy be also sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

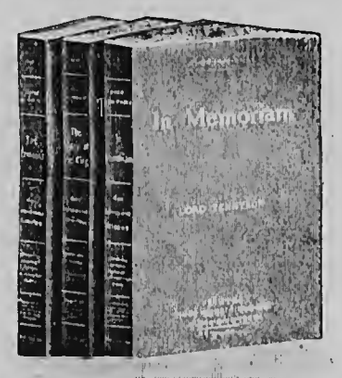
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,
IN MEMORIAM, IDYLLS OF THE KING, THE PRINCESS



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.
The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the artistic motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.
"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.
Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

There are 50,000 Odd Fellows in the State of Illinois.

The business portion of the town of Shiner, Texas, was burned last week by a gang of robbers, who secured much plunder.

An assistant bookkeeper in the National Shoe and Leather Bank, in New York City, has disappeared with $354,000 of the bank's funds.

The New York World is trying to promote some sort of a movement for a memorial to Dr. Parkhurst, and has invited the public to make suggestions.

There will be no negro members in the next Congress. Murray, of South Carolina, and Cheatham, of North Carolina, the only negroes that have been in Congress for years, are both defeated.

The Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, one of the most influential business associations of the country, met in St. Louis on Nov. 26. Its main object is to urge before the National Congress legislation of a business character calculated to benefit the Trans-Mississippi States.

The epidemic of diphtheria at Detroit, Mich., has become so widespread that the School Board has been compelled to order the closing of two of the large public and two of the smaller parochial schools. The spread of the disease in that city has been rapid among school children.

The Citizens' Protective Association, through its officers and executive and finance committees, has issued an appeal to the citizens of New Orleans for funds to be used in carrying on the work of municipal reform. The work the association has set out to do is to remove every corrupt official from the trust he has violated and dishonored.

At a Republican meeting in Boston, on Nov. 22, Mr. Parkerson, of New Orleans, was one of the speakers. He told his hearers that we don't want any force bill in Louisiana, and remarked that the new Republican party of his State meant to have a government controlled by the white voters. His speech elicited much applause.

The Grand Jury of this city has found indictments against fifteen men who are said to have participated in the labor riots on the levee during the early part of October. Twenty-eight policemen will be tried by the police commissioners, on charges preferred by the chief, that they were derelict in their duty on the occasion.

A heavy wind and rain storm did much damage in several Mississippi towns on Nov. 23

The South and West Trade Congress opened in this city on Nov. 21. About two hundred delegates were in attendance. Mr. George W. Fuller, of Kansas City, was elected permanent chairman, and Mr. H. H. Smith, of the Board of Trade, this city, permanent secretary. The congress adjourned on Nov. 23, after adopting resolutions favoring trade reciprocity.

The Cotton States and International Exposition, which is to take place in Atlanta, Ga., next year, promises to prove a very interesting as well as important event. While, as its name implies, it will be in a special manner representative of the resources and industries of the Southern States, it will also be, in every essential, a national affair, as the general government has made an appropriation for a government exhibit.

FOREIGN.

One result of the election of the London School Board has been the defeat of the Duke of Newcastle by Miss Davenport by 8,000 votes.

It is reported that China has intimated that she will offer to pay a war indemnity of 100 000,000 taels, and in addition pay all the war expenses incurred by Japan.

It is said that Port Arthur has been captured by the Japanese after eighteen hours of fighting. The campaign against China is being made with the greatest care, and new roads are being cut to avoid the Chinese mines.

Denmark has officially prohibited the landing of cattle and fresh meat from the United States. It gives as a reason for the prohibition the discovery of Texas fever among cattle recently received from this country.

Jose Salvadore Franoh, one of the most desperate of all Anarchists, the man who threw the dynamite bomb at the Liceo Theatre, in Barcelona, Spain, on Nov. 7, 1893, killing twenty persons and wounding fifty others, was executed last week by the garrote.

With the fall of Port Arthur, the naval power of China is irretrievably crippled. It was to Port Arthur that the Chinese fleet retired after the naval engagement at the mouth of the Yalu river, and there most of the damaged vessels were refitted. Port Arthur being now lost, the docking facilities and repair shops have fallen into the hands of the Japanese, and that well-appointed stronghold can now be used by them as a base of operations against Wei-Hai-Wei, the remaining naval station of China.

Twenty years ago Germany adopted a compulsory system of accident insurance for workingmen. It now has a reserve fund of $20 000 000, and last year paid indemnities to the amount of $7,500,000.

In the Living Present.

Novel reading is sadly increasing among us. The time was when good men inveighed against this practise. London produces annually a thousand novels, some of them in two and three volumes. New York publishes about one-half that many. American readers prefer the translations of the French morai mire. One of our prominent daily papers warns young and old against the pernicious influence of the literary carrion.

A French physician holds that cancer is not a hereditary disease, but is contracted by contagion. The transmission is usually effected through wearing apparel or table utensils. He reports a case of contagion through the medium of a tobacco pipe.

Emile Zola was officially refused an interview with the Pope, Leo XII Proscription of his famous work, "Lourdes," will hence remain intact. On the other hand, that Spanish sycophant, the bombastically oratorical hammerer of tin-plate, Emile Castelar, was privileged to enjoy an hour's conversation with the "prisoner of the Vatican." The latter was highly pleased when Castelar informed him that Spaniards were, of all Roman Catholics, the best. The Pope should have known this, for the Inquisition flourished in Spain more than anywhere else. Among other extravaganoies, Castelar reports that the Pope is a Democrat at heart. Without using the exact words, Leo XII. had declared that Christ had been the first of the Sans-culottes. We know of the shameless character of the Pope's politics before Castelar's nauseating eulogy of the Pope appeared.

Recently met a (High Church) Episcopal rector who deemed himself insulted because he had been called an evangelical preacher.

When, a few years ago, Emperor William II. of Germany ascended the throne, he posed as the "workingmen's Emperor." Prince Bismarck was dismissed. The era of liberalism was to be ushered in. Caprivi, true, but sentimentally visionary, was appointed chancellor. But since then socialism has been alarmingly spreading, even anarchism has dared to raise its grim visage. This fact induced the Emperor to view the situation as it is, not as it should be. Caprivi resigned. Prince Hohenlohe, a conservative, experienced statesman, a friend of Bismarck, is now chancellor.

The Pope finds pleasure in calling himself St. Peter's successor. It sounds so pretty. But Peter was not a persecutor. He was persecuted. He did not arrest, incarcerate, torture, burn, hang, starve heretics—devout Protestants. He suffered torture and death himself because he had the courage of his convictions. Where papism has the power, its tyranny is cruelly fierce.

ICH DIEN.

Rub In Rub Out

is the way you have to wash clothes with soap. First you rub the soap in; that's work in itself. Then you rub it all out again over the washboard. If you're strong and healthy and rub hard enough, you may get the dirt all out, too. It's hard work, and every woman knows it. But it isn't the woman only that suffers. She's wearing the clothes out, rubbing them to pieces, all the time. It's just as hard for every thing as it is for every body.

Soak In Soak Out

is Pearline's way of washing. All it wants is to be let alone. Put it in the water and it does its own work—yours, too. It brings the dirt out easily and quickly—no hard work, no wearing rub, rub, rub, no washboard. Doesn't that seem better? It is better. There's a saving of strength and a saving of clothes. And, what some women can't believe, it's absolutely safe. It's just as much so as any good soap.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 377 JAMES PYLE, N.Y

WHAT GOD SHOWS US.

(Ex. xx, 6; Ps. cxviii, 27; Jer. xxxiii, 3.)

When visiting museums, picture-galleries, ruins, palaces, monuments, historical places, etc., a cicerone for purposes of chaperoning and explaining is of great value. At one time Satan chaperoned Christ. It was when he led him to a high mountain, showing him all the kingdoms of the world. Charming panorama! God chaperoned the children of Israel through the wilderness. He will also chaperone us through life's labyrinthine perplexities, showing us the past, present, future in the true light. Spiritual things he only can reveal.

1. According to our first text God shows—extends—mercy to them that love him and keep his commandments.

(1) In a certain sense God shows mercy to all men, even his enemies. His sun shineth on the good and the bad indiscriminately. All eat on his table.

(2) Specially, though, God shows mercy to them that love him. To those that grieve because they have offended him by transgressing his holy law. Penitently ask for forgiveness.

(3) Particularly God shows mercy to them that keep his commandments. To them he reveals himself as he does not to the world. They receive grace for grace. Are privileged to commune with him as friend with friend.

2. In the second text God is represented as showing us light. Universities illumine the intellect. God's Word gives light to the heart. The light of God's Word

(1) Shows us our sinfulness.

(2) The dreadful consequences of sin.

(3) Shows us, while verging on the brink of dark despair, penitently asking forgiveness—shows us the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

(4) Shows us the necessity, after conversion, to walk in the light as God is in the light.

3. In the third text God promises to show us great and mighty things which we know not. Great and mighty things, though the world may look upon them as insignificant. He shows

(1) That that man is happiest who makes others happy.

(2) That that man lives longest who does most good e'en though he attain not to old age.

(3) That Christian perfection includes Christian beneficence. Emulate God in doing good. All good and perfect gifts come from him. Full of meaning his utterance: "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat," etc.

(4) That all our labor of love will not open the gates of Paradise to us. Faith in Christ is the key to that gate. If children, then heirs. "By faith are you saved through grace."

Literary Announcements.

It is impossible to even summarize in a single paragraph the many and varied attractions which THE YOUTH'S COMPANION announces for the coming year. In the first place, Mr. Gladstone has written an article for it; then two daughters of Queen Victoria (Princess Helena and Princess Louise) describe their favorite hobbies, and the Secretary of the Navy shows what a boy's opportunities are on board Uncle Sam's ships.

Sir Edwin Arnold has gathered together many striking instances of "Maternal Love in the Animal World," and Mark Twain undertakes to show young people "How to Tell a Story."

Beside him, famous story writers are represented by Robert Louis Stevenson, Frank R. Stockton, Rudyard Kipling, J. M. Barrie, W. D. Howells and J. T. Trowbridge. Four admirals describe picturesque incidents in their careers, among them being Admiral Worden, who for the first time describes the trip of the Monitor from New York to Hampton Roads.

My First Week in China.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

That a great and notable day is about to dawn upon China all agree, from the veteran missionary of forty years' experience to the ardent novitiate but a few months in the field. It is in the air; everybody feels it and talks it and prays for it. Indeed, it is positively inspiriting to note the hopeful tone of every voice and the smile on every face. At home we lament the slow progress of missions in China; but the men and women who have to till the hard soil and await the harvest have abiding and increasing faith that reward is sure and near.

We spent an evening at Rev. Mr. Richards', of the English Baptist Mission. Dr. Edkins, a great sinologue and aged missionary; Dr. Muirhead, an accomplished scholar and veteran evangelist of the London Missionary Society, and Dr. Young J. Allen, not behind the foremost in literary and philosophical attainments, were among the guests. It was a rare delight to hear these great men of large experience discuss the spiritual outlook for China. One phase after another of these oriental questions passed in review, adverse and helpful forces were measured and classified, the history of forty years and more traversed, noting the dangers overpast and the progress made, until to this American guest it seemed a demonstration that the Lord Christ would surely, and may be not very distantly, claim this uttermost part of the earth for his possession. These men believe that the day of redemption is nigh. It seems to me that the church should be girding her strength and marshaling her forces for decisive conflict. When the distractions and demoralizations of this war are passed, the M. E. Church, South, should hurry other men to the front. As old things pass away we must be ready to control and mold the new. I verily believe if the churches had have heeded the call of God in Japan, and sufficiently manned that field with consecrated evangelists and teachers, the "reaction" of four or five years ago would never have occurred. I would not delude any with the hope that our mission in China is soon to end. Years of toil and sacrifice are before us. But that vast changes are imminent, and a long step forward is about to be made, are glorious possibilities. God grant that we may be ready to meet them!

Conducted by Bro. Reid, we made a tour of Shanghai within the walls one day. Here is a city of 300,000 inhabitants, and as yet scarcely touched by the gospel. The streets are narrow and filthy, and the people dirty and industrious. But in their shops, each with the odor of a sewer, many curious and beautiful things are made and sold. One wonders how such beauty could come out of those dens; how such lotus flowers can bloom and flame in a marsh of mud and stench! Like the Japanese, they have a genius for the decorative arts, and in some things excel their hostile neighbors across the Yellow Sea. But if you desire to make a purchase, never think of paying the price first asked. For a half, and often a third, of the amount stated, with elaborate and emphatic assurances that not a cash less would be taken, you can finally secure the article, and then pay the covetous Chinaman a good per cent. He never sells at a loss. Nothing does he enjoy so much as a bargain. An hour of chaffering over a little trade is not time lost to him, but a heaven of delight.

Among other interesting places visited was a temple, called the "City Temple." It was dingy, dirty, and seemed quite abandoned. There was no display of architecture, and a marked absence of care on the part of the faithful. The old images were as smoky as the walls of the building, all looking sadly neglected. Before the principal deity, "the city god," who was a large, red-faced image, with thin, long, black whiskers, there were offerings of cooked chicken, mutton, fish, tea, and wine. After a suitable time has elapsed, the priest in residence appropriates these offerings to his own greedy and needy stomach. Around three sides of one large room were a number of images, differing in size and appearance. Before these prayers are offered according to the age of the suppliant. I sought out the one answering to forty-five, and wondered how many persons in Shanghai of that age were ignorant and superstitious enough to pour their pitiful pleas into the dull ears of that ugly thing. With a silent prayer to the Father above that the times of this ignorance may soon pass away, I left the place where sacrifice is sin and every prayer a travesty. One thing, however, specially attracted, and was not without spiritual suggestion. In front of one image there was quite a crowd, looking on intently while one young man bowed his head to the floor repeatedly, and dropped a few cash into the treasury. It was the settlement of a difficulty. He was adjudged the offender, and by prayers and offerings before the altar was being reconciled to his brother. In that mockery there is a lesson. Before God's altar of prayer, if we are truly reconciled to him, all estrangements are removed, all enmities buried, all brotherly hands reclasped. But I fear those ignorant heathen are a rebuke to some professed children of our Lord.

I have seen two funeral processions—one of a very poor, the other of a middle-class person. The heavy coffin, weighing probably over four hundred pounds, was borne by four or six men, by means of long poles. Just in front the son, as chief mourner, rode in a jinrikisha, clad in sackcloth, and wailing out his grief in most distressing tones. Behind came the Buddhist priests in jinrikshas, followed by the family and friends. If the person is very poor, the family ride on wheelbarrows. I saw three or four members of a household on one wheelbarrow, all robed in sackcloth, and making the streets dreadful with their wails of despair. On a bridge near which we were standing the procession halted for a moment. That is a universal custom, and done to appease some evil spirit. Imitation paper money is also burned, I suppose, to pay passage over the waterway. As I looked and listened my heart fainted within me because of their distressful condition. They truly sorrow as those who have no hope. There is no light in their tombs, no joyous greeting and meeting beyond their graves. Their dead may reappear, but in the form of some degraded animal. The reunion of hearts, with never another parting, promised to Christian faith, brings no consolation to their sorrow. How pitiable their superstition! What an appeal to the church for teachers to show them the way out of darkness to light—out of death to eternal life!

The China Inland Mission has a splendid property and head-quarters on the lot adjoining our mission compound. I had the pleasure of an interview one morning with Mr. J. Hudson Taylor, its projector, and Mr. Stephenson, his deputy director. Mr. Taylor had just returned from a four-months' tour of the distant provinces, traveling on boats, wheelbarrows, carts, and mule-litters. At several points he held conferences with the missionaries, and gave us a most cheering account of the work. Since 1852 he has been a China missionary of singular consecration, and has organized a system of evangelization for the interior as daring in enterprise as it is courageous in faith. About 520 missionaries are now in the field, some of them far removed from the treaty ports, having planted their flags even beyond the great wall. In Manchooria, Mongolia and Thibet they have gone, preparing the way for other missions to occupy and possess the land. About forty of these are from Australia, and are supported by the churches in that antarctic continent. From every Christian country and denomination they have come, seeking the salvation of the people, and not the establishment of an ecclesiasticism. In order, however, to conserve their work, converts are organized into churches, and connected with the several Christian denominations. However much I might fail to approve some of the methods employed, I can not withhold my high appreciation of the spirit which controls this grand mission, and my admiration of the sublime faith of its able and consecrated projector.

The Presbyterian mission has a large printing and book-making establishment in Shanghai, which is not only a mighty evangelistic agency, but a source of large revenue. On its presses are printed Bibles for the American and the British and the Foreign Bible Society, the lesson papers used by the Sunday-schools of nearly all the missions, and the books and tracts for sale and distribution among the people. It is overcrowded with business. A copy of the New Testament, on handsomest paper and in finest type, and to be handsomely bound, is now being made for presentation to the Empress Dowager. Its cost, nearly $1,000, will be met by the Christian women of China. Many prayers are offered that this volume may lead to her conversion and the salvation of all in the palace. A sound conversion there would, sooner or later, lead to a revolution in the empire. Just such an establishment as this is the need of Methodism in China. From the very day of its opening every press would be kept busy, and its income would be quite a revenue. The Presbyterian press can not now supply the demand. And if anticipated changes are wrought by this war, there can be no estimating the need and value of such an agency. Anyone acquainted with the interior of a printing office would be greatly interested in a Chinese newspaper establishment. The long cases for type are arranged around the three sides of a quadrangle, and at an angle of forty-five degrees. The type setter can not sit on a stool, but must walk from one case to another for the character needed. And he must have a prodigious memory. Instead of 25 letters, an ordinary font contains 6,500 different characters. These are arranged in the cases, and their places must be as well known as the boxes of an American printing case. Had such a formidable establishment been encountered, I am sure my early fondness for the press would have been effectually cured before "setting a stick," or furnishing a line of "copy."

Of our own work in Shanghai, much could be encouragingly said. The Woman's Board has two boarding-schools—McTyeire Home and Trinity Home—and ten day-schools. These are under admirable management, and are accomplishing incalculable good. I was at Trinity Church one afternoon when the pupils of Clopton School and from several day-schools came in for evening prayers. To hear the little ones from heathen homes singing Christian hymns—singing heartily, if not melodiously—and then, after reading the Scriptures responsively, join reverently in prayer to the only true God, filled me with joy inexpressible. Those children can never be idol worshipers. They may not all become Christian, but will never be heathen any more. Out of that number, I feel sure God will raise up some noble spirits, who will lead their people out of the wilderness in which they have wandered and suffered for centuries. The day-schools are wisely located in easy reach of Central and Trinity Churches. So of the 200 children in daily attendance, at least 150 are induced to attend the Sunday-schools. Charming places are McTyeire and Trinity Homes. Without are foul streets and forbidding sights; within are ideal households and a sweet Christian atmosphere. Every missionary home ought to be comfortable and tasteful, giving to the tired, heart-sore toiler a breath of the dear roof-tree far away, and refreshing relief from the strain and sin of heathen streets. Without such rest for eye and ear and heart, health would sooner give way, and recalls from the field would be more imperative and numerous. All feel the loss on account of Miss Haygood's absence, and hope for her early return. The news of other workers coming cheers the brave young women who are laboring so zealously for their Lord.

When in the "foreign cemetery," a few days ago, and standing near the missionary graves of Southern Methodism, I recalled the sad morning when a cablegram announced the death of Dora Rankin, and all the bells of her native town—Milan, Tenn.—tolled in honor of her heroic service and triumphant translation. Over that peaceful sleeper a beautiful stone cross has been erected, the symbol of her all-conquering faith, and in its simplicity expressive of a character as modest as it was stainless. Vines of evergreen are entwining about it and sheltering the mound which seemed to borrow grace from the form that rests beneath. Since she "fell on sleep," others have followed, until now we have a Machpelah to bind with strongest ties the heart of Southern Methodism to this vast empire.

One evening I attended a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society in Central Church. (Bro. Reid says it will soon be an Epworth League.) Thirty of the fifty members were present, besides the pastor and several foreign visitors. John Marshall, son of Rev. C. K. Marshall, named for that prince in our Israel who so long lived and labored and died at Vicksburg, was the president. He led the devotional exercises, called for reports of committees, made announcements, and otherwise conducted the meeting after the most approved style in an American church. The occasion was certainly inspiring. When I thought of the vast possibilities in those young men—many of them occupying good positions in the customs and telegraph service, and all earnest Christians—psalms of praise were in my heart. Surely, I said, these are the early fruits of a glorious harvest. Now, would it not be well for the Epworth Leagues of Southern Methodism to send out two missionaries—one to Japan, and another to China—who, while doing full work in the field, will have special charge of League organization? Let our youngest Connectional Board and the new Epworth editor make answer.

About the Epworth Era.

For several weeks a controversy has been going on between Dr. S. A. Steele, editor of the Epworth Era, on the one hand, and a half-dozen other church editors on the other. That our readers may know something of the nature of the controversy, we present below an extract from a three and a half column editorial in the Southern Christian Advocate, edited by Dr. Kirkland, our Sunday school secretary:

"Dr. Steele devotes his longest editorial to his especial pet, 'Dr. Kirkland, of The Southern Christian Advocate,' and reads that editor a sermonette of nearly two columns, so full of cant and reckless assertions that it really fatigues us to review it. He says some things in this discourse, however, that are so far-fetched, that are so inconsistent with other things he has said, that are so contrary to the facts in the case, that we must note them. Take these for samples:

"'The editor of the Era wrote an article recently which contained one little sentence that seemed to reflect on our Bishops.'

"'He has never written a line or done an act disrespectful to the Bishops.'

"'He knows them all personally, and esteems them highly both for their own and for their work's sake.'

"And he declares in another place in the same paper: 'Seizing upon a single sentence, whose meaning they perverted, they have made most hurtful use of it against our work.' (Italics ours.)

"We think it will be easy to show that the above statements of Dr. Steele are not true, himself being witness.

"1. He claims that the sentence, 'Bishops and saloon keepers have made common cause denouncing Sam Jones,' was not intended to apply to our Bishops.

"2. He claims that it was for using this single sentence—'one little sentence'—that he has been arraigned by the editors.

"3. He asserts that he has never written a line or done an act disrespectful to the Bishops.

"Let us look at the original paragraph which the Advocate criticised, and for which his special wrath has been vented upon our head:

"'Bishops and saloon keepers have made common cause denouncing Sam Jones. The religious papers, some of them of his own church, by innuendo and serious argument, have thundered against him. As the Epworth rector refused to let Wesley preach in his father's pulpit, so Vanderbilt University locked the doors of its chapel against him, and refused to let him speak to the students within its walls. The powerful machinery of episcopal authority was deliberately trained upon him, and he was forced to sever the sacred relations of the itinerancy, thus throwing the moral effect of the whole church, as expressed in the action of one of its chief pastors, against him.'

"Can any sane man read this paragraph without believing that Dr. Steele did mean our Bishops in the first sentence quoted? It is simply against logic and reason to believe anything else. He makes allusion twice in this paragraph to Bishops. The allusions are separated by only a sentence or two. Let us bring them together and see how they read:

"'Bishops and saloon keepers have made common cause denouncing Sam Jones.' . . . 'The powerful machinery of episcopal authority was deliberately trained upon him.'

"Dr. Steele will not deny that he did refer to our Bishops specifically in the second sentence. How can he believe that he did not refer to our Bishops (at least in common with others) in the first? By what wonderful act of mental legerdemain did he separate the two so quickly?

"4. He next claims that he was criticised 'for one little sentence,' etc. To show that this statement is not true, we simply submit the following reminder:

"'We criticised his remark (1) with reference to Bishops and saloon keepers; (2) with reference to his charge against our church papers; (3) with reference to his stab at Vanderbilt University (which we have since discovered was, as we supposed, entirely unwarranted); and (4) with reference to his final charge as to the abuse of episcopal authority. And yet he declares that for 'one little sentence' he has been so severely dealt with by these editors. It is very evident that Dr. Steele is very careless in his statement of facts.

"5. He declares that he has never written a line or done an act disrespectful to the Bishops. How does the following sound for a 'respectful' reference:

"'The powerful machinery of episcopal authority was deliberately trained upon him, and he was forced to sever the sacred relations of the itinerancy, thus throwing the moral effect of the whole church, as expressed in the action of one of its chief pastors, against him.' In this he makes a charge hardly less disrespectful and slanderous than the oft quoted sentence which he now says 'he didn't mean,' but which he continues to declare he'll never take back. He arraigns one of our Bishops, at least, with deliberately training the powerful machinery of the episcopacy against one man, so as to exclude him from the itinerancy.

"In our original reply to this venomous (respectful indeed!) statement, we did not hesitate to declare that it was not in accordance with the facts in the case, and contained an attack upon our Bishops in the administration of the laws of the church as insidious as it was unfair and unjust. We stand by that statement now.

"But why did Dr. Steele single out this paper, the Holston Methodist (edited by Dr. Richardson), Dr. Glenn and Dr. Hoss for this fusillade from the 'Error' of Nov. 15? Did he not know that other editors and contributors all over the church were criticising his course? Had he not heard that Annual Conferences, beginning with his own Conference (the Tennessee), were taking action, condemning the same editorial, and demanding that he must either mend his editorial ways or be removed from the editorial office? Had he not heard that the Holston Conference had resolved 'that we disapprove of the editorial management of the Epworth Era, and respectfully appeal to the authorities controlling it to change its policy?' Has he not since learned that the North Texas Conference, which he attended, and where he had a great 'hand-shake' with the brethren, had, nevertheless, passed a resolution condemning certain of his editorial utterances? Has he not read the following action of the Memphis Conference (of which he was formerly a member, and which he also attended), as reported in the Daily American: Dr. Steele's conduct of the Epworth League organ, the Era, was criticised with the declaration that unless he was more conservative in his editorials regarding the governing body of the church, he should be removed from the editorship?' And does Dr. Steele imagine other Conferences will not speak in just as emphatic terms? Does he not know what all this means? We think we can tell him.

"1. It means that preachers and people of the M. E. Church, South, are loyal to our church, her doctrines, and her discipline.

"2. It means that our preachers and people love and honor our Bishops, and that our people respect and have confidence in their pastors.

"3. It means that this continued abuse of our institutions, our ministry and our polity, whether by little Jack-snapper evangelists who hardly know their a, b, c's, or whether by a connectional officer, will no longer be tolerated.

"4. It means that the church is now so wide awake on this subject that Dr. Steele would have been as much 'in the soup' to-day, even if this editor had not happened to be the first to sound the alarm.

"5. It means that it is both little and contemptible for Dr. Steele to be stirring about abusing three or four conscientious editors, and 'defying them,' when almost the entire church condemns his course.

"6. It means that these editors whom he criticises with the spirit of a Comanche, and the skill and effect of a baby boy with his first wooden knife, have not yet 'lost their heads;' and if he learns to conduct his paper in better spirit and with more loyalty to the church, we hope he will not lose his!"

In the Living Present.

The Westminster Review contains an erudite treatise called "The Stage as an Educator," in which the writer falsely asserts that the pulpit had manifestly failed in reforming and educating man satisfactorily. Man's possibilities demanded more. He advocates the establishment of free theatres where object-lesson and example, though fictitious, would accomplish the desired end.

During the last few years sixty-five physicians in Great Britain left each an estate of more than fifteen million dollars. A proof that discipleship of Æsculapius is remunerative. The physicians who treated the late Czar during his last illness received six hundred thousand roubles. Other physicians we know, equally gifted and able, who disdain lucre and are rich in God. Their deeds of charity are the pride of their acquaintances.

Prof. Huxley—a questionable authority—advocates woman's rights on account of her habitual economy and selflessness. To use his own words: "Woman attaining to office would not fraudulently enrich herself. At most she would rob for her lover, husband, or children." This sounds like irony, but the professor is serious in said advocacy.

"Father John," arch-priest of Cronstadt, is reported to have effected miraculous cures. Throughout Russia he is regarded as a wonder working saint. But it now seems that his reputation must be based on what is expressed by distance lending enchantment. When summoned to the bedside of the late Czar his manipulations and incantations proved fruitless.

We do not accept as our standard what is expressed in Pope's famous couplet:

"For modes of faith let zealous bigots fight;
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right."

We hold that doctrine precedes practice; principle, action. If the former are wrong, the latter can not be right. Cardinal Gibbons' expressed solicitude for church union, even if sincere, will prove futile.

The mayor of Basil, Switzerland, sentenced Pastor H. P. Hossler, a Seventh-Day Adventist, to sixty days' imprisonment for permitting manual labor to be performed on a Sunday. No objection. But what kaleidoscopic confusion in regard to morality must reign in the cranium of that dignitary, for he permits public balls, horse-racing, target-shooting, parades, etc., on the Lord's day. Consistency, thou art a jewel!

"The Examiner" explains the necessity of close communion among the Baptists. He imagines himself very adroit, but does not perceive that he is stultifying himself. Hear him: "Baptizing infants is tantamount to walking disorderly. From such the apostle enjoins to withdraw ourselves."

The papers report in one week one death from pugilism and five from foot-ball playing. According to this, foot-ball playing is five times worse than pugilism; and this takes no account of casualties other than death. Bruises, manglings, broken limbs, etc., by the score have taken place as the result of the foot-ball craze. How long is this silly fad to be tolerated by college authorities?

THE WORLD'S SYMPATHY.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you,
Weep, and you weep alone,
For the sad old earth
Must borrow its mirth,
It has sorrow enough of its own.

Shout, and the hills will answer,
Sigh, it is lost on the air;
The echoes bound
To the joyful sound,
But they will not voice your care.

Smile, and friends will greet you,
Frown, and they turn and go;
They want full measure
Of all your pleasure,
But they do not want your woe.

Feast, and your halls are crowded
Fast, and the world goes by;
Succeed and give,
It will help you live,
But it can not help you die.

There is room in the halls of Pleasure
For a long and lordly train,
But, one by one, we must all file on
Through the narrow aisle of Pain.

"Progress" the Watchword of Methodism.

Now and then the cry is heard in certain quarters that the church has too many enterprises on foot. Some church members go so far as to say that unless we cut off some of these collections, or at least reduce the assessments somewhat, they will kick out of the traces. It is the experience of most pastors, however, that the cry of "too many collections" comes from those who pay the least, or from the non-contributors. The kickers are nearly always those who are strangers to consecration and to liberality. A large class of church members think that when they have paid the preacher and given a small sum to domestic missions, they have discharged their whole duty so far as giving is concerned. As Col. E. W. Cole said in his recent missionary address: "We pay the debt we owe the Greeks in full, and then pay part of the debt we owe the barbarians and ignore the balance. With the latter is classed, perhaps, foreign and domestic missions, church extension, etc." In truth, Christian liberality does not consist in paying for the gospel we hear, for that is a plain matter of self-interest. It does not begin until we contribute of our means to send that gospel to the dweller in darkness.

This writer, for one, is glad that he belongs to a progressive, aggressive church, to a church that is capable of adopting new methods of propagating the truth, to a church that has not one, but a hundred hands stretched out to help and bless humanity. The times have changed, and we must change with them, not that we must discard the doctrine of the fathers or the faith the Bible teaches. It would be a strange thing, however, if along with the advancement in civilization, and the adoption of new and better business methods, the church did not exhibit the wisdom born of experience.

The chief characteristic of modern times is the tendency to organized effort. What monuments to combined endeavor are the railroads of this country. Great manufacturing enterprises are nearly all the result of concentrated capital. What one capitalist can not effect is speedily accomplished by companies of wealthy men. When some wise-hearted philanthropist desires to inaugurate a reform he at once endeavors to secure the co-operation, not of a few, but of the many. Individual effort is a good thing, but how weak, how ineffective without concert of action!

As in secular affairs so in affairs religious, there must be concert of action in order to secure the grandest results. A consecrated, liberal-hearted Christian, though working alone, may do much good in the community where he resides. He may feed the poor, visit the sick and do other charitable work. Nevertheless his field of usefulness is greatly extended when he is brought to see the needs of other localities, and has a way opened by which to help with his means those of other districts and climes who are more needy than the people of his immediate neighborhood. A Christian may be ever so anxious to help the idol-worshiping Chinese or the poor, degraded Mexicans, but how powerless are his gifts and offerings unless put with those of others! Few are rich enough to support a missionary in Japan, or elsewhere, with their own means. Few are able of themselves to build churches and give them to needy congregations. Few can give enough to maintain an orphan asylum or provide for a worn-out preacher.

By uniting our contributions, however, we are enabled to do all these things. The church, to use a trite expression, is an organized institution for the spread of the gospel and for the uplifting of humanity. Her great mission, next to that of saving men, is to unite and render more effective the labors of the individual Christians. She combines and gives direction to the liberality of her members. She tells us where and how our money will do the most good, takes it in trust, and sees that each contribution performs its mission. She points to a poor, homeless orphan in a distant village or city. Receiving our offering, she provides it food and shelter. She points to a neglected district that is without a pastor. With the money we give she sends a preacher to the now rejoicing people. She tells of a congregation too weak as yet to build a church. Taking our dimes and dollars, and putting them with the contributions of that congregation, she erects a house of worship where soon a strong church is developed.

With the lapse of time and the increase in numbers and financial strength, the church has enlarged her plans and is constantly seeking to widen her beneficent influence. Her motto has ever been and still is, 'The greatest good to the greatest number." Once it was her policy to leave the people of a new settlement to build their own house of worship without aid from other sections. Until the membership was strong enough of itself to support a regular pastor, it was left without one. Pastors of small congregations, laboring to build churches, roamed over the country indiscriminately in order to raise the necessary funds. The communities most needing assistance being unable to pay the expenses of a solicitor, often did not have their claims considered at all. Now all this is changed. A Church Extension Board carefully considers the relative merits of the calls for aid in church building coming from the various parts of our Zion. The pressing need of houses of worship in the foreign mission field, in the great West, or in some home region is brought to our notice, and soon the needed funds are forthcoming.

We are more and more learning the importance of concentrated effort. A small field well tilled produces far better results than a large one carelessly cultivated. The same is true in sowing the Word of God. The seeds of truth must not only be planted, but watered as well. The Board of Missions has all along done its best to send preachers to the frontier towns and districts, that they might be leavened with the gospel; but it has been powerless to provide houses of worship for these faithful men. In many cases the cause of Christ has languished and the church has suffered defeat because of the failure to follow up the preaching of the Word with the erection of suitable buildings for worship to serve as nuclei for future growth. Preaching the gospel is not the whole of Christianity nor the whole of a minister's duty. Time has demonstrated the wisdom of planting churches in rapidly growing towns, whether the people want them or not. Those who most need the gospel are usually the most indifferent to it until it is pressed upon them. Although it is highly important that the gospel should be scattered broadcast, it is equally important to provide for the training and instruction of new converts. Building churches in sin-cursed localities is as much a work of mercy as feeding the poor. It is as important, as sacred a work as sending out missionaries. Every true Methodist should say, not "How little, but how much can I do for the Lord and for humanity."

McKENDREE M. BLACK.

What Is the Sin of Our Nature?

In the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of Nov. 8, Rev. W. B. Lewis gives us an interesting account of the great meeting held in Natchez, Miss., by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D. In this report he says, "Dr. Carradine exposed the sin of our nature." I would like to ask, What is the sin of our nature?

It seems to me much of this controversy on sanctification, holiness, the "second blessing," hangs on the answer to this question. It is assumed by the advocates of the "second blessing" theory of sanctification that, after the forgiveness of past sins and regeneration, or new birth, by the Holy Ghost, "the sin of our nature" doth remain. This is called "indwelling sin," "sin in believers," "remains of the carnal mind," "roots of bitterness," and "the sin of our nature." If this assumption be true, then the "second blessing" is necessary, and follows as an indispensable work before one can enter heaven.

It seems to me we part company on the doctrine of the "second blessing" because we differ in our views on "the sin of our nature." We are discussing the wrong question. We see the doctrine and the work of sanctification through different glasses—from entirely different standpoints. We will never agree about the one while we differ about the other.

We are all agreed that there is such a thing as "original sin," "birth sin." We are agreed that "this sin does not stand in following Adam," in sinning, as taught by Pelagians. We are agreed that "it is the corruption of the nature of every man, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam." So it is the corruption of nature, and it comes to every man naturally. It is propagated by natural generation. It is sin by a law of our being. No state of grace in the parents will save their children from it. It is a sin that is not eradicated. It is not taken out of us. It is the fruitful source of all actual sin—"the inclination of man's nature to evil," "and that continually." Whatever it is, and however bad it may be, it stays with us and remains in us as long as we live, and it goes on down from father to son through all the generations of men. The only way under heaven to stop this kind of sin is to stop the propagation of our species. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh"—always was, and always will be.

If any expect to get rid of "the sin of our nature," they are doomed to be disappointed. The grace of God was never meant to subvert the order of nature. "The corruption of nature that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam" is our misfortune and not our fault. We are not to blame for it, and we can not possibly be guilty on account of it. We may yield to it and be governed by it, and so be guilty of actual sin. By consenting to be governed by it we voluntarily put ourselves under the dominion and control of the flesh—the carnal mind—and so we are "in the flesh and can not please God."

In regeneration, a new birth, being born of God, we receive spiritual life. We receive from God "a clean heart, and a right spirit is renewed within us." It is an impartation of moral and spiritual power to do the right thing, notwithstanding the fact that we are the depraved sons of a depraved race. We are born of the Spirit and are led by the Spirit. The natural bent to the love and practice of sin is substituted by a heaven-born bent to the love of God and the practice of holiness. The natural animus yields to the new, spiritual animus begotten in us by the Holy Ghost. The one is natural, the other spiritual. The first we get from Adam by natural generation, the second from God by spiritual regeneration. Natural corruption becomes moral corruption when yielded to. Spiritual regeneration is the principle—the source—of all practical and experimental holiness.

Now, if that which is purely natural is sin—in any correct sense of the word sin—then it remains for those who hold that view to show how we get rid of it. In a matter of this kind it is always best to prove things by the Word of God. Some hold that we are guilty on account of natural corruption—"the sin of our nature"—and that we are liable to, and in danger of, eternal damnation on account of it.

Some who hold this view insist on a second and an additional work, subsequent to regeneration and supplemental of it, as necessary to get rid of "the sin of our nature." Others who hold this view insist that "the sin of our natures" is not removed till we die. And these hold that elect infants dying in infancy are regenerated and saved.

Some of the early Methodists leaned too far towards Calvinism. Some lean too far that way now. Was not the guilt and condemnation of original sin completely taken away by the one righteousness of Christ that brought justification of life to all men? When a regenerate man commits himself, soul and body, to God, is he not then sanctified—wholly set apart—throughout, soul, body, and spirit?

The "sin of our natures" was against the Spirit—not the human, but the divine Spirit—and the Spirit fights against "the sin of our natures," and these are contrary the one to the other, so that we can not do the things that we would. If we do the works of the flesh, we are not led of the Spirit, and if we yield the fruit of the Spirit, we can not do the works of the flesh. All Methodist people and preachers believe in holiness of heart and life, and all who live as Christians ought to live are striving to be made perfect in love in this life.

For one, I have no hope and no desire to be other than a natural-born man while I live in the world. I expect to have human nature in me as long as I live; but, by the grace of God, I intend to hold my body, my tongue, my temper, my passions and my appetites in subjection to the law of Christ, to the law of that spiritual life begotten in me by the Holy Ghost when I was only eight years old. God has given me moral and spiritual power, and he pledges me the constant aid of his Holy Spirit, that I may do this very thing. All that is good in me is the fruit of the Spirit, and comes of my being voluntarily led of the Spirit. All that is wrong in me comes of my voluntarily following the flesh—yielding to "the sin of my nature."

Nature is nailed to an internal cross, and it is undergoing crucifixion. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." GILDEROY.

Sanctification.

Fearing that our last article on "Sanctification" would likely be too lengthy for us to include in it all that remained to be written on the subject we, therefore, closed with the purpose of finishing up in a subsequent article or articles.

"Sanctification" is used in the New Testament in the sense of keeping pure and increasing in purity by the truth of God, and hence our blessed Savior said, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." (John xvii, 17.) Every person who is sanctified, or made pure, in conversion is not only expected, but is required to keep himself pure, for Paul said, "Keep thyself pure." (I. Tim. v, 22.) It is quite likely that no one, not even one who has a very limited knowledge of divine things, will claim that a converted person will not get to heaven if he should die in a converted state, for it is conceded by all that conversion, in the sense of the new birth, fits its possessor for heaven; and yet the Bible teaches that the holy, or pure in heart, only shall see God. Our Savior said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Matt. v, 8); and Paul said, "Holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. xii, 14.) The inevitable conclusion, therefore, concerning conversion is, that it is a state of sanctification, purity, or holiness. This is quite evident from what Christ said to his disciples before he asked his Father to sanctify them in the sense of John xvii, 17. He said, "Ye are clean." (John xiii, 10.) "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." (John xv, 3.) And yet John says, in speaking of a man in this converted state, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." (I. John iii, 3.) Christ, after pronouncing his disciples clean, prays to his Father, saying, "Sanctify them through thy truth, for thy word is truth." (John xvii, 17.) There is no contradiction in these passages, neither is there any proof of a second blessing when they are properly understood. The last ones cited have not only reference to the maintenance of the purity of an inward passive spiritual life, but they have reference to the purity of an inward and outward active life, and this life is to be purified by the truth of God, and that, too, as far as the individual may or can have knowledge of that truth. In proportion, therefore, as the individual may or can have knowledge of the truth of God, and appropriates it under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, in that proportion will he become pure, or sanctified, in outward and inward active life. This being true, it may be seen at a glance that in proportion as a person is perfect in knowledge of the truth of God, in that proportion it is possible for him to be perfect in sanctification as respecting his inward and outward active life. If his knowledge of the truth is gradual, his sanctification must be gradual, and, therefore, if his knowledge of the truth is always increasing so will his sanctification always thus be.

Sanctification is used in the sense of advancement, and hence Paul says: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly." (I. Thes. v, 23.) The question that arises here is, "Sanctify them with reference to what?" With reference to the instructions Paul had given them. What is plainer?

We have now viewed the subject of sanctification in the light of God's Word, and have found it to mean:

1. A setting apart for a sacred use, or from all worldly uses or matters.
2. Being set apart for, or devoted to, death.
3. The source of sanctification.
4. Conversion, or the new birth.
5. The pure soul at work by avoiding evil and doing good.
6. Purity of the inward and outward active life by the truth of God.
7. Advancement.

But nowhere does it mean a second blessing in the sense it is claimed by some. ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

Apologizing for Sin.

It seems unfortunate that a paper professedly published in the interests of the Christian religion should be found either advocating or in any way apologizing for sin. That the sinless One should have followers and worshipers in any way pleading for that which he came to destroy, and which the angel declared he would save his people from, is certainly strongly confirmatory of the Scripture declaration, "that the human heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked."

Such a charge, without proof to sustain it, would doubtless be repelled indignantly as false and wanting in either respect or charity towards an organ of a beloved sister organization. (In the leading editorial of Nov. 8, in the Southwestern Presbyterian, occupying over two columns.) The gist and point of the article may be fairly taken from the following extract from near the middle of the said editorial:

"In opposition to these professions of entire present sinlessness and perfect sanctification attained at a single leap, we set the inspired utterances of the Bible. Says Solomon: 'For there is not a just man on earth that doeth good and sinneth not.' (Eccl. v, 20.) What was true, then, if, indeed, the Spirit did not have in view the entire human family, is just as true now: there lives no Christian who does not sin. (Italics mine.) Hear John: 'If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.' (I. John i, 8.)"

This long extract is preceded by very pronounced animadversions on what is termed the "holiness fad," stating that "This heresy has made such progress in a sister denomination as to have been publicly rebuked in an address by its college of Bishops;" and it is followed by statements to the effect that Abraham, Moses, Joseph, Peter, and other Scripture characters committed sins more or less heinous.

With this two column editorial before them, doubtless the readers of the Southwestern Presbyterian will go on sinning, with a decided conviction that even if certain divines do insist that it is wrong to sin, they can plead that it is strictly necessary, and, therefore, to be continued in even if deplored.

If the learned editor had kindly informed us just how often in a day we must sin, and also have given us some definite information as to how vile and outbreaking our sins ought to be, it might have enabled us the better to keep the via media, and thereby have prevented liability to plunge into needless and extravagant courses of crime and wickedness.

The Carradine Meeting.

The ADVOCATE, of Oct. 11, contains an article under this notice, "The Carradine Meeting at Natchez, Miss.," over the signature of "Rex B." The criticism of the meeting may be right and proper. "Let every man be freely persuaded in his own mind." The brother seems to have no definite idea of sanctification, perfect love, or holiness. He objects to Dr. C.'s exposition, methods, and fears he is doing more harm than good. Conversion is conversion, regeneration is regeneration, and sanctification is sanctification. This, no doubt, Dr. C. believes most steadfastly. It has been my privilege to read what Dr. C. has written, and specially his first announcement of his entrance upon his present experience. His experience was clear and full, and his testimony open, manly, and fearless. I thought then the church would hear from him touching this great and almost neglected doctrine, and it has heard from him.

It was my privilege to attend his meeting at New Port, Ark., last June, for nearly a week. He did not belittle regeneration. How can he, when he believes that only the regenerate can consecrate and attain this great blessing of holiness? Let "Rex B." ask him. He is a candid and true man, and he will most surely inform him. And touching this matter of consecration, is it not true that only the child of God can consecrate? Does not the Word of God so teach: "I beseech you, by the mercies of God, that you present your body a living sacrifice, and I write unto you that you sin not. I pray God to sanctify you wholly." This prayer not only includes consecration, but purification. The great condition of holiness is consecration. Consecration is not holiness; it is not sanctification; it is not perfect love; but there can be no sanctification, no holiness, no perfect love without it. "But," says our brother, "there is no regeneration without it." There is no regeneration without repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. But intelligent, deliberate consecration requires no little light and prayer and fasting. "Rex B." may be an old man; he may be a young man who attended the meeting with pencil and paper to write up, or rather to write down, the preacher, the meeting, and the doctrine. My hearing of Dr. C. and our dear brother's was different. It was my desire to see if he had found any new conditions of salvation from sin. The subject has been of deep concern, lo! these many years. He announced no new conditions. The way of salvation, as taught by our Lord and his apostles and the prophets of old, and as set forth in the sermons of Mr. Wesley and in his plain account of Christian perfection, were presented and pressed; the very same way of life and holiness as taught by Upham in his Interior Life, Life of Faith, and Divine Union. No new conditions—the same good old way, the way our fathers went. Repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ as conditions of pardon and regeneration and a living present trust for full salvation.

As to theories first, second, third, or hundredth, science, fables, theologies, or anything else which gets between the soul and God, or the soul and a perfect cure or full salvation, let them pass.

And, now, does not the experience of all who have fully followed the Lord accord with the views of Mr. Wesley as set forth in his sermon on sin or depravity in believers?—and does not his views in his masterly sermon on repentance of believers accord with our own consciousness? I know they harmonize with my experience. After my regeneration and acceptance and the clear witness of the Spirit, I sought and obtained a deeper work of grace, and my peace and joy were more settled and permanent. This blessing, this grace, was sought definitely, and definitely obtained. Glory be to God! It is not an unknown experience and blessing; and to my shame be it written, it has not been preached and witnessed as it ought to have been; and it is now a matter of joy that we have men who, in the face of opposition and persecution, are not ashamed to preach a present, personal, conscious and full salvation. Transplanted.

No man takes his first breath in the kingdom of God. When born, he is born in the world, and in the world will he ever live, unless transplanted into the kingdom of grace. I have no faith in the immaculate purity of our natural birth. Cradles do not hold cherubs, though all mothers think they do. I have seen as sure proof of anger, of obstinacy, of down-right meanness in a babe of six months as in an old man of seventy. Adam was not very old when he fell, and, believe me, mankind ever since has taken tumbles right out of a mother's arms.

Why, you may take the Bible throughout, and it is a sharp line drawing between the righteous and the wicked. The righteous are light, the wicked are darkness. The righteous are near by, the wicked are far off. The righteous are wheat, the wicked are tares. The righteous are trees, the wicked are chaff.

Transplanted, transplanted. That oak dug upon Carmel and set out again on the bank of the Jordan does not undergo near the change that the man or woman must undergo if ever set growing in the garden of God.

Why, where would Paul have been had he not been transplanted? A persecutor to the end of his days. He would have died with a whip in his hand, and on the same slab that holds the name of Herod and Charles IX. and Lucretia Borgia would his name have been cut as a hater of mankind. What would have become of John Bunyan if he had not been transplanted? He would have gone with soldering-iron over the country a wandering tinker, swearing at the pots and pans which he mended, and staggering up to every sloppy bar he could find.

Believe me, it is no slight change when a man is truly converted. It is walking out of midnight into midnoon. It is being pulled up out of the sinking sand and having feet placed on the solid rock. It is calling home a poor prodigal from the swine field, and giving him a ring and a robe and a kiss, and leading him into a banqueting hall all a-smell with wine and flowers, and all a-throb with the music which the angels pick off from the harp-strings.—H. T. Miller.

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations—these are the threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of the life that God approves.—F. W. Farrar, D. D.

Some people would never dream of praying for a baptism of the Holy Ghost if they knew what it means. A baptism of fire that will burn up all the dross is the last thing they want to see. It is no wonder that such prayers go unanswered.

"Our Sundays should be like hills in a journey, mounting which, now and then, we get enlarged views, and are lifted to a higher range, on which we catch divine sunrise, and whence we move on afresh, purer and braver for the kiss of the hem of the garment of God."

Every attempt to make others happy every sin left behind, every temptation trampled under foot, every step forward in the cause of what is good, is a step nearer the cause of Christ.—Dean Stanley.

Men who have a reputation of knowing their business have not wasted all their time in meddling with the business of other people.

We usually think of our greatest joy as in the past, our greatest worry as in the present, and our greatest achievement as just ahead.

When an unforgiving man prays the Lord's prayer, he slams the door of mercy in his own face.

The most dangerous explosive known may be made by mixing equal parts of religion and hate.

If you have anything to do, do it at once; do not wait till it is too late.

No man is too great to err, but many are too small to confess an error.

Domestic Missions.

From what I can learn, the criticisms passed on our Board of Missions will affect adversely the collections for this worthy purpose not a little this year. In view of which I wish to discourage the writing and publication of such articles through the columns of our paper. Reasons:

1. If the criticisms be true, it will do harm to our domestic missions, in that it will produce a spirit of distrust in the minds of our people in the wisdom and justice of our Board of Missions in the appropriations of their benefactions. For when you destroy the confidence of our people in the wisdom and integrity of the officers of our church, you will not only reduce their contributions to our domestic mission cause, but to all others in the same proportion.

2. Should the criticisms not be true, they will bring undeserved censure upon our brethren constituting the Board.

To remedy the evil? Let our brethren who feel that unwisdom is exercised, and injustice effected by the Board, appear before them in their sessions during our Annual Conference, and present their complaints and make their suggestions to the Board of Missions, who will gladly receive and consider any complaint or suggestion that they shall present. Should they refuse to entertain their deliverances, let them complain against said Board to the Conference, which, if found to be unfaithful, may be dissolved and a new Board appointed.

The Board can largely satisfy our brethren, that they have acted wisely and done justly in their proceedings by incorporating their appropriations to each charge in their annual report to the Conference, and showing the proportionate advance of those charges receiving liberal appropriations to those which receive meager ones.

The object of our domestic missions is to save the people. If it can be shown that a greater number of people can be, and are, saved by a liberal appropriation than by an equal division of the funds, regardless of the environments of the several works needing help, no doubt but that every contributor will heartily endorse the action of our Board. While, on the other hand, if an equal division of the fund among all charges receiving aid (so that each pastor may receive the same salary), results in an increased number being saved to that of large and small appropriations, doubtless the Board will unhesitatingly adopt the plan of equality of distribution. More anon.

Yours truly, J. N. TUCKER.

Take Time for the Bible.

As we drift along the swift, relentless current of time toward the end of life; as days and weeks and months and years follow each other in breathless haste, and we reflect now and then for a moment that, at any rate for us much of this earthly career has passed irrevocably; what are the interests, thoughts, aye, the hook, which really command our attention? What do we read and leave unread? What time do we give to the Bible? No other book, let us be sure of it, can equally avail to prepare us for that which lies before us; for the unknown anxieties and sorrows which are sooner or later the portion of most men and women; for the gradual approach of death; for the period, be it long or short, of waiting and preparation for the throne and face of the eternal Judge. Looking back from the world, how shall we desire to have made the most of our best guide to it! How shall we grudge the hours we have wasted on any—be they thoughts, or books, or teachers—which only belong to the things of time!—Canon Liddon.

Miserable Misunderstandings.

Oh, my dear friends, you who are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year; you who are keeping wretched quarrels alive because you can not quite make up your mind that now is the day to sacrifice your pride and kill them; you who are passing men sullenly upon the street, not speaking to them out of some silly spite, and yet knowing that it would fill you with shame and remorse if you heard that one of these men were dead to-morrow morning; you are letting your neighbor starve till you hear that he is dying of starvation; or letting your friend's heart ache for a word of appreciation or sympathy, which you mean to give some day—if you could know, and see, and feel, all of a sudden, that "the time is short," how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly, and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do!—Phillips Brooks.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Lisbon, La., Nov. 23: "We have had the last few days a very fine revival in our church at Arizona, of the Lisbon circuit. We expect another revival at Lisbon next week."

Rev. Geo. W. Huff, Vancleave, Miss., Nov. 22: "Vancleave circuit is in fine condition. God has blessed our people on this work during the year. We have received 44 members; have had 90 conversions, and all our claims are being paid. I am happy on the way, and ready to take any work the Bishop has for me."

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, P. C., Brooksville circuit, Nov. 23: "We are now closing up the third year of our ministry on this work. They have been years of blessings as well as of labors. We have a fine people. We have had fine meetings. Bros. L. A. McKeown, J. A. Bowen and W. T. Browning have rendered good service. They are men of God. We shall be able to make a full report, especially on the collections. We have built one new church which will be paid for in full."

Rev. I. T. Reamee, Girard, La., Nov. 23: "Rayville circuit has been blessed with six protracted meetings since the last session of the Annual Conference, at each of which some work was done for the Master in reviving the church and, I trust, saving some precious souls. Twenty-five persons have united with the church—some of whom were truly converted. Sixteen adults have been baptized, and eleven infants. Finances are far in arrears; but the sure promise is, 'The Lord will provide.' Pray for Zion 'in these ends of the earth.'"

Rev. M. G. Jenkins, Calhoun, La., Nov. 23: "We are closing our year's work on Calhoun charge preparatory to the Conference. In many respects we have had a gracious year. We are rejoiced to report a net gain of nearly 50 members, many of whom will prove of spiritual and financial strength to our church; especially may this be said of Calhoun, and in proof of which we would mention our very beautiful church recently built. We feel proud of the church and of the people who built it. Not only in this have they given evidence of their liberality, but they have remembered their minister by meeting all claims assessed them for the year, also presenting us with a very nice and beautiful suit for Conference. We feel very much endeared to the people of Calhoun circuit."

Rev. R. A. Meek, Hernando, Miss., Nov. 22: "We have just closed a most wonderful meeting here. I was assisted at the start by Rev. J. A. Leech, of the North Mississippi Conference. Rev. W. M. McIntosh arrived a few days later and did the preaching until the close. Consecrated, earnest and intensely practical, he is certainly a remarkable man. He believes God's Word, and is not afraid to put it to the test. He has a sympathetic, emotional nature—the first essential requisite of a great orator. He is a strong gospel preacher. Some say that he is not, but it is because they are deceived by the simplicity of his style. His appeals are simply irresistible. Results: There must have been at least 70 or 75 conversions and reclamations. Over 40 signified their intention of joining the church, a great work of grace was wrought among the church members, and a large number of family altars erected. When we began there was scarcely a person in the town who would talk to a penitent. Before we closed scores had enthusiastically enlisted in the work. They went out on the streets and faithfully labored for the Master. Despite the pressure of business, the stores were all closed for the day services. The attendance was large. The congregation could hardly be seated in the large courthouse the last night. Our thanks are due Bros. Morehead, Gordon and Jones for assistance rendered us. Blessed be the name of the Lord for this time of refreshing from his presence!"

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Nov. 21: "Our fourth Quarterly Conference for the Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, convened with Wesley Chapel last Saturday and Sunday, and with it came our very highly esteemed presiding elder, Dr. J. M. Weems, who preached three very fine sermons, which were very highly appreciated and enjoyed by those that heard them, some of whom are as intelligent and consecrated as you will find anywhere. His sermon on Sunday, at eleven o'clock, was very fine indeed, and will, doubtless, bring forth fruit to the glory of God and the upbuilding of the church. We are now closing our second year on the Warren circuit, and think, through the mercy of God, some good has been accomplished. We have received one hundred and eleven members into the church during the two years, and have made considerable improvement on the parsonage property. I am sorry to say we are considerably behind with our collections, and am afraid we will not be able to bring them up in full this time. Cotton is so low and times so hard, it is almost impossible to get it; but I will do the best I can. We have many good people, and some as good workers as I ever saw. May God graciously bless them all, and prosper them abundantly, is my prayer."

LOWER COAST MISSION.

This is my first year on this work. I found my people ruined by the terrible storm of Oct. 1, 1893; but they were not discouraged, though their new preacher was poor, and went to work to do their part toward his support, and out of their penury have done their part well. Truly this preacher's heart has been made to rejoice as he saw how these dear people, many times not knowing where the next meal was to be found, would put their nickels and dimes into God's treasury. A true preacher in charge, with the heart of Christ in him, could not fail to love them and be willing to be in want so he might not be too heavy a load upon their shoulders. My people were visited again with a storm and flood the night of the first of October, 1894, which rose in a few hours till about four feet deep, being ten inches deep in the parsonage. It was gone in a few hours; but it had swept every vestige of vegetable and field crop away, in many places destroying what had been gathered and housed, and hogs and chickens and cattle, etc., were drowned. Still my people do not complain, but thank God it is no worse. When the storm came we were in the midst of a protracted meeting, which only rested one day, and the meeting moved, getting more and more interesting under the very earnest Holy Ghost messages of Bros. W. T. Currie, of Ponchatoula, and Van Valkenburgh, of New Orleans. These two men are like flames of fire, both full of the Spirit of the Master, sanctified. Glory be to God! Now, I can truly say, I think I have the banner church of Louisiana. My people are earnest workers, and, though poor, are swarming besides the honey in the home gum. We have an extra fine Sunday-school at Daisy and two mission Sunday-schools, both supported and carried on by the old school; prayer meetings, holiness meeting, ladies' prayer meeting and children's prayer meeting. Ten have joined; some have been baptized during the year; some converted; many sanctified. God be praised! As an evidence of the spirit of this church, I will give one instance, which may be suggestive to some of the rich people in Louisiana as to Conference collections. One little girl, whose mother is dead, and whose father was very poor, asked permission of her stepmother to hire herself out a month to make something to pay. Result: She made two dollars and fifty cents, which she gave me for missions. Another, a young man whose father is very poor, told me he would work at night while his father was asleep and would hand me $1 for missions when I start to Conference. Glory to God for such workers!

God bless these people on the lower coast; and give them abundant success in their efforts to spread "scriptural holiness over these lands."

I Had Coltre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without falling. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

Indian Territory Affairs.

The Dawes Commission, appointed some time since to investigate Indian Territory affairs, has made its report to the Secretary of the Interior. We quote as follows:

A most deplorable and dangerous condition of affairs exists in the Territory, causing widespread alarm, and demanding most serious consideration. All the functions of the tribal governments have became powerless to protect the life or property rights of the citizen. The courts of justice have become helpless and paralyzed. Violence, robbery and murder are almost of daily occurrence, and no effective measures of restraint or punishment are put forth to suppress crime. Railroad trains are stopped and their passengers robbed within a few miles of populous towns, and the plunder carried off with impunity in the very presence of those in authority. A reign of terror exists, and barbarous outrages, almost impossible of belief, are enacted, and the perpetrators hardly find it necessary to shun daily intercourse with their victims. It is stated, as is thought truthfully, that there were fifty-three murders in one of these tribes during the month of September and the first twenty-four days of October last, and no one was brought in justice therefor. The tribal governments have fallen into the hands of able and cunning politicians, who administer them almost wholly in the interests of their own enterprises and holdings, and the real Indian participates but little in their management, except under the influence and direction of those who control public affairs, upon whom they are largely dependent, whose will they register at the polls, and with whose bidding they, in a large measure, comply without question. These men so in power oppose any change and ask only to be let alone.

The Commission also makes the following recommendation to the United States government; and we believe the suggestion will meet the hearty approval of good citizens of all sections. Let it be remembered that Indian Territory has an Indian population of only about fifty thousand, while its white population is estimated at two hundred and fifty thousand.

These tribal governments have wholly perverted their high trust, and it is the plain duty of the United States to enforce the trust it has so created, and recover for its original users the domain, and all the gains derived from the perversion of the trust, or discharge the trustees.

The United States also granted to these tribes the power of self-government not to conflict with the Constitution. They have demonstrated their incapacity so to govern themselves, and no higher duty can rest upon the government that granted this authority than to revoke it when it has so lamentably failed.

A prominent layman in our church has recently sent us eighteen dollars for subscriptions to the ADVOCATE. Another sends us a new subscriber, and in doing so says: "This is not doing much for the ADVOCATE; but if every subscriber would do as well, it would amount to a good deal. May God bless the ADVOCATE; it blesses me and mine." Another, in renewing his subscription, says: "I am much pleased with the ADVOCATE. I hope you will continue the fight against the gamblers until this dealing in futures is killed by law. It does the people ten thousand times more harm than the Louisiana Lottery ever did."

Infidel Sophistry.

The most learned and astute of the apostles of infidelity have seen that the evidences of the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament writings are such that their credibility can not possibly be overthrown by the weapons employed in attacking the credibility of other histories. They have admitted that but for the miraculous nature of the facts narrated, and the religious system therein taught, the veracity of these writings would never have been questioned. It became necessary to construct a new weapon. David Hume was the inventor, manufacturer and patentee of a weapon with which he claimed to be able to demolish Christianity as easily as Jericho was demolished by the blasts of

JOSHUA'S RAM'S HORN TRUMPET.

Let us examine this famous weapon and see what its destructive capabilities are. Hume's argument is in substance this: "It is contrary to experience that a miracle should be performed. It is not contrary to experience that men should lie. Hence, if any number of men should testify that they had witnessed a miracle, it is more reasonable to believe that these men are guilty of falsehood, than that the miracle was really performed." Now, what does Hume mean by saying that "a miracle is contrary to experience"? He can not mean that it is contrary to universal experience, for that would be assuming the very point to be proved—a logical fallacy, which a philosopher scarcely would be guilty of. He must mean that it is contrary to his own experience. Very well, we readily grant that Hume never witnessed a miracle. But because a miracle is "contrary to his experience" does it therefore follow that it is contrary to every other man's experience. Let us apply this principle to other matters besides miracles, and see how it works. The principle is this: No amount of testimony can substantiate any fact that is contrary to our own experience. Some English sailors once told the King of Siam that in their country water became so hard at certain seasons of the year that men and horses could travel over the surface of ponds, etc.

THE KING DENOUNCED THEM

as liars. Now if there is any force in Hume's argument, was not the King right? It was contrary to his experience that water should congeal; no such phenomenon had ever been witnessed in his country. It was not contrary to his experience that men should lie. Hence he concluded it is more reasonable to believe that these Englishmen are lying, than to believe that water freezes. The Siamese monarch was satisfied with his conclusion; but did his logic disturb the reign of the Ice King in his wide-spread arctic realm? In like manner our Scotch metaphysician builds a tower to enable the sons of men to climb to the heaven of skepticism and there lie down to sweet repose upon its summit, confident that his experience is the limit of human achievement and the measures of nature's possibilities. But does nature, therefore, cease to make new revelations to the patient searcher after truth? Does science stop her triumphal march lest the rumble of her chariot wheels should disturb the slumbers of some dreaming fool or castle-building philosopher of a past age? Are we not daily witnesses of ten thousand things that are contrary to the experience of Hume and of all men of past ages? If Hume were now living, and were to act upon the principle enunciated in this famous anti-miracle argument, he would deny the existence of the telephone, the phonograph, the spectroscope, the electric light and a hundred other inventions of our day—that is, until he could see them himself. His argument does not require him to deny even a miracle if he should himself witness it; but it does require him to disbelieve anything contrary to his experience that he has not subjected to the test of his own senses, no matter how much testimony be adduced. Accordingly if he had been alive a few years since, when the newspapers were teeming with accounts of the wonderful operations of the newly invented phonograph, he would have said:

"IT IS CONTRARY TO MY EXPERIENCE

that a piece of tinfoil should utter articulate sounds. It is not contrary to my experience that men should lie. Hence, I will not believe in the existence of the phonograph until I see it with my own eyes." According to this principle no man has a right to believe in the existence of the telephone until he himself witness its operations. A thousand men of tried integrity and unimpeachable veracity might testify that they had seen it, but it would be more reasonable to believe that they were all guilty of wilful falsehood, without any motive than that anything should occur that is contrary to our experience. And this from a philosopher! From such philosophers, good Lord, deliver us! Starker nonsense never emanated from the lips of a lunatic. The whole civilized world recognizes it as a fact, that human testimony is by far the most prolific and one of the most reliable of all our sources of knowledge. Of course, human testimony is sometimes false. No one ever denied that bad men sometimes bear false witness. But society has certain criteria by which it tests the value of testimony, accepting the good and rejecting the bad; and after these tests have been applied society always proceeds upon the assumption that human testimony is true. The verdicts of our juries, the sentences of our courts, upon what basis do they rest? On what ground does

THE JURY BRING IN ITS VERDICT

of guilty against the prisoner at the bar? By what warrant does the judge tear that so-called criminal away from the endearments of home, the society of a loving wife and affectionate children, and shut him up in a felon's gloomy cell, or consign him to a criminal's dishonored grave? Is it not the action of both judge and jury based upon their faith in human testimony. Indeed the reliability of human testimony is the chief corner-stone of the temple of justice; the very foundation on which the whole fabric of jurisprudence rests. Destroy man's faith in human testimony, and you silence the voice of the barrister, you you overturn the temple of justice, you stop the machinery of government, you open the doors of our prisons and deluge the world with fiends in human shape, you produce a state of anarchy which the human race could not long survive. Moreover, how do we know that beyond the briny deep there is a vast continent? That on that continent there are such countries as China, Japan, England, etc. How do I know that in those countries there are such cities as London, Paris, etc. And how do I know anything about the climate, soil, resources, productions, etc., of those countries and manners, customs, etc., of the inhabitants? How do I know that such personages as Alexander, Cæsar, Napoleon, Washington, etc., ever lived? I have never seen these persons or places. Whence do I get this knowledge? Solely from human testimony. Deny the reliability of human testimony, and you blot out "at one fell swoop" nine hundred and ninety hundredths of all our knowledge and prevent the very possibility of civilization or high intellectual development. The common sense of mankind recognizes the fact that human testimony is competent to establish not only ordinary events, but also things the most wonderful, the most directly contrary to all our preconceived opinions and our past experiences.

And yet the skeptic has the audacity to parade himself before the world as the champion of reason. He will have you understand that he is a rationalist. Reason, indeed! Hume's famous argument can no more stand the test of common sense than a snowflake could retain its crystal form in the blast of Nebuchadnezzar's furnace. Human testimony is competent to establish facts contrary to all our past experiences. The miracles of Jesus Christ, then resting on the adamantine pillars of human testimony, will challenge the attention and command the faith of millions of the best and purest of our race thousands of ages after the transparent sophistry of Hume and the scurrilous wit of Ingersoll shall have been forgotten.

Our Superannuates.

Some of the knighliest souls that ever wielded "a two-edged blade of heavenly temper keen" now lie beneath the sod, who might still have lived and borne the blood-stained banner in the thickest of the fight had the church only given them rest and a support during a short period of ill-health. Who is there that can not point to the graves where sleep these martyrs to overwork—these victims of ecclesiastical niggardliness? And who can restrain his tears as he contemplates their sad fate, and remembers that others of our bravest and best are now traveling the same well-beaten path to a premature grave? Men continue to work when utterly unable to do so for the reason that they can not afford to rest. They have nothing to live upon while they rest. There is an upward tendency in some of our Conferences as to this matter, but there is still vast room for improvement. Let the good work go on. Let us make provision for the decent, comfortable support of the toil-worn and battle-scarred veterans who, though they "rest from their loved employ," still bless us with their wise counsel and their words of cheer.

A New Church.

A new church has come into existence as a result of a schism in the United Evangelical Church. The schism grew out of flagrant usurpation of power on the part of two of the Bishops of the church—Esher and Bowman—who claimed and exercised the power to suspend or expel members and preachers without trial, to divide Annual Conferences, and organize new ones without regard to the wishes of the Conferences themselves. The Conferences affected by these high-handed proceedings sought redress through the courts of the State of Pennsylvania. The Supreme Court—so the dispatches state—declared these proceedings unwarranted by the law of the church, and yet decided the case in favor of the party in power, although the winners in the suit are required to pay the costs. Thereupon sixty-one thousand members, comprising a decided majority of the church, seceded and set up for themselves. A General Conference was called, which met on the twenty-ninth of November. Three Bishops—Dubs, Haman and Stanford—go with the seceders. Episcopal prerogatives will be clearly defined in the Constitution of the new church.

Municipal Reform.

The cause of municipal reform moves gloriously on. In January of the present year a convention of the friends of non-partisan municipal reform was held in Philadelphia. The result of that convention was the organization of the National League for Municipal Reform. Local branches of this league have been organized in all sections of the country. The results have been almost marvelous. Men of all political parties and almost all ecclesiastical creeds seem all at once to have realized the folly and the wickedness of being driven by a party lash into the support of a municipal ticket which represents the very worst element of American society. In New York and in Chicago the reform ticket has been elected by a handsome majority. If reform can be wrought out in so short a time in these great centers of iniquity, then there is no room for despair anywhere. All that is needed in order to have decent, honest municipal government everywhere is earnest, organized effort on the part of the best element of society. This is the lesson which the people are learning. This mighty awakening to the responsibilities of citizenship is one of the happiest omens of the times, and should be a cause of profound gratitude to Almighty God on the part of all pious people.

In both Mississippi and Louisiana there is an organized movement for the encouragement of immigration from the Northwest. The plan contemplates the circulation of pamphlets descriptive of the resources of this section among the farmers of the Northwest. This section possesses vast advantages over many of the Northern and Western States in soil, climate and variety of agricultural products. To advertise the natural resources of our section is unquestionably the surest method of accomplishing the end in view. The great railroads traversing this section promise to do all in their power to aid in the distribution of literature.

The true utility of real scholarship in the Christian ministry is to so simplify the great theme of Christ and his redemption that every hearer shall at once feel that there is a sweet and tender message for him. This is the grand secret of the mighty success of the apostles and early preachers.

It is said that a movement is on foot for a large increase in the number of cotton factories in the South. This is a common-sense movement. Why pay freight on cotton to New England, to have it made into such fabrics as the world wants, when the facilities for manufacturing are really better in the South than in New England?

We publish on another page a letter from Sister Lambuth in regard to the industrial school which she has upon her heart. For the next few months the "future gamblers" will use a vast amount of printers' ink in trying to make the people believe that their business raises instead of lowering the price of cotton, and that it is vastly beneficial to legitimate business of all kinds. That is exactly the claim that was made by the Louisiana Lottery, and it is the claim that is made the world over by the advocates of the saloon. Look out for an abundance of that sort of rot in newspapers all over the land. And it would not be surprising if these papers should make a few converts among people who are supposed to be sensible. If some disinterested (?) patriot should advocate the theory that the best way to keep water is to pour it into a sieve, no doubt he would make some converts.

In his address at the golden wedding Dr. Walker stated that he has been in the itinerant ministry fifty-eight years. During that time he has preached more than eight thousand sermons. He has preached three hundred and fifty times during the last four years. He came to New Orleans forty-three years ago. Then was then no railroad connecting this city with other cities. There were no street cars. Omnibuses were scarce, and their use was quite expensive. The population of the city has more than doubled since that time. Every Methodist Church in the city has been either built or rebuilt during that period. The golden wedding was a grand ovation, which must have been exceedingly gratifying to the Doctor and his good wife.

During the General Conference at Memphis two or three efforts were made to effect an organization of Southern Methodist editors, with a view of having annual meetings. Owing to the amount of committee work to be done, the effort proved abortive. When Dr. Hoss, in a recent issue of the Nashville Advocate, suggested a convention of Southern Methodist editors, we supposed his suggestion looked to a permanent organization such as was talked of at the General Conference. The last issue of the Nashville shows that the Doctor's purpose is a very different one. We are free to say that we fear that the object which the Doctor has in view will not be accomplished by any convention that can be held. Still, if the brethren of the tripod desire to meet in convention, we will try to be on hand. We wish, however, to nominate Chattanooga, instead of Nashville, as the place of meeting, it being, in our judgment, more easy of access to a majority of those who will attend. We hope Dr. Hoss will not insist on having it at his own door.

"I Beg the Church for Help."

Ten days ago a telegram came from Bishop Galloway—"Send Hearn." Bro. Hearn and wife, who were waiting orders, were sent to the front. To-day a letter reaches us, written from Soochow, China, the seat of the Conference, calling for three men besides Hearn. Two are needed to fill gaps made by sickness. Three men must be sent. An emergency is upon us. The Mission has been greatly depleted, but never has the work been so promising. Two of our churches seem in a constant state of revival. The numerical increase in membership is astonishing. The harvest in the China Mission has come. There is nothing to fear from the war. It has not disturbed our own field. On the contrary, the older missionaries of all missions say this is "the hour of great opportunity." Unseen forces are moving the empire. God is in the movement. The people are turning to the missionaries as their best friends and helpers. This is no time for a policy of inaction. The church that remains within winter-quarters is past. Let us go up to the battle, for the Lord is with us.

Forty-five hundred dollars are needed to equip three married men. One thousand each for salary, and five hundred for expense of travel. This must be raised in addition to the regular collections. It can not be resolved this year by appropriation. Who will be the first to assume, in part or in whole, the support of a missionary? Let free-will offerings be made at once.

BISHOP GALLOWAY'S LETTER.

DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: The China Mission Conference has just closed its ninth session, and this completes the forty-ninth year of the China Mission of the M. E. Church, South. In every respect, except in the number of foreign laborers in the field, this has been the most successful year in the history of the Mission. After nearly half a century of sowing in tears we are beginning to reap in joy. The long night of weeping is succeeded by the dawn of a hopeful morning. About 135 were added to the church, and 199 probationers, though on account of revised register the net gain will not be so large. We have now 493 members and 497 probationers, a total of 900 as against 736 last year. All things considered, this is not only a hopeful showing, but a grand achievement. The offerings of the native Christians have also substantially advanced—$596 39 being reported as against $139 69 last year. The contributions for missions were $678 60, the year before $559 91. Four deacons were ordained and five elders, all natives except one. One promising young man was admitted on trial. Anglo-Chinese College and Buffington Institute were well attended. The latter being enlarged in order to accommodate the increasing number of applicants for admission. All the preachers gave cheering accounts of their several fields. The hospital register shows the largest number of patients in its history, and D. Hart, who has charge in the absence of Dr. Park, gave an admirable report of the year's work. The noble women, here under appointment of the Woman's Board, are unwearied in toil for their Lord. Their annual meeting has been a joyous occasion, and all return with braver hearts for the work of another year. I shall take pleasure in submitting to the church a full report of observations made, from the smallest day school up to the Institute and the Hospital. This last, under the management of Dr. Anne Walter, has made advance upon previous year, and is commanding influential support.

What is needed, and urgently needed, is an increase of laborers. Our ranks have been so much depleted that we have no men to fill the stations already opened, and are stopped from enterprising work in places that promise immediate and large results. The immediate return of Bro. Hendry to America, on account of feeble health, is a sore bereavement to the Mission, and a great affliction to him. He has had remarkable success at Nanzing. In a few years that work has developed from nothing into two congregations, several schools, a church membership of thirty-two, and the growing sympathy of the community. It is hoped that six or eight months at home will reinvigorate his health and return him to the field where he is so much needed. I beg the church for help just now. Great changes are likely to result from this war. The oldest and wisest on the field are agreed on this judgment. I fear the church will not be ready for them. We must have men here studying the language, acquainting themselves with the people, and being equipped for a great advance movement. Three or four men should come at once. The war has not much disturbed the section where our mission is planted. But in any event let the men come forward. There will be not only toleration, but respect and welcome for missionaries, as a result of this war, so they think. Now is the day for aggressive action. I believe that content means conquest; but we must have soldiers, well armed, not mere well wishers. Seven thousand miles away—as a man in the life-saving service of a great nation, reporting a wreck on a stormy coast, said he rendered all the assistance he could by means of his speaking trumpet; no wonder all went down beneath the waves. Shall the church thus fill with human souls? We can not save China by a speaking trumpet on the other side of the ocean. O God, plead thine own cause.

DR. SAWYER'S ADDRESS.

DOCTOR: We have been deputed by your brethren of our ministry in this city to present to you their token of esteem and affection, of no very great money value perhaps, yet freighted with our best love for you and your worthy helpmeet. Peculiarly favored of God with splendid natural endowments, gracious opportunities of cultivation and thorough development, coupled with a long life of activity beneath our genial Southern skies, we behold you, not "in the sere and yellow leaf," but possessed of a heart as young as the youngest, a disposition as sunny as our own bright clime, a mind stored with the wisdom of years and a spirit mellowed, sanctified and ripened into the rounded fullness of a perfect Christian character. All that we might any of us aspire to be we find you to be, and we heartily hail you on this jubilee of your marriage to this Christian lady, who shares with you the honors of to-day. The half-century gone has brought you both a varied experience of sunshine and shade, of gladness and sadness, yet with the sufficient grace of your covenant-keeping God running as a golden thread of strength and beauty throughout it all. We may well believe that the hand of the loving Father has been with you all the way, and that he will continue to guide you with his eye and afterwards receive you into glory. Your dear wife's thoughts as your own, and both ever upon the line of the Divine will, your united life and ministry of peace has been, under God, a bringer of life to multitudes of souls and a blessed benediction to your day and generation. Among my first memories of church service are the very tones and words even in which your clarion call was made upon the assembled hundreds who thronged your ministry. None can estimate the good you and Sister Walker have done since the hour your hands were joined as man and wife and your hearts and lives were blended into one. May you be spared many years to the church of God in this city; but, surely, when you do go home at last to your well-earned reward, not at all a stranger there, you will be greeted by scores and thousands of souls saved through your instrumentality. May you both remain with us for yet a goodly while, and may we all follow you as you two are following Christ! Accept these tokens of our highest esteem and unfeigned love.

REMARKS OF DR. AHRENS.

Am grateful to God, dear Bro. and Sister Walker, for the privilege of participating in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of your marriage. In behalf of the Methodist preachers in our city, as a token of their affection, I present to you the chairs which you are occupying. But do not misconstrue our intention. They are not tacit monitors of the advisability of retiring from the scenes of ministerial activity. You know as well as I do, that attempted rest without previous weariness produces only ennui. We want you to repose in these chairs after the day's toil, at eventide, watching the sun sinking in a cloudless sky, listening to the lowing of the returning herds and to the good-night carol of the mocking-bird in a near tree. Reclining on these cushions I want you, Sister Walker, with merry twinkle in your eye, read to your spouse the well-known poem: "John Anderson, my Joe—John;" while you, dear Doctor, give to your beloved wife the outline of your last sermon on "Faithfulness unto Death."

I deem myself happy because of repeated opportunity of observing your beautiful lives—lives almost paradisical. There were two hearts beating in unison; two intellects entertaining one thought. Always admired your mutual solicitude for each other's well-being. That solicitude did not only embrace reputation, but also bodily prosperity. Useless are the fairest gifts of intellect, in vain are high station and fame, if the body is languishing and pining. You did not deem it beneath yourselves to be concerned about hygienic habitation, proper wearing apparel and wholesome diet. Have often thought, that, if less attention were paid to parlor, and more to the kitchen, there would be less widowhood.

I've also found in observing your lives, that you were constitutionally cheerful, always looking at the bright side of everything, being habitually optimistic. An inevitable prerequisite to longevity. The moan of the owl and the hissing of the serpent were not the themes for your conversation. You loved to speak of the sweet melody of the nightingale and the fragrance of the flowers. To a preacher a cheerful wife is a great boon. Daily he comes in contact with indigence, suffering, distress. The waywardness of some church members afflicts him. But the smile and encouragement of an affectionate wife dispel all clouds. Even when the sermon proved a failure—having left out what we had specially prepared—wife laughs at our depression, assuring us that the sun had not been extinguished nor that the flowers ceased blooming.

Of course, I repeatedly admired your charming home life. Yes, home is what we make it. No matter how humble, we can make it the dearest spot on earth. Here your theory and practice were in harmony. The cares of business, the worry of office should remain at the place of business and in office. When the threshold of our home is crossed, the heart is light, the countenance full of sunshine, the mouth abounds with praises of loveliness greeting the eye. Wife does not meet husband with dolorous recital of illness, disappointment, bad servants, lack of money, etc. Both wisely regard each other's feeling, reciprocating consideration and attention. To make each other happy in their chief aim. This is no fancy sketch. Such was your home.

May we—perhaps selfishness is enlisted in the wish—may we be privileged to celebrate your "diamond wedding," twenty-five years hence! . . . I conclude with extending to you most cordial congratulations.

Married.

A most pleasing event occurred in the town of Quitman, Miss., Tuesday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Nov. 27, 1894. Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, late of Japan, but now a transfer to the Mississippi Conference, and Miss Mary Terrell, daughter of Judge H. S. Terrell, were united in matrimony by Rev. T. B. Holloman, assisted by Rev. D. P. Bradford. The occasion was one of great interest in the little town where the beautiful and popular bride was reared, and all were agreed that the young minister has chosen wisely indeed for this momentous event. May God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost bless, protect and keep them! T. B. H.

THE CHRISTIAN SANCTIFIED BY THE LORD'S PRAYER. By the Author of "The Hidden Life of the Soul." Translation from the French. Pages 118, bound in white leatherette. Price, 25 cents, post-paid. Published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

This is a very beautiful devotional commentary of the Lord's Prayer, written a hundred years ago by that godly Frenchman, Pere Grou. It contains eleven chapters of instructions, remarkable for their directness, thoroughness and simplicity. Indeed, the author appears to have been one of those rare spirits to whom it is given to discover in solitude and prayer things hidden from others. We feel that all who love the Lord's Prayer will welcome this remarkable exposition of its several petitions and will find it an aid to a higher and holier life. The cheapness of the little book ought to insure for it a wide circulation.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible
FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.]

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. HOME CIRCLE.

A SHORT SERMON.

BY ALICE CARY.

Children who read my lay,
This much I have to say:
Each day, and every day
Do what is right!
Right things in great and small;
Then, though the sky should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars, and all,
You shall have light.

This further I would say:
Be you tempted as you may,
Each day, and every day,
Speak what is true!
True things in great and small;
Then, though the stars should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars, and all,
Heaven would show through.

Figs, as you see and know,
Do not of thistles grow;
And though the blossoms blow
White on the tree,
Grapes never, never yet
On the limbs of thorns were set;
So, if you a good would get,
Good you must be.

Life's journey through and through,
Speaking what is just and true,
Doing what is right to do
Unto one and all,
When you work and when you play,
Each day, and every day;
Then peace shall gild your way,
Though the sky should fall.

The Light-House.

Comte wished to describe the God he believed in, and listen to the words: "The continuous resultant of all the forces capable of voluntarily concurring in the universal perfectioning of the world." I am sure we all shall know that being the very next time we meet him.

Oh, how tired I am of this everlasting talk about a philosophy that is going to hound the Almighty out of the universe! One would think from their pretensions that these skeptics were the makers and owners of the world, and that God is but a vagabond tenant, suffered to have a place in it only by their exceeding forbearance.

Away with their teachings. You must not be caught by them. From first to last they are only snares. Never did fowler in fields of Palestine spread his net more slyly for sparrows and larks than these skeptics on our day are spreading their infidelity to catch your feet and mine. Be careful where you step. That book you are reading may curse you with everlasting doubt. That magazine you are taking may be the flight of a pestilence on the wings of the months. Those lectures you are hearing may damn your soul forever. Be careful. Don't take any risks.

I tell you no greater compliment can be given a young man than to say he has the Word of God abiding in him. There is no knowledge like this the world through. It is better than Shakespeare, better than Dickens, better than Bellamy, better than all other books you can bring—the Word of God! Voltaire—I care nothing about his genius; it is enough for me that he hated the Bible. Bolingbroke—I care nothing about his polish; it is enough for me that he ridiculed this blessed Word. Robert Ingersoll—I care nothing about his oratory; it is enough for me; and young man, young woman, it should be enough for you that with sooty fingers he blackens these white pages.

Yonder west, southwest, off the Isle of Mull, stands the Skerryvore Light-house. There is great need that it be built, for in forty years forty ships have gone down on the hungry beach. Commencing the work, it was only by almost superhuman effort that a foothold could be gained in the rock. With a pound of three tons to the foot the waves hammered on the reef, and only after six years of building was the structure run up. Here comes a vessel making for the harbor. It is midnight, and the wind is blowing right on shore with the sweep of a hurricane.

"Up," you say, "with wicks the highest, and set the lanterns to revolving." But I get a hammer, I slip it into my pocket; I slyly creep up the winding stairs; I break the glass, and filling lungs the fullest, blow out the light. What do you think of me? You think me a wretch; you think me a villain. Yes, and so do I think that man a wretch and that man a villain who in any way touches this Word of God.

Why, what is this world? Only a great ship, loaded with thirteen hundred millions of passengers, through storm and rock and midnight trying to make harbor of heaven. That we may know where to steer, God has set off from shore this light of his truth. Most brightly does it shine, and that person—I care not what his name, I care not what his gifts—who tries to blow out this light does a thing so contemptible that for him I have no respect.

O, young man, you want to cling to this Book! Let others go, but hold on to this one. What was it that your father believed in to the last. You say, This Bible. What was it your mother clung to until the very day she went up to glory? You say, This Bible. Very well. A book that was good enough for them to live and die by is good enough for you to live and die by, world to the end, and surrender it you must not.—H. T. Miller.

Our Young Men.

Numbers of young men make a mistake. They imagine that no one notices them, or cares how they act. Others of them look at life and the community differently. They realize that to succeed and have their services in demand they must attend closely to their business, watch the interests of their employers and be careful of their associates.

This latter class are the ones who succeed. They have taken the right view, and improve every moment of their lives. When a vacancy occurs in any line of business it is from their ranks that it will be filled, for the community has judged them while they were unconscious of it.

No young man can make a greater mistake than to think that his daily actions are not watched and his merit and demerit not passed upon. Young men, if you wish to succeed in life, if you wish to enjoy the respect and confidence of the people among whom you live, remember that you yourselves are the standards by which you will be judged. The thriftless, careless, indolent young man is not wanted—his actions and his associates will have much to do with his success or failure in life.

The young men who are ambitious, who are manly, who are honest, who are sober and industrious, are the ones who are never idle, but who can always find employment at good salaries. Remember, young men, that your future depends upon your present actions, and do not make the mistake of thinking that the older people are not posted as to your habits. You are watched, and you need not be surprised if you are sometimes underestimated from your own standpoint. Live so that your services will always be in demand, and rest assured that by doing so you will never regret it when you have grown old. Let your aim be high and your daily lives above suspicion, feeling assured that as you conduct yourselves so will you be judged.—Yazoo City Herald.

The Value of Civility.

There would be fewer broken friendships, fewer unhappy unions and family quarrels, were it not so much the custom among intimate friends and relations to neglect the small courtesies of life. It is the foundation of misery in marriage, and many a serious and life-long estrangement has begun, not from want of affection so much as from lack of that delicate and instinctive appreciation of the feelings of others which makes a person shrink from saying unpleasant things or finding fault, unless absolutely obliged, and in any case to avoid wounding the offender's sense of dignity, or stirring up within him feelings of opposition and animosity; for although many persons profess to be above taking offense at honest censure, and even seem to court criticism, yet it must be very carefully administered not to be unpalatable. Even kind and generous actions are often so uncouthly performed as to cause the recipient more pain than pleasure, while a reproof or denial may be so sweetened by courtesy as almost to do away with any sense of mortification or disappointment. Good breeding is always inclined to form a favorable judgment, and to give others the credit of being actuated by worthy motives. It does not wish or seem to know more about people than they themselves desire should be known, but it is always prepared, when necessary, to take an interest in the affairs of others, while self is not suffered to obtrude unduly.—The Baptist Weekly.

The Christian Home.

Between the young life and the temptations of an evil world God has set the Christian home. Can anything be more pitiful than that this home should open its doors to temptation, letting the poisonous atmosphere of unnatural excitement banish the sweet serenity that should breathe through it. There is not a community where half a dozen determined Christian households, working together, might not bring about any social reform they thought desirable in their own circle, and such homes would be sanctuaries of blessing to all coming within their influence. Why not unite to keep up a round of informal, simple home receptions; for reading, for study, for entertainment—for anything rational that shall make prominent the idea of mutual helpfulness, and the fact that we are in this world for growth and education and advance, and not as simple, irresponsible pleasure-seekers.—Emily Huntington Miller.

The World's Tribute to Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

World's Fair Medal and Diploma awarded to Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

HYGIENE.

Your Stomach.

The happy, healthy man has no stomach, or lungs, or liver, or nerves, so far as he knows. The machinery runs smoothly. There is neither friction nor racket, squeaking nor rattling. The stomach goes on and does its business and behaves itself, and there is no nonsense about it. But there are not many persons in this condition. Stomachs are abused and ill-treated, wronged and oppressed, and many a stomach groans and murmurs and rebels at the usage it receives.

There are stomachs which are not half their natural size, their owners being so girded and belted in childhood that their stomachs do not grow and become sufficiently capacious for the purpose designed. Most women at the age of thirty or forty are not as large about the stomach as they were at the age of ten or twelve. They have grown everywhere else, but there in that most vital organ, where all the food is digested, where the nourishment for the system is prepared, everything stands still; there is neither progress, growth nor health.

Then stomachs are overloaded with food which can not be digested. They are pickled with brine; they are tanned with tea; they are peppered and salted; they are scalded with hot drinks; they are distended with hot swash; they are filled up with a conglomerate mass, which is swallowed without chewing, and washed down with a flood of drink, until the indigestible mass lies day after day until it rots and becomes as sour as a swill barrel, thus generating gases which, if not promptly belched up, work through the whole system, and fill it with discomfort and disease. The poisonous acids which are developed from this rotten food, pass through the bowels, irritating and excoriating them, poisoning the alimentary canal, and filling the system with pain and death. Often the abuse of the stomach is so great that poisonous humors floating through the system concentrate as upon the weakest point, and then comes scirrhous swellings, and incurable cancer of the stomach, as the result of years of outrage and abuse.

A few words of advice to people who have stomachs, and who wish to treat them right:

1. Do not let any band, ligature, binding or corset press upon the stomach. Let everything worn about the stomach be as large as you can possibly make the waist when sitting down unclothed after a full meal, and drawing in a long breath. Let no garments hang from the waist or be fastened around the stomach. Let everything be suspended from the shoulders.

2. Do not swallow food whole. Let it be mashed, crushed, ground and chewed until it is fine, and is thoroughly mixed with the saliva from the mouth.

3. Do not fill the stomach with hot swash and think that you have filled it with food. A cup of coffee and crust of bread in the morning gives a man a wonderful feeling of fullness and strength, and leaves him about ten o'clock with an all-gone feeling that calls for a mug of lager or a glass of whisky.

4. Do not tan the stomach. The tanning element which tans leather exists largely in tea; and there are persons whose stomachs seemed to be tanned with this solution. A tanned stomach does not possess great digestive powers, nor does it minister to the health of its owner.

5. Do not blister the stomach with spices, stimulants and condiments; do not pickle it with salt and brine. Do not put into your stomach a mass of food which if it were spread on the outside would draw a blister within twenty-four hours. Many diseases of the stomach would be promptly relieved by following this prescription: Put nothing into the stomach that you would be unwilling to put for a poultice on a raw sore. Bland, mild, innocent substances, which make good blood, will heal many an abused, diseased and disordered stomach.—Exchange.

STEWED BEEF WITH TOMATOES.—Bury the meat in a stew-pan with the tomatoes, and add a small onion chopped finely. Season with pepper and salt, a dash of cayenne improves it, and assists digestion. Add bits of butter rolled in floor. Cook until meat is done, and the tomatoes reduced to pulp. It may be made of cold roast beef, or veal.—Selected.

And conditions in life are liable at times, to need an invigorating Tonic; a Regulator of the natural, periodical function, and a Soothing and Bracing Nervine. For this purpose is the only medicine so certain in its curative action that it can be guaranteed. Your money is returned if it does not cure.

In Maidenhood, Womanhood, and Motherhood, it invigorates and braces up the exhausted, run-down, overworked and delicate; allays and banishes all Nervous Weakness, Fits, Spasms, Hysteria, Chorea, or St. Vitus's Dance; corrects all unnatural irregularities of monthly function and cures Periodical Pains, Weaknesses, Bearing Down Sensations, Backache, Catarrhal Inflammation, Ulceration and kindred maladies.

For those about to become mothers, it is a priceless boon, for it lessens the pains and perils of childbirth, shortens labor and the period of confinement, and promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

From Mrs. Lambuth.

MR EDITOR: Please accept best thanks for the check calling for $5 from the good brother in Greenfield, Tenn., Nov. 14, 1894, and let him know that his timely gift is gladly received, and will, ere long, start on its journey Japan-ward. Also please mention in your excellent ADVOCATE that the sum of $8 60 from Mr. Richard T. Jones, Greenwood, Miss., as a Sunday-school offering, has been received for the Kobo Female School-house. From Missouri there has come a donation of $8, donated by some good sisters at Corder, Mo., making a sum of $21.60 to add to our building fund. A part of former contributions has gone on to Japan, and as soon as other amounts promised come in, we will get all off to begin their work.

A letter from Bro. Towson said, "The house ought to go up soon." It can not without the building material. Bishop Galloway has written so kindly of the school and its needs that I am hoping for a speedy completion of our collections.

Besides this, a new treaty having been made between Japan and the United States of America, will make it more possible to have and to hold properly; and we desire to be behind none in forwarding our dear Master's kingdom on this earth, which, to some of us, is rapidly coming nearer and nearer the heavenly one, for the years are making the filling of a web that will, ere long, be cut from the loom of this life, and go with us into the land where inspections and approvals will make us more than rewarded for all efforts to do and to carry a share in the grandest and best of works for Jesus.

With much appreciation of the ADVOCATE, and best thanks for all kindnesses, Sincerely and gratefully,

M. I. LAMBUTH.

The Work in China.

The following is an extract from a private letter to "Gilderoy" from Rev. W. W. Wadsworth, who is traveling with Bishop Galloway in the far East. This letter, like those of Bishop Galloway, should have the effect to quicken the conscience of the church on the subject of foreign missions.

Our work in Japan is important, but more so here, and the immediate outlook much more encouraging. It has never had a popular tide, is on a sound basis, and will steadily grow. The church at home must be stirred, and the workers here doubled at once. The Board must send out the men, and do much more for this field than it has ever done. If the war should end in sweeping away the present dynasty, it is impossible to conceive what it would mean to the cause of missions. In any event China will be compelled to enter upon a new era in her history. It almost makes me sick when I think of the present opportunity and increase, and of the possible opportunity of the next few years, and then look at our feeble little band of workers. Put your pen and voice to work and help to wake up the church!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were passed by the fourth Quarterly Conference of North Kemper circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, in behalf of our beloved presiding elder, Rev. D. A. Little:

Resolved, That we deeply sympathise with him in his afflictions.

Resolved, That his absence from us in our Quarterly Conferences is deeply regretted and a great disappointment indeed.

Resolved, That we earnestly hope and desire that he may be restored to his health, and spared to his family and the church for many years.

Resolved, That we, as a Quarterly Conference, covenant together to remember our afflicted brother at a throne of grace, that God's grace may be sufficient for him, and that his "afflictions, though they seem severe, may prove to be in mercy sent;" and, further, that these afflictions may work out for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; that they may be the means of drawing his entire family nearer to God, and prove a benediction to them all.

F. B. ORMOND, P. C.
S. J. CREEKMORE, Sec'y.

Union Ridge, Miss.

For soul-winning wisdom watch Jesus. Never was a fisher of men so timely, so tactful, so tender. But though tender, he was faithful, and a faithful physician does not spare. When he saw that the Samaritan woman did not realize her condition, he did not hesitate to probe to the plague spot in her soul, and show it to her. He might have spared her feelings at the expense of her soul; he chose to spare her soul at the expense of her feelings.

Mr. P. D. D. Delecroix, Cypremort P. O., La. Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

MATTHEWS—EUPHRATES MATTHEWS, son of Henry K. and Frances J. Matthews, was born at Water Valley, Miss., Aug. 24, 1834; died at his home near Edwards, Miss., Nov. 9, 1894. Early in young manhood he was married to Mrs. Catherine H. Williams, Nov. 16, 1859, with whom he lived happily nearly thirty-five years. The step-children, children and grandchildren rise up to bless his memory.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, about the year 1860, under the preaching of W. L. C. Hunnicutt at "Old Liberty." This spot was ever dear to his heart. Here his mortal remains were solemnly laid away for resurrection by an immense gathering, and, with services of the church of his choice and of the Masonic and Knights of Pythias orders. He had long held high office among the Masons, and was a steward in the church for many years. A man of strong personality, he was in high esteem with those who knew him best. He was the pioneer in successful dairy business in these parts. In this he showed conservative progress. Perhaps his most prominent trait was great kindness of the heart and pity for the poor. Such are blessed of God. J. P. DRAKE.

LAMPTON—MYRA VIOLA was born Oct. 28, 1893, and was buried Aug. 28, 1894. For ten short months sweet little Myra Viola, the dearest of all the six, made glad the hearts and happy the home of her fond parents, Bro. and Sister I. W. Lampton.

Little Myra was truly a bright and precious baby, and, though her life on earth was short—oh! far, far too short it would seem to us—yet it was not spent in vain. Her dimpled cheeks, loving eyes and cheery voice left their impress upon all hearts that came in contact with her. Baby has left her home down here; but she is not lost, she has only gone on to the brighter and better one beyond the stars, and there waits to welcome all the family home.

Dear papa and mama and little sisters are all sad now; but soon their sadness shall be turned into joy, for they shall see her again, and then she will be all glorious in the purity of heavenly infantile life. Look up, sad loved ones; the Savior who took her will comfort your hearts. JAMES G. SIBLEY, P. C.

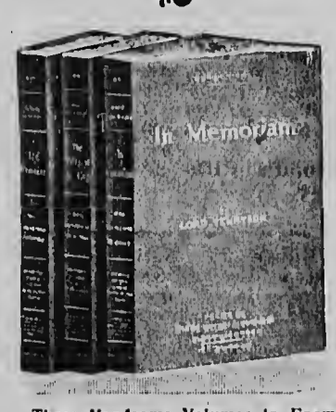
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS.



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

John Burns, the great London labor leader, is now in this country, and will spend six weeks traveling through the States.

The action of the Sugar Trust in closing several of their refineries is regarded as a move in the direction of influencing Congress to abstain from further legislation hostile to sugar.

Louisiana is to have four contests for seats in Congress: Kernochan against Meyer in the First District, Coleman against Buck in the Second, Beattie against Price in the Third, and Benoit against Boatner in the Fifth.

It is said in Washington that Mr. Justice Field wants to retire from the Supreme Bench, and would do so at once if Mr. Cleveland would allow him to name his successor. This the President very properly declined to do.

The forest fires in Tennessee, which raged in that State last week, destroyed cotton, corn, fences, barns and other property. Eight lives were lost, and it is estimated that more than a million of dollars in property has been destroyed.

The British steamship Maros, which was cleared on Nov. 28 for Havre, sailed from this city on Dec. 1 with 18,826 bales of cotton and 7,800 oak staves, which is the largest cargo of cotton ever carried by a vessel from this or any other port.

The sugar refineries, owned by the Sugar Trust, in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, were closed on Nov. 29, throwing about fifty thousand men out of work. This is said to have been caused by destructive congressional legislation, and the general report that Congress will pass a free sugar bill, admitting all sugars free.

The widow of Richard A. Proctor, the great scientist, who has long been desirous of founding some memorial in honor of her husband, has decided that it shall take the form of an astronomical observatory, mounted with one of the largest telescopes in the world, and has selected Mount San Miguel, eighteen miles from San Diego, Cal., as its location.

Gov. Oates, of Alabama, was peacefully installed in office, on Dec. 1, at Montgomery. It turned out that the counter demonstration made by Reuben F. Kolb and his followers was a very feeble affair. Kolb, who was the defeated Populist candidate for governor, had himself sworn in by a sympathizing justice of the peace, and he subsequently made a speech from the top of a wagon; but, beyond this, nothing was done by him or his adherents.

The second session of the Fifty-fourth Congress opened on Dec. 3, with a quorum present in the House and Senate. President Cleveland sent in his annual message, which was most conservative. The President carefully surveys the entire situation in every department of the government, and offers a careful synopsis of it, as if his object were rather to report the facts than to make suggestions. Where he offers any advice he does not assume any authoritative tone, but always defers to Congress.

The Age of Steel says that the Mississippi River Commission is considering the subject of dredging the Mississippi river along its entire navigable length. Experiments have been made with a dredge which is used in Germany for similar purposes, and the best results have been obtained. On the Cherokee bar, below Cairo, a new channel was made, giving seven feet of water, where there was only 4½ before. Above Cape Girardeau the same excellent results were obtained in the face of adverse conditions.

FOREIGN.

Princess Bismarck died last week. Prince Bismarck has received many letters of condolence from all parts.

A severe earthquake shock was felt in Huntingdon, Quebec, on Nov. 28. It was also felt in Ormstown and Allenton.

Great excitement prevails in Madagascar on account of a manifesto issued by the Queen, exhorting the people to resist the French invaders, which was received with frantic enthusiasm.

The popularity of the Czar increases daily. Nothing has done so much to popularize him as his unaffected wave, and the fact that he is dispensing with the military police body-guards of the palace.

China has succumbed to the inevitable and has sued for peace. And her proposal will be presented to Japan through the United States Ministers at Peking and Tokio, thus promising a termination of the war, as the result in part at least of the exercise of the good offices of the United States.

The Pope has received an account of the Armenian atrocities, and is taking steps to obtain further details. "His holiness" has also received urgent appeals from Armenians in several places, asking him to use his good office in their behalf with the Sultan. Appeals to the Vatican, in addition, have been made from England.

If You Need a good medicine to purify your blood, give nerve strength and build up your entire system, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It prevents sickness by making pure blood.

A dispatch from Shanghai says that great excitement prevails in naval circles there in consequence of the departure of British warships from that port under sealed orders. The presence of the British cruisers opposite the estuary of Bieh Tang Kiang is considered to show that Great Britain has decided to more than forestall her rivals in the east and to obtain a voice in the settlement to be arrived at between Japan and China.

For Sick-Headache

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. M. W. Gray, Cave Springs, Ga., says: "I have used it with perfect success in habitual sick-headache."

Gen. Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, who is now visiting America, sent a cable dispatch to Czar Nicholas, saying Salvationists throughout the world greets his imperial majesty with the assurance of its heartfelt sympathy with him in his recent bereavement, and offers up fervent prayers for his happy, holy union with Princess Alix and for a long reign of usefulness and benevolence. This message elicited a grateful reply from the Czar.

The Youth's Companion promises to be exceptionally strong in its fiction during the coming year. Among the famous story-writers who will contribute to it are Robert Louis Stevenson, J. M. Barrie, Rudyard Kipling, W. D. Howells, J. T. Trowbridge, Harold Frederic and C. A. Stephens.

The envoy sent by China to Japan to negotiate terms of peace has arrived at his destination, but it appears that his mission has not met with favor from the Japanese. The envoy, although connected with the Chinese customs service, is in reality a foreigner, and not directly in the employ of the Chinese government. The Japanese consequently believe, or profess to believe, that the Chinese government does not regard the mission of the foreign emissary as serious and binding, and is merely employing him to gain time to mass sufficient troops to protect Pekin.

"Early Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11½x13½ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the Advocate has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40 otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the Advocate. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer. This great work will surely be purchased if seen.

We repeat, the book complete, or entire series of twenty-four parts, will sell regularly for $6. We will present the complete work to anyone sending us five new cash subscribers to the Advocate, at our regular price of $2 a year.

SOME FEAR NOTS OF THE BIBLE.

(Fear not men.—Ex. xiv, 13; Matt. x, 26-28.)

There is fear reprehensible and fear commendable. When fear is the daughter of doubt, unbelief or superstition, it is as sinful as it is painful. But filial fear is proper.

1. There are some things all men should fear.

(1) Sin. It emanates from and leads to hell.

(2) Satan. Not only the roaring lion; but more frequently assuming the appearance of an angel of light.

(3) Hell. Where the worm dieth not. Dreadful place! Escape for your life. Soar in sight.

2. The fear nots of our texts are apropos.

(1) To God the great is small, and the small great.

(2) God's providence embraces all our concerns. He is omniscient, omnipresent.

(3) God is too good to ill at unnecessarily; too wise to err. Hence fear not, no matter what betide.

3. Fear, dread, terror, continued, will operate very injuriously.

(1) It robs of courageous manhood.

(2) It paralyzes effort.

(3) It makes miserable.

(4) It is the half-sister of despair.

4. To doubting, trembling, fearful man God says: "Fear not; stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord."

(1) Pharaoh and his host are soon engulfed in the Red Sea. To save his people God wrought a mighty miracle.

(2) When Jesus was asleep on board the vessel which was in danger of being wrecked, the Lord, being awakened, hade the elements to cease their turmoil. Suddenly there was a great calm.

(3) Men in their blindness and anger may persecute and kill me. But more than the human life they can not take. That which is dearer than life, our honor and devotion to God—life in Christ—will be ours to all eternity.

Charles Dickens' Son.

Charles Dickens has written for the forthcoming volume of The Youth's Companion a series of reminiscences of his famous father. The same volume will also contain an article on "Lord Tennyson Among Children," by Theodore Watts, the celebrated critic of the London Athenæum; and still another article on "Bismarck's Boyhood," by Sidney Whitman, one of the few Englishmen who have the privilege of an intimate personal acquaintance with the famous German statesman.

A Necessity.

For some time past all the Northern papers have been actively engaged in the work of waging war upon the innumerable impure and deleterious food products that are thrown upon the markets by unscrupulous manufacturers in all parts of the world. This is what started the Pure Food Expositions being given throughout the country, the success of which has been unprecedented. They have placed consumers in a position to know exactly what food products are apt to prove unhealthy or even fatal to consumers. It is the aim of the managers of the Pure Food Exposition, to be given in this city next month, to down the rascality that permeates almost every branch of the food-packing or manufacturing trade, for it is very necessary that in an undertaking of this kind the direct attention of the consumer should be attracted to the evil in order that it may eventually be stamped out or, at least, diminished.

Itinerating in China.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

We left Shenghai on the afternoon of the twenty-second instant for an itinerary of the country embraced in this district. Canals are the roadways of China, and all travel is by boat, except what is done by sedan chairs and wheelbarrows. These canals intersect at every angle, and almost every mile, and are crowded with onrious craft. Boats are "foreign" and "native," and of every size, from the junk of several tons to the little "foot boat," in which a single passenger must sit circumspectly, or get a dipping. In narrow places passing boats are sometimes so jammed as to obstruct travel for hours. Such an experience our host had, but fortunately we were not on board. Our little vessel has a nice cabin, in which we eat and sleep, being furnished with a table, chairs, and two beds. It is rowed by five coolies, who either pull on the oars or a line from the bank, unless we have favoring winds and can use the sail. The captain is called the "Tsuda," pronounced very much like "Tender," and with loud voice he gives commands, evidently feeling the dignity of his position and the weight of his responsibility. But he had knowledge of his business, including winds and tides, and was careful of his boat and the comfort of his passengers. All honor to the "Tsuda" of the "John Wesley!"

At six o'clock we arrived at Nanzing, and were greeted with a note from Miss Lochie Rankin, and an invitation to dinner at "Louise Home." A delightful evening we had, talking over the great interests of the church on both sides the sea, closing with the regular Saturday night missionary prayer meeting. In Bro. Hill's home, who is both pastor and presiding elder, we were grateful guests. He is a busy worker, having thirteen preaching appointments weekly, besides visiting and exhorting three day-schools. Here the Sabbath was spent most profitably. We had preaching at half-past nine o'clock in the morning in the church, followed immediately by the Sunday-school; preaching again in the afternoon at three, and service at five in a street chapel a mile away. It was our first experience with a typical Chinese congregation. They come in, stand or sit for awhile, talk along to each other, move their position to get a better view of the foreigner, and then retire. Of course, some remain quietly, and even reverently, to hear the blessed gospel. The inquiring look on certain faces when attention has been arrested and truth found lodgment is very pathetic. Much of street-chapel preaching seems to go to waste. The crowds come, gratify their curiosity, and leave with apparent indifference. But how many who catch a single thought that remains and finally saves, none can tell. Every week some missionary hears of an inquirer who first heard the gospel in a wayside chapel, and from that day gave up his idols. The seed must be sown by all waters. So long as the crowds come, whether from curiosity, hostility, or spiritual sympathy, the Word must be preached in faith, nothing doubting.

Nantsiang, once a prosperous city of over 40,000 inhabitants, now has about 12,000. It suffered immensely during the Tai-Ping rebellion, and may never recover its ancient glory. Here the "Louise Home" of the Woman's Board is located, in which Miss Rankin resides, and where she supervises several day-schools. She also makes tri-weekly visits to Kading, a walled city of 15,000 people, eight miles distant, and looks after six flourishing day-schools located there. A faithful, self-denying, tireless toiler is this modest pioneer missionary of the Woman's Board in China.

We spent Monday in Kading—or, at least, all that was not consumed in working our passage there and back on the canal—contending with a "dead calm" in the morning and "head-winds" in the afternoon, exhausted the day, except about three hours. The only compensation in canal-boat travel is the opportunity for reading and meditation. Punctuality in meeting appointments is an impossibility, unless an ample margin is allowed in their arrangement. Bro. Hill and Miss Rankin both feel encouraged as to the outlook in Kading. The native pastor seems to be diligent, and after years of working and waiting I hope the time of reaping will soon come.

On Tuesday morning we hooked for Wongdoo, eight miles distant, on wheelbarrows. This was a new experience, and one only to be endured, not enjoyed. The wheelbarrow is not constructed after the American pattern. The wheel is in the center, and covered with wooden slats. Passengers sit on the side of the wheel. If there are two, they balance each other; if only one, the coolie skillfully tilts the vehicle to one side until a balance is reached, and then trots off. A rope on either side forms a stirrup in which the foot can rest. During that ride and walk of eight miles—for we had to walk over numerous bridges and had places—we must have seen four or five hundred unburied coffins. Most of them were covered with straw and left in the open field. Thus thousands of China's dead are sleeping above ground, and in wooden coffins falling to pieces by the action of sun and storm. Mounds beneath which others are buried can be counted by thousands. The whole country is an immense cemetery, the land being cultivated in patches between graves and coffins. And these coffins are a curiosity. They are made of wood from six to nine inches thick, and are hermetically sealed. I saw one that could not have weighed less than five hundred pounds.

At Wongdoo we had a chapel service, Bro. Hill preaching to a crowd that filled the house and the narrow street outside. Here we rejoined our boat, purposing to reach Tsingpoo for an afternoon service; but after seven or eight hours' "toiling in rowing," we stopped outside the walls and spent the night. At eight o'clock the next morning we were at Tsuka-koh, four miles away, and were in the midst of an interesting chapel meeting when Bro. Burke arrived. As Bro. Hill concluded, he followed in an earnest exhortation. How I longed for a mastery of their vernacular in order to make an appeal for my Lord! It seemed to one uninitiated into the habits of this people such a pity to close a service with so many seemingly inquiring into the new doctrine, and eagerly grasping for the rest it promises the weary and heavy laden.

In the evening, at seven o'clock, after an all-day's diligent effort to make about eighteen miles, we arrived at Sung Kiang, Bro. Burke's home, and a walled city of great commercial and political importance. Including the suburban towns, it probably has nearly 200,000 inhabitants. Chinese populations must be estimated; there are no statistical returns. Uninjured by the Tai-Ping rebellion, it has maintained its commercial supremacy, and, being a military station, has considerable political distinction. From the top of the five-storied pagoda we obtained a magnificent view of the country which stretches far away for weary leagues, as level as a plain, and cultivated like a garden. A tall pagoda here and there stands out against the sky, and in one direction a few hills, called mountains, on the tops of which heathen temples are built, except one conspicuously appropriated by the Roman Catholics. Many towns and cities are to be seen with their crowded populations, making one constantly wonder where they find daily bread—or rather rice. The ordinary and polite salutation among the Chinese is, "Have you had rice to-day?" And they are miserably poor. Thousands live on a few cents a day, and if unable to work, are compelled to suffer. Even skilled laborers, carpenters, blacksmiths, etc., receive from twenty to twenty-five cents a day, while common workmen get from ten to twenty cents, and count themselves very fortunate.

In Sung-Kiang is the tomb of Ward, the American filibusterer who figured in Walker's Nicaragua Expedition, and afterward came to China. He offered his services to the government in the Tai-Ping rebellion, raised an army, and led it victoriously in every contest. To him probably is due the credit of organizing the so-called "all-victorious" army which Gen. Gordon afterward commanded, and made quick work of the rebellion. He held Sung-Kiang against the rebels and the adjacent country, but at the close of a battle was struck by a spent ball and killed. By order of the government, a memorial temple was built in his honor, behind which he sleeps in an unmarked mound. He was canonized according to heathen rites, and the people commanded to worship his spirit. We visited the temple, and found an old soothsayer in charge, plying his trade and making merchandise out of the superstitious and afflicted. Thus the house of heathen prayer has become a den of thieves.

In another temple, dingy and neglected as they all seem, one thing attracted special attention. Above and a little in front of the large image before which candles were burnt and prayers offered, there was an immense abacus—the Chinese counting machine. It is in every hong, shop, bank, or place of business, by means of which the Chinese calculate very rapidly and with almost unerring accuracy. Now, whether that machine was there, kept by the deity, to count the cash cast into the treasury, or the number of worshipers bowing at his shrine, or the number of sins to be forgiven for which confession was to be made, it was most suggestive. Was it not a blind seeking after the great Christian doctrine of rewards according to deeds done in the body? But, alas! that old dust-covered god had no eyes to see and no record to keep. We worship an omniscient God, who has angels to keep and seal the books, in which thoughts, as well as deeds, find accurate entry. Oh, if these people understood that doctrine in its divine fullness, what a fleeing to the living God there would be, from the sea to the Great Wall!

In another part of that temple was a large picture of some horrible, dragon-looking animal, desperately trying to devour the sun. This picture, by government order, is in the houses of all Chinese officials as a warning against avarice. But, from universal report, the lesson is lost and the warning unheeded. Officials are said to be monsters of iniquity—grasping without exception and corrupt without limitation. Every contract is a job, and almost every act a judicial crime. On this account there is universal and utter lack of confidence in all government officers. No man can hold office in his native province, and the term of service is limited to three years. But in this time fortunes are stolen, and a poor mandarin becomes a sort of fabulous Crœsus. This occasions the widespread discontent in China, and threatens her overthrow far more than the navy and army of Japan. At any moment rebellions may break out, which will make the canals of China run red with the blood of her sons.

Outside the walls of Sung Kiang is a temple, in one apartment of which is a realistic representation of the Buddhist hell. We went to see it, and tried to ascertain the significance of its horrible details. At the entrance of the infernal regions stood a forbidding figure, with a satanic grin on his face, and a bundle of imitation silver money in his hand. Inside were the various kinds of torture to which the pitiless victims were subjected. Some were falling from an immense arch, around which serpents were coiled; others were bound to a stake, and headsmen were wielding the bloody ax; others, with heads down, were being sawn asunder; others, in a rice mortar, were being pounded to jelly; and still others, in an immense furnace, were burning, while the grim stoker was stirring up the fire to make it seven times hotter. On one side the iron gate stood slightly ajar, and some had escaped. They stood outside, and were taking on the skin of dogs, hogs, foxes, etc. This illustrated the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. As we studied the horrible picture, I said surely this has little hold upon the faith and fears of the Chinese. If they believed its doctrine, their lives would be changed. The fact is, the masses have no religion. They care little for their temples, and have no worship worth the name. Theirs is a vague superstition, without any definite faith. What the literary and high-class people may believe, is another matter. But this is certainly true of the ignorant millions. Going out to that temple I had my first ride in a sedan-chair. It is a kind of doll house on two long bamboo poles, and borne on the shoulders of two coolies. I rather prefer the wheelbarrow. The riding is easy enough, but the poor coolies have so often to change shoulders, and the poles look so insecure, that all pleasure is lost in sympathy. One fellow, noticing my uneasiness at a break in the pole, relieved apprehension by saying: "Rest your heart." This was said in Chinese, and was interpreted by Bro. Parker.

Chinese houses have no fireplaces. They are not heated in Winter, however deep the snow. A Chineman keeps warm by adding another jacket or two. In this way the temperature is estimated. It is not so many degrees cold, but so many coats.

Another evidence of the utter lack of confidence in each other's integrity, is their system of exacting security-money. If you rent a house for fifty dollars a year, you must pay down fifty dollars in advance as security. Then if you pay the monthly rental as it falls due, the advance payment will be returned at the end of the year or when you give up the house. They have no laws to enforce the payment of debts.

In hundreds of shops imitation silver paper money is kept for sale. It seems to be an immense business. This is purchased by the superstitious millions to appease the wrath of some angry god, or to burn and transmute into spiritual currency for the use of fathers and other dead relatives.

The canal boat population is large and distinct. Thousands of people have no other home. Children, chickens and dogs are raised there, and never live on land. Parents never seem uneasy about children falling overboard. Our friends in Nantzieng were much interested in a little baby on one of the boats. According to custom, the little fellow could not be taken ashore until a certain moon, and the time was near at hand. The event was to be celebrated. These people can sing, with understanding "No foot of land do I possess." Their poverty is appalling.

After a pleasant day with Bro. Burke and family, we took passage again for Shanghai, arriving here yesterday morning at eight o'clock. On the lot adjoining the mission house and church in Sung-Kiang, Bro. Parker and family find pleasant residence in part of a Buddhist temple. Thus the decaying religion of Cathay is giving way to the disciples of the Lord of lords.

On Monday we leave for Soochow and the Conference.

The Louisiana Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The forty-ninth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, M. E. Church, South, was opened by Bishop J. C. Granbery at the Louisiana Avenue Church, of this city, on Dec. 5, at nine o'clock A. M. The attendance at the opening was large. The Bishop seemed to enjoy tolerably good health. Opening Conference, he read part of the twelfth chapter of Matthew. The usual hymn, "And are we yet alive?" was sung with enthusiastic gratefulness. The Bishop's prayer was full of holy fervor. After another song, Bro. Wright led in prayer. He talked with God as friend with friend. After a brief address by the Bishop, roll call and other preliminaries, Dr. John T. Sawyer was elected secretary. He chose as assistants Fitzgerald Sale Parker, Henry H. Ahrens, and William G. Evans.

The presiding elders, after consultation, reported the following committees:

Committee on Conference Relations—Revs. J. D. Harper, chairman; I. F. Reames, H. Armstrong, G. D. Anders, Jas. I. Hoffpauir, T. K. Faunt LeRoy, W. F. Henderson.

Committee on Temperance—Revs. C. M. Lyons, chairman; T. J. Upton, R. S. Collier.

Committee on Bible Cause—Revs. F. N. Parker, chairman; R. M. Blocker, H. C. Newsom.

Committee on District Conference Records—Revs. N. S. Cornell, chairman; W. W. Drake, H. O. White.

Committee on Public Worship—Revs. J. T. Sawyer, chairman; T. K. Faunt LeRoy, W. B. Thomson.

Committee on Nominations of Boards and Committees—Revs. S. S. Keener, chairman; J. A. Miller, J. S. Sanders, T. B. White, V. D. Skipper, J. E. Denson, R. Randle.

Dr. Morton, the rotund counterpart of Bishop Kavanaugh, was introduced, and addressed the Conference on the subject of his life-work—church extension.

Being apprised of the illness of Bishop Heygood, the Conference adopted a resolution of sympathy.

Reports from the Mission Board, from the general secretary of the Epworth League, were read and appropriately referred. Rev. T. B. Holt, treasurer of the Board of Missions, being introduced, stated that he was prepared to receive all money due the Publishing House in Nashville.

Of supernumeraries, the Conference has but two—C. Keener and A. M. Wallet. Of the superannuates, one resides in England—Dr. Trippett. He, as well as his colleagues, was worthily represented. Some were present, and edified their brethren with their remarks.

"Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" was called. One by one the names of the Lord's warriors were called; their characters passed.

It was announced that Rev. Robert Randle would preach at that church to-night. Benediction.

SECOND DAY.

At 9:30 o'clock the Bishop called the Conference to order. Rev. B. F. White conducted the religious exercises.

A goodly number of preachers who had been transferred from the Mississippi Conference by the action of the General Conference were present, duly introduced by their presiding elders, Bros. Johnston and Partridge.

Dr. Walker, president of the Board of Trustees having in charge our property, 113 Camp street, presented his report. A balance on hand of $450 was devoted to the fund of the superannuates, etc. We remembered a remark of Bishop McTyeire when last in our city, inspecting the property above mentioned: "That was, indeed, a good investment when we bought this house."

On motion, Geo. A. Mandeville was located at his own written request.

The following visiting preachers were introduced to the Conference: J. D. Parker, of the Baptist Church; Forman, Walden and Smith, of the Presbyterian Church, and Atkinson, of the M. E. Church.

Dr. Carter and Rev. A. D. McVoy presented elaborate and interesting reports from the institutions over which they so ably preside.

The minute business progressed rapidly and smoothly. To-night the Church Extension Anniversary will be celebrated. Dr. Morton will be the speaker. Benediction by the Bishop.

THIRD DAY.

The good Bishop looked buoyant. He opened Conference promptly at the appointed time. Dr. Partridge conducted the religious exercises.

The case of Chas. E. McDonald, a worthy brother, caused much discussion. It was referred to a committee of five, consisting of J. B. Walker, Houston Armstrong, J. L. Pierce, J. Ivy Hoffpauir, and Isaac T. Reames. The committee retired to formulate a report and take evidence.

Drs. Neil and Mallard, of the Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

A telegram was received from the family of Bishop Haygood, saying that his condition had improved and he was much better, and thanking the Conference for condolence and sympathy extended. After the telegram was read a song was started without announcement, and the effect was marked, the whole congregation joining in it.

The reception into full membership was very impressive. The Bishop delivered an excellent address. The old would speak of their labors in the past tense: Have finished their course. The middle-aged members employ the present tense: Are in the Master's employ. The class, composed of young men, employed the future tense. Will-power a rare gift. They should honor the office which, at the same time, honored them. The following brethren constituted the class: Albert S. Lutz, R. H. Wynn, L. F. Jackson, W. A. Clarke, and W. S. Norwood.

After various minute business, the secretary announced the following appointments: Dr. Morton will address the training-class at Carondelet Street Church, this evening, at three o'clock. Mission anniversary Saturday night. Drs. Pierce and Walker are the speakers.

FOURTH DAY.

Saturday's session was opened with religious services by Rev. T. J. Upton. The Bishop in the chair. Large attendance. Intense interest. The editor of this paper, Drs. Tigert, Chembers, Palmer and Osborne were introduced to the Conference.

Mrs. J. J. Lyons and Mrs. Florence Ruse addressed the Conference in behalf of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Mrs. T. K. Faunt LeRoy read the report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The financial report of Mrs. J. H. Campman was read by the secretary, Dr. Sawyer. A letter from Dr. Steele created quite a sensation. His explanations will settle existing difficulties. Rev. S. S. Keener, president of the Board of Finance, read his report. The money on hand was distributed.

The next Conference will convene at Jackson, La.

The report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals—Dr. J. L. Pierce, chairman—paid this ADVOCATE high compliment. The editor spoke of the interests of our paper. Bro. Albert W. Wailes, having died recently, the Committee on Memoirs—Dr. Jas. A. Parker, chairman—reported in an appropriate manner. The statistical report and the usual vote of thanks brought the business of the Conference to a close. The Bishop, having previously taken the chair, called on Bro. Henry O. White to lead in prayer. He then delivered a brief address. His eyesight being impaired, he called on Dr. J. T. Sawyer to read the

LOOK UPWARD.

BY MARY ELIZABETH CLOUD.

Do not fold the hands in sorrow,
Ever fearing the to-morrow
Will be darker than to-day.
Look to Jesus! He is near thee;
Not another so can cheer thee;
At his feet thy burden lay.

Do not worry! Nay, upwinging
With the lark, be ever singing;
For such song thy heart was made.
Sing not only in the sunlight;
There were two who once at midnight
In the dungeon sang and prayed.

In thy hand God's blest Word taking,
Seek some heart that's near to breaking;
Tell it what I tell to thee.
Through its tears 'twill greet thee, smiling,
Strengthened by thy sweet beguiling,
And thy heart will lighter be.

Weep not that thy lamp is wasted
Ere such joy thy heart hath tasted.
Up! up! 'tis not yet too late.
Just around thee souls are dying;
Save them while the hours are flying
Through the open western gate!

Work for God, and do it quickly!
Deeds of blessing scatter thickly
Over all the waiting land;
Work in gladness or in sorrow;
Ever work; some blest to-morrow
With the reapers thou shalt stand.

A Tree Is Known by Its Fruit.

Nearly two months have passed since my meeting in Natchez, Miss., in which so many of my people entered into the experience of perfect love.

Last week there came a circus to town. It was said to be the biggest and cleanest circus that had ever been here. It was extensively advertised, and the parade on the streets was imposing. The town was wild with excitement, and people from the country were here in great numbers. It is estimated that ten thousand souls were under the tent at night. The same night there were special attractions at the theatre. It so happened that a prayer meeting was held at my church that night. There was no diminution of the prayer meeting crowd. With the circus on one side and the theatre on the other, we had between seventy and eighty at the prayer meeting. When the opportunity was given for voluntary remarks, more than forty responded in quick succession, one after another. Many of these were young people who had been in the habit of attending the circus and theatre, but they stated that they had no desire to go to either now; that they preferred the prayer meeting. God has given them a blessing that has emptied their hearts of earthly love, and filled them with his own blessed presence. The former fondness for worldly pleasure is gone, and instead thereof they have a hearty relish for the house of prayer and praise. Their souls are satisfied with the goodness of God's house. "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree can not bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." By this rule let the work of grace done in my church be judged. But some man will say, "These young people have only got a good case of religion." That is exactly what they profess to have—a good case of religion. And would it not be well to induce those of our members in different parts of our country who ignore the rules of their church by taking such diversions as can not be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus, to get a good case of religion? This is the only thing that will expel the demon of worldliness from the church. Dr. Sawyer's excellent book on "The World in the Church" will never do it. Bro. Peebles' "Insistence on the Execution of Extreme Discipline" will never do it. But if we preachers will quit contending about "the residue theory" and "the second-blessing theory"—whatever these theories may be—and preach the doctrine of Christian holiness to our people, and "allure to brighter worlds, and lead the way," the result may be accomplished. God is able to save his people from their sins, and many of them are hungering and thirsting after righteousness. What if we, the ministers of God and the shepherds of the flock, instead of pointing out the way of holiness to our people, confuse and discourage them by our opposition to a doctrine that has always characterized our church! Stevens, in his History of Methodism—Vol. I., page 406—speaks of "the doctrine of personal sanctification" as "the great potential idea of Methodism." He says, "No single fact affords a better explanation of the marvelous success of Methodism." And he quotes Wesley as saying, "It is the grand depositum which God has given to the people called Methodists; and chiefly to propagate this, it appears, God raised them up." There could be no better evidence that our church has drifted than the sad fact that so many of the sons of Wesley are found sharply contending about a mere theory of sanctification.

Referring to the article of "Beta," in a late issue of the ADVOCATE, I have rarely attended a revival meeting of much power in which some things did not occur, which, taken out of their connections, would seem objectionable. I do not know who "Beta" is, nor to what revival he refers, and, therefore, am not prepared to say that the scene he describes is overdrawn. I can only speak in regard to my own meeting. A person coming in after the meeting was under full headway, or standing off and looking on, might find some things to object to that would not be noticed by those under the influence of the meeting. But is it right to hold these things up to ridicule before those who could have no knowledge of the attendant circumstances? We would thereby grieve many of God's children, disparage the work of the Holy Spirit, give occasion to the enemy to blaspheme, and accomplish no good. Is there not a more excellent way?

I wish "Beta" would read in the current number of our Methodist Review an article on pages 259-262, on Dr. Miley's "Systematic Theology," and another on pages 274 277, on "Topics of the Day." They might modify his views about what he calls "heresy," and soften his feelings towards those whom he calls "heretics."

From early life I have believed in the doctrine of entire sanctification as a work of grace subsequent to justification, and attainable by faith in this world before death. Yet I would not, for any consideration, call any brother a heretic because he does not see the truth as I see it. It does not seem to me to be comely to call one another bad names because we differ in opinion. I have heard very few objections to the doctrine of entire sanctification that were not founded in a misconception of the doctrine itself. It is not taught by any intelligent minister of our church that the blessing of perfect love, or entire sanctification, makes one impeccable, or puts him where further advance is impossible. It is simply this, as I understand it: On the human side, entire consecration to God and perfect faith in Jesus Christ; on the divine side, the perfect cleansing of the heart from sin, and the filling of the heart with all the fullness of God. When we have entered into this experience of full salvation we are prepared to grow in grace, healthfully, symmetrically, and rapidly. Previous to this we are in danger of growing not at all, or developing abnormally. May the Lord guide us into the truth, and into the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ! W. B. LEWIS.

Sanctification and Holiness.

I have not been an uninterested reader of the many articles which appear in our papers on the subject of sanctification. Doubtless the parties to this controversy feel that they should "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," each thinking himself in the right. Sometimes I ask myself the question, Cui bono? And the answer rolls back upon me, "The church will be made purer, and the great doctrine of holiness will be more firmly established in the hearts of the pious." I use the term "holiness" designedly, for there are distinctions in terms, and controversies arise from the want of close scrutiny into the meanings of words. Righteousness and holiness are frequently used as synonymous when they are quite different in meaning, righteousness implying conformity to the law of God, and holiness conformity to the nature of God; so with the words "sanctification" and "holiness." In this controversy we may be looking at different sides of the shield, and viewing the subject from different standpoints. Were the contestants on this theological battle field to come to a proper understanding of the terms they use, hands might be clasped, and the chasm spanned by a bridge of loving hearts. Each, avoiding extremes, should seek the via media, which might, at last, meet the various conditions in the discussion of this vital topic.

But I do not intend to enter this controversy now, and may not do so at any time, though I do preach on the subject of holiness on proper occasions, and urge upon Christians the consecration of all their powers to the cause of Christ. Each one who has studied this subject has formed an opinion based upon what he thinks to be a firm foundation, and yet different definitions are given to the same thing. Mr. Wesley calls this great spiritual work "perfect love;" Mr. Boardman, a Presbyterian, a "second conversion;" Mr. Earle, a Baptist evangelist, "the rest of faith," and Dr. Pierce asked an aged sister, who professed to have entered into this higher life, by saying, "Sister, tell us what it is." She replied, "It is the repose of the soul." You may take either of these definitions that may suit your fancy, and you would not be far from the truth. Ask an unconverted person if he understands what conversion is, and though he may answer you in technical terms, he would have to confess that he did not know what it is, not having experienced the new birth. It is a matter of experience; and so with any other religious state. Before it can be understood it must be experienced. So with this higher life; it must, of necessity, be experienced. Does the thing exist? Is there such a state of Christian experience as is claimed by those who profess it? Are the hundreds who testify to this experience mistaken in such an important matter? Are they all deluded or insane? How can we reject the accumulative evidence of so many pious Christians?

Brethren, let us all stop this controversy, and test the truth of this matter by personal experience. We are taught by the sacred doctrines of our church that experience is the touchstone of every Christian virtue.

After Regeneration.

Is there subsequent to regeneration a blessing, a grace or an experience distinct from regeneration in its general nature? I presume all Methodists will agree with me that the New Testament teaches that such is the case. Then, what is it? Let us inquire.

I. What is its nature? All agree, first, that it is subsequent to regeneration and, second, distinct in its nature from regeneration. It is unnecessary to prove these points. By careful inquiry we shall find that—

1. It is distinct from what is called the baptism of the Holy Ghost. This also is a blessing spoken of in the Acts of the Apostles, as subsequent to regeneration: "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" A comparison of Our Lord's promises of this blessing to his disciples, with the words of Joel quoted by Peter, and the events of Pentecost, leave no doubt but that the baptism of the Holy Ghost was simply a fitting for work, the endowment with "power from on high" involving a call to work. This, and this only, is its meaning, and it is, therefore, distinct from this blessing which we are studying.

2. It is not a purification or cleansing of the soul. This is done in regeneration. I have already shown—in a former article—that regeneration is complete in its sphere, leaving nothing to be removed by a subsequent work. I know that some tell us that regeneration removes all the taint of our own actual sins, but does not touch our inherent depravity; and that this subsequent work removes this inherent depravity: but we are not studying this question in the light of any man's theory, but in the light of God's Word. And I beg any one holding such a notion to prove it, for I can not find a suggestion of such in the New Testament. Regeneration, by the teaching of the New Testament, results in a "new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness," says St. Paul: and I can imagine nothing purer and I read of nothing purer in humanity. We are not concerned about anybody's theories or experiences. This is a New Testament question. If any brother dissents from this proposition, let him prove from the New Testament that I am wrong: and when he does, I shall thank him most heartily, and at once recant the utterance: but if he can not thus prove me wrong, let him be silent on the subject.

3. It is the development of the graces—the new-born spiritual powers—implanted in regeneration. Paul calls newly regenerated saints "babes in Christ" (see also Heb. v, 12 14, and I. Pet. ii, 2), and exhorts them to "go on to (epi, with accusative)—towards—perfection." St. Peter exhorts, "Grow in grace." St. Paul tells us (Eph. iv, 11-14) that we have the means of grace "for the perfecting of the saints . . . till we all come . . . unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." The figure is plain—as children grow to men and women, so saints grow from "babes in Christ" to "full-grown men in Christ." Some did not grow; and the apostle reproved them for it. They might have grown and should have done so.

It is useless to discuss the time required, for nothing on this point is told us. In Heb. v, 12, we read: "When by reason of the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need again that some one teach you the rudiments of the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk and not of solid food." They had not grown, although they had had time enough, but were still babes.

II. What shall we call it? The New Testament is not particular about names; but makes free use of synonyms.

1. Shall we call it "holiness?" The New Testament uses this word generally to designate a quality, and not a distinct state. It generally means purity, the immediate result of regeneration.

2. Shall we call it "perfection?" This is indicated as the end to be reached; but the thing we are studying is progress toward that end. "Let us go on unto perfection"—it is the going, not the perfection. St. Paul says: "Not as though I were (*) already perfect . . . I press toward the mark."

3. Shall we call it "the second blessing?" No such term is found in the New Testament. If I were required to number it, I should call it the third: First, regeneration; second, the baptism of the Holy Ghost; third, this growing.

4. Shall we call it "sanctification?" The word "sanctification," literally making sacred—i. e., setting apart to God's service—is often used in the New Testament as synonymous with regeneration; but neither this word nor any of its cognates are ever used to express this grace which we are studying.

5. How about "entire sanctification?" The term is not in the Bible. How about I. Thess. v, 23? This lone text in the A. V. seems to suggest the idea of entire sanctification. Shall we build a dogma on one seeming suggestion? Let us study the text. "The very God of peace agiasai umas olotelеis." Now, I challenge any Greek scholar in the world to say that olotelеis is an adverb, and can ever be literally translated, "wholly." It is an adjective and qualifies umas, you. To translate it all or complete, as it would generally be rendered, evidently seemed to the translators of 1611 and of 1880 to make poor sense; so they violated the plain letter by rendering it "wholly." "The Vulgate says, "vos per omnia"—i. e., sanctify you through all things. Lensden's version renders it, "vos omnino perfectos"—sanctify you altogether, perfected—i. e., perfected already. Clarke says, "to all intents and purposes." Scott says, "whole." Lunemann, in Meyer's Commentary, says it means "in your entire extent, through and through." These learned students of the Bible, from St. Jerome down to Meyer, are puzzled to know just how to express it; but not one of them, nor does any other scholar dare to suggest that it means that God may sanctify—i. e., purify you completely or wholly—who were only partially purified in regeneration. This text will hardly warrant us in calling this race of growing "entire sanctification."

6. There is not much in a name, it is true; but for my own part I prefer to call this blessing, experience or grace, subsequent to regeneration, "GROWING IN GRACE." It seems more scriptural than any other.

In my first paper I asked and answered: "What Is the Question?"—in my second I considered "Regeneration," and in this "Growing in Grace." In all I have tried to learn what the Bible teaches; and have avoided as far as possible the discussion of theories and human authorities.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

*"Perfect love," "perfect in love," and "love perfected" are all scriptural enough; but what is said above of perfection applies with equal force to these.

The Ethics of Controversy.

In the discussion of any important question truth is the ultimate end, and not victory, over an opponent, regardless of the means used—that is, by all who love God and their fellow-men.

Charitas—love—is of vastly more importance to the church and her children than my dogma. John Wesley had religion. That was the reason he loved men who differed from him in doctrine, and allowed them to remain in his societies. It seems to me he would have taught the "blessed brethren," first and second, of this age, "Follow me as I follow Christ." John was too good a Protestant to fancy himself infallible, and I have never read where he taught that his interpretation of the Word of God was the only correct one.

Missionary Student Conference.

BY REV. GEO. E. GUILLE.

A very profitable Missionary Conference of college students was held in Nashville, Nov. 2 4, conducted by Mr. H. W. Luce, Southern secretary of the Students' Volunteer Movement, and Mr. F. S. Brookman, Southern secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

About thirty young men and women from the various colleges of Middle Tennessee assembled at 7:30 on Friday evening in the chapel of Ward's Seminary for the first meeting of the Conference, which was opened by Mr. Luce. He spoke very earnestly, and said there were three objects which had brought them together: "1. To pray together for a greater manifestation of the Holy Spirit in our lives. 2. To secure greater depth of conviction concerning the evangelization of the world. 3. To confer together about the best methods of conducting missionary work in our institution." The line of thought suggested by the last two was followed closely throughout the Conference. The first topic discussed was, "The Evangelization of the World," conducted by Mr. Brookman. The remainder of the evening was occupied by Mr. Luce in discussing "The Duty of the Evangelization of the World." 1. Because it is God's purpose that the world should be evangelized—as shown in the Old Testament; as shown through Christ and through the Holy Spirit. 2. Because of the character of the gospel, its priceless value and its saving power. 3. Because of the relation of the heathen (1) to us and (2) to Christ. He identifies Himself with the poorest heathen. 4. Because of the condition of the heathen: (1) In body—Infanticide, widowhood in India, daughters-in-law in China, opium curse, especially in China; poverty, lack of medical knowledge, slave trade. (2) In mind—"There seem to be three things," says Miss Gninness, "that reign supreme in China—sin, sorrow, and fear." (3) In soul—Nations without God in the midst of centuries of superstition. Half the world never heard of Christ. 5. Because it is possible. The superhuman part made possible by Christ's assurance; the human part made possible by man's capability. What makes man capable is the preparation of preceding centuries, the experience gained in the knowledge of heathen character. The system of caste is breaking down, non-Christian nations are acknowledging the power of the gospel, Christian literature is becoming established among the heathen, the world-door is open, and the inner door of the heart is open; in many places they are looking for the gospel and wishing missionaries would come sooner. In a conference of 450 missionaries in Shanghai, they said, "If twenty thousand young men and women will give their lives to the work, the world will be evangelized in a generation."

On Saturday morning Mr. Brockman introduced the subject of "Missionary Study," and spoke at some length on the importance and value of studying missionary literature, not only because of its inspirational value in strengthening our faith in God's promises, and enabling us to grasp the idea of a "world" by learning what God hath wrought in the different fields, but because it is essential to a well-rounded education of to-day. He spoke of the missionary study classes which were being organized in the various colleges for a systematic study of the history and progress of missions. Fifty-seven colleges in the United States have classes. In the afternoon session Mr. Luce discussed "The Missionary Meeting." He showed its place in the missionary life of the college, as being the greatest factor in promoting general missionary sentiment and spirit, in promoting missionary giving, and in raising up missionary leaders for the church. Many valuable suggestions were given as to the method of conducting the missionary meeting. At the evening service the earnest words of Mr. Nantz, Mr. Luce and others on "Secret Prayer" were very helpful, and it was a time of heart-searching.

On Sunday morning Mr. Brockman spoke on "Giving to Missions," and because of the urgent need for money, and inasmuch as it emphasizes the importance of missions in the mind of the college student, he ought, therefore, to cultivate the habit of systematic giving to missions. It was found that the seven colleges represented had given nearly $600 to missions during the last college year. After a brief recess for the conferring of delegates, as the name of each college was called one of its representatives told what its policy would be for the year. As a result of the Conference: Regular missionary meetings will be held in all the colleges represented, missionary study classes will be organized in all where they are not already established, and more than $1,000 will be given to missions during the present college year.

At 7:30 in the evening a Students' Missionary Mass Meeting was held in McKendree Church, which was addressed by Mr. Luce and Mr. Brockman. Altogether, the Conference resulted in profit and blessing to all. Mr. Luce is a graduate of Yale, and has set aside his last year in Union Seminary that he may give all his time during this year, without any salary, to visiting the Southern colleges in the interest of the Students' Volunteer Movement.

The Sure Reward.

Must I tell you that there is nothing so sure in all the world as abundant reward for well-doing? The work may be very common, but that matters not; the worker may be very humble, but that matters not; the world may push the man and his doings into the gutter, but that matters not. So sure as God lives, the reward shall fly on strong wings through heaven, and stop not till the beating pinions are folded beside the soul that was faithful unto death.

O Paul! what think you to-day? Awful hard was your experience on earth. The shipwrecks tried to drown you, and the dungeons tried to smother you, and the hunger tried to starve you, and the whips tried to kill you. No lost sheep on the mountain was ever so girdled about by wolf-packs as were you, and still you trudged on, and fought on, and came off conqueror. What think you?

"I think it paid. To-day I sit on a throne. About my neck is hung the white stone, with the new name written, given to all the overcoming ones. The cause for which I fought is going round the world, and every weariness suffered is forgotten in the gladness of God's eternal recompense."

O Wesley! what think you to-day? You remember how the church pushed you out, and how the mob rushed upon you, and how the caricatures were drawn on fence and wall to smirch your doing; but nothing daunted you. You preached on and on through fifty years, till at last common men carried you out for burial in the humble grave beside Bunhill Fields. What think you?

"I think it paid. I would go through it all again, only with tenfold more earnestness. For a full century now I have drunk from an overflowing cup of God's rewards, and I send the cry through streets of heaven and earth that it paid, it paid."—Selected.

The Times We Live In.

There are those among us, as there were in the days of the Royal Preacher, who contend that they are worse than all the times of which we read in history. But is there any solid reason for such an opinion? Faith in God forbids such a view. While admitting that the tendency of the unregenerate heart is to evil, we know that the Christly elevating force is mighty to counteract the evil, and that it surrounds and permeates the life that now is, and is potent for the regeneration of the individual and of society.

All history bids us hope. The trend of humanity is ever upward. Here and there, as in the darkened period of the thirteenth century, there has been retrogression, but the march of the human race has been to the higher levels. On the milestones of the ages progress is everywhere indicated. The echoes of the ages, in cycling waves, repeat the "Excelsior" story, and stimulate us to carry the banner to yet nobler altitudes. Inspired by the spirit and example of Christ, the central figure and the controlling element of all true life, more to the world to-day than at any past time since the era of his appearance, and with the power of his abiding Spirit in our hearts, we would thank God for the present attainment and go forward in the footprints of the Master who leads the way to the higher and better life.

Herein lies the secret of our duty: to learn the measure of the power God has placed in our hands, and with brave hearts go forth to improve every opportunity as it comes to us for purifying and elevating the time in which we live.—Treasury.

Friendship a Fragile Thing.

Friendship is a good deal like china; it is very beautiful and durable as long as it is quite whole; break it, and all the cement in the world will never quite repair the damage. You may stick the pieces together so that at a distance it looks nearly as well as ever, but it will not hold hot water. It is fit only to be put empty on a shelf and forgotten there. The finer and more delicate it is the more utter the ruin. A mere acquaintance, which needs only a little-ill humor to help it up, may be coarsely puttied like that old yellow basin in the closet, but tenderness and trust and sweet exchange of confidence can no more be yours when angry words and thoughts have broken them than delicate porcelain teacups which were splintered to pieces can be restored to their original excellence.—London Athenæum.

Eternity is crying out to you louder and louder as you near its brink. Rise, be going! Count your resources; learn what you are not fit for and give up wishing for it; learn what you can do and do it with the energy of a man.—F. W. Robertson.

The effect of every burden laid down is to leave us relieved, and when the soul has laid down that of its faults at the feet of God, it feels as though it had wings.—Eugenie de Guerin.

Look upon the bright side of your condition; then your discontents will disperse. Pore not upon your losses, but recount your mercies.—Watson.

The Regenerate Are Saved.

"Created after the image of God in righteousness and true holiness." (Eph. iv, 24.)

(Read before the Ministers' Institute at Brookville, and published by request.)

Man in his original state stood before God a living, upright, righteous and holy being, united to God by faith. Faith, the vital link of union to God, was sundered by unbelief. Separated from God, he died. With his life went the image of God, which was his righteousness and holiness; he was lost. Now, God, to restore us, his race, to salvation, extends himself to us in Christ. We take hold of him by faith. This re-establishes the severed union. Then, through this vital union which Christ says is as real as that which united the branch to the vine, the divine life again flows into the soul, and his life, with all he lost by the separation, returns; he is, therefore, saved. As unbelief was the cause of separation and death, so his faith is the cause or condition of his union, and life, faith, therefore, is the only thing that could be the condition of his salvation; hence, "he that believeth in the Son hath life, and he that believeth not shall not see life." (John iii, 36.) "These things I write unto you that believe, that ye may know that ye have everlasting life." (I. John v, 12, 13.) Therefore, it is a fundamental fact that the believer in Christ has life, is born of God, and is restored to life with all he lost by unbelief. This process of restoring life to the dead soul is regeneration.

First, therefore, the regenerate has spiritual life. Again, through his unbelief he lost his life with the divine image, in which consisted his righteousness and holiness. Therefore, through his faith is his life, with all this he lost, which was the divine nature, restored. This is taught us in John i, 12: "To as many as received him gave he power to become the sons of God; . . . who are born, not of man, but of God." Being born of God, and becoming sons of God, we partake of the nature of God. This is the divine image, which Paul says is righteousness and true holiness. "Like begets like." You never knew any being born of a parent, and not partake of his nature. All life, whether vegetable, animal, or spiritual, is the result of assimilation and being so vitally united to Christ, the one only source of spiritual life; as to assimilate his life, we also assimilate his nature. This is the divine image—righteousness and true holiness.

We see, therefore, second, that the regenerate has the divine nature, which is righteousness and true holiness. Again, regeneration is referred to as a washing of the moral nature. "Ye are washed by the Spirit of our God." (Paul to Corinthians.) "Washing of regeneration." (Paul to Titus.) "Wash me, and I shall be clean." (David.) We take a soiled garment; through the process of washing the result is a clean garment. So the soul undergoes the process of regeneration; the result is a sanctified nature. Regeneration refers to the nature of the work, and sanctification to the effect produced.

Therefore, third, the regenerate are sanctified.

Now, in syllogism:

First premise: All who have the life and nature of Christ, and are righteous, holy, and sanctified, are saved.

Second premise: Regenerated persons have the life and nature of Christ, and are righteous, holy and sanctified. Therefore, the regenerate are saved. The conclusion is as logical as scriptural.

Let us answer the only two plausible objections to the above conclusions:

Objection one: Paul, at First Corinthians (iii, 1), says of babes in Christ, merely regenerated persons, that they are carnal. Yes, he does, and at the first chapter, second verse, he says of the same persons, "They are sanctified." But can the same person be sanctified and carnal at the same time? Yes! Every sanctified person in this life is also carnal, because the spirit, being regenerated, is, therefore, sanctified, but the body, not yet being regenerated, is raised to newness of life, is, therefore, natural, vile, and carnal. Hence, as Paul says (Rom. viii, 23), "We ourselves (and the purest and best of all men) groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption—to wit, the redemption—of our body." Therefore, the conflict in the Christian life. But, as Paul says in Phil. iii, 20, 21: "Our citizenship is in heaven, from whence we also look for the Savior, . . . who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorified body."

So, brethren, we look for the coming of our Lord, who shall regenerate these carnal, vile bodies of ours; then this natural and corruptible body shall be spiritized, and this vile body fashioned like his transformed and glorified body, as Peter, James and John saw it on the Mount of Transfiguration; then the renewed soul and renewned body, reunited, shall stand before God at the judgment as pure and spotless as Adam came from the plastic hand of God. Until then we must be content, as Paul, to fight, not as one beating the air, but to keep our vile, carnal bodies under, lest, while we preach to others, we ourselves become castaways. (I. Cor. ix, 26, 27.)

Second objection: But are not regenerated persons commanded to go on to perfection? Yes; but never are they commanded to go on to sanctification. It is only the regenerated, sanctified one that can grow. Life precedes and conditions growth. The born, living child grows, or develops, into the full stature of manhood, not by a mighty effort or single leap, but by the daily assimilation of wholesome food. So also the born, living, spiritual child of God grows up into Christ not by mighty effort at once, but daily by the assimilation of spiritual food. "Beholding the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image, from character to character." We grow, not in kind, but in character.

What Ails You?

If you have sudden darting pains in the joints or muscles, and it recurs every time you get cold, and appears in new places without leaving any of old ones, the best thing to do this is to send five dollars to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, for a month's treatment of Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. They will send you two large bottles of their remedy by return express. If you have the above symptoms you have the Rheumatism, and should begin at once with the known cure. Delay with any disease is dangerous—with Rheumatism it is simply suicidal. Agents wanted.

The Week of Prayer.

The Central Committee of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society issues the following circular calling for the annual observance of the Week of Prayer, Feb. 6-10, 1895:

Preparation for the approaching Annual Prayer Service should be made humbly and gratefully, acknowledging that the successes of the last year are due to him who promised, "I will put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live; and I will place you in your own land, and ye shall know that I the Lord have spoken it and performed it, saith the Lord." With this sure promise, faith may press forward with enthusiasm, seeking a more thorough knowledge of the work committed to us, greater fitness for the service, and an outpouring of God's Spirit.

Feb. 6 commemorates Wesley's landing in America for the purpose of evangelizing it; Feb. 7 his learning from Peter Bohler of a deeper spiritual life. One date is the anniversary of the coming of Methodism to this country, as far as Wesley embodies it, and the other of its spiritual birth. Hence our Week of Prayer fitly begins with these dates.

The week should be one of power and blessing—"For this is the confidence that we have toward him, that if we ask anything in accordance with his will, he heareth us; and if he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we have asked of him."

MRS. NATHAN SCARRITT,
Gen. Sec. W. F. and H. M. Society.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. G. H. Galloway: "The Lord has been indeed good to us of the Rose Hill circuit. We have had five delightful meetings. We have on the work about one hundred and fifty bright conversions. Forty have joined the church. Our assessments, with the possible exception of pastor's and presiding elder's salaries, will all be in full."

Rev. J. W. Burton: "Our Conference year is nearing its close. I have served the work faithfully assigned me by Bro. D. A. Little, with but little appearance of any good done. Financially, we are badly behind, having received only about one-fifth of the assessment. Spiritually, we are not what we ought to be. We have a name to live, and yet we are dead; but very few of our number that are alive to duty. May God bless the work and send them the right man to preach for them next year. God bless our church."

Rev. J. A. Randolph, Greenville, Miss., Nov. 29: "We are rounding up the year better than we expected. Nearly all the charges will be behind, but the balances will be small. Spiritually, we have had a good year. There have been more additions to the church than for many years. But one of the best evidences of our advancement is in the increased spirituality of our membership. Bros. Cunningham and Whitehurst have left us for Texas. The latter to the Northwest Texas Conference, and stationed at Wortham. We expect to see your smiling face and feel your hearty handshake at our Conference next week."

Rev. B. F. White, Monroe, La., Dec. 11: "I wish to say that the Sam Jones meeting here was a great success. Thousands came to hear this wonderful man of God. The most important result of the meeting was the revival in the churches. The second was the ingathering of over ninety converts to Christ. The last, but not the least, the probable overthrow of the saloons in our midst and the removal of this curse from our city. The outlook now is that we will carry prohibition in Ouachita parish, including Monroe, by a very large majority. The W. C. T. U. has been a great power for good along all these lines. We thank God and take courage. Our finances are full and clear. I have preached only one old sermon during the quadrennium, and have been in my pulpit and in my Sabbath-school every Sabbath except seven of the two hundred and eight that I have labored with this people. I believe every Christian in Monroe is my friend, and I am a friend to every citizen of the place."

WESSON, MISS.

We have just closed a gracious protracted meeting, resulting in 33 accessions—25 by vows and by baptism; many conversions and reclamations, and a number of entire sanctifications. Some of our most devout and intelligent members, who had been converted, and had not backslidden, are rejoicing in the consciousness of a pure heart—"a heart from sin set free;" and they are not afraid to call it "entire sanctification." All collections in full except salary of the preacher. Bro. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., did the preaching. The Holy Spirit did the work. T. L. MELLEN.

A Mail Agent's Experience.

Louis D. Brenneoke, Walhalla, S. C., had Rheumatism for fifteen years, and during that time had never been free from pain. He tried the Hot Springs and physicians without benefit. After taking two bottles of Drummond's Lightning Remedy he wrote that he was free from pain, and able to take several long walks. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles—one month's treatment. Agents wanted.

Thousands of Dollars

Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. I was unable to lie down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"When my adopted son was seven years of age, he had as severe a cough as I ever knew anyone to suffer from. He coughed incessantly, and spit up blood. I tried everything I could think of, but he constantly grew worse, and I feared the poor little fellow would surely die. At last, I gave him Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, being recommended to do so by the physician. This medicine gave the child speedy relief and effected a permanent cure."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Texas.

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

North Mississippi Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The North Mississippi Conference met at Sardis on Wednesday, Dec. 5, Bishop Keener in the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by the Bishop. J. S. Oakley was elected secretary, and R. M. Evans, G. H. Lipscomb and H. R. Tucker, assistants. After the appointment of the usual committees, reports were read from the Book Agents, the Board of Missions, the Board of Church Extension and the Secretary of the Epworth League. Reports were presented from the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, Grenada Collegiate Institute and Malone College. Two transfers were announced—B. S. Rayner, from the Japan Mission Conference, and H. T. Gaines, from the Louisville Conference. The following persons were introduced: B. W. Waters, of the Japan Mission Conference; D. M. Smith, Book Agent; Dr. I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College; Rev. Winecoff, of the Episcopal Church, and the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. The supernumeraries and superannuates were called and their characters passed. There was a sermon in the afternoon by Rev. L. D. Worsham, and one at night by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

SECOND DAY.

After devotional exercises and the adoption of the Minutes of the previous day, communications were read from W. W. Smith, Secretary of the Board of Education, and Chancellor Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University.

The following persons were admitted into full connection: J. T. Murrah, L. M. Broyles, C. H. Pittman, S. B. Meyers, W. W. Mitchell, J. H. Rodgers, J. A. Poe, and W. A. Clarke.

A communication from Rev. A. D. Miller, of the Mississippi Conference, with reference to mission work among the Indians in Mississippi, was read and referred to the Board of Missions.

W. M. McIntosh was announced as a transfer from the North Alabama Conference. E. S. Lewis was readmitted. A. T. Buck and R. A. Meek asked for a supernumerary relation.

Speeches in behalf of the Brooks Memorial Home at Millsaps College were made by Dr. W. B. Murrah and Dr. I. W. Cooper, and a collection was taken amounting to $218.

Rev. Thomas Taylor, of the Free Will Baptist Church, was recognized as a local deacon. The preachers of the Sardis district passed an examination of character.

Rev. J. W. Honnoll preached in the afternoon, and Rev. W. M. McIntosh at night. There was also preaching in the Presbyterian Church by Rev. J. A. Leech.

THIRD DAY.

The opening of the session found about sixty pupils of Grenada Collegiate Institute present to remain during the day. They seemed to enjoy their change of programme immensely. Rev. J. W. Chambers and Dr. J. J. Tigert were introduced. The latter made a brief talk in the interest of the Review. A letter was read from the Conference colporteur, Rev. G. W. Bachman, who was too unwell to attend. He was represented at Conference by his son. The examination of character was continued, and the entire list completed. Water Valley was chosen as the place for holding the next Conference. Report No. 1 of the Committee on Publishing Interests, with reference to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, was read and adopted.

FOURTH DAY.

Rev. A. Kendall, chairman of a committee appointed to revise the condition of membership in District Conferences, was read and accepted. The report makes exhorters members of the District Conference, and provides for the election of two delegates from each charge in addition to those already provided for in the Discipline. The following were admitted into full connection: W. L. Anderson, D. P. Patterson, H. D. Estes, W. D. Wendell, J. R. Countiss, and S. L. Cox. H. C. Parrott was located at his own request. Report No. 2 of the Committee on Publishing Interests was read and adopted. The report of the Committee on Temperance was read and adopted. Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was read. The hour for adjournment having arrived, it was laid over until Monday. In the afternoon Dr. S. A. Steele delivered his famous lecture, "The Pioneers of Methodism," to a crowded house. It was much enjoyed. The Board of Church Extension had its anniversary on Saturday night.

SUNDAY.

At 11 A. M. Bishop Keener delivered an excellent sermon to a large and appreciative congregation. He chose as his text St. John iii, 6: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit." After the services thirteen ministers were ordained deacons by the Bishop. After the services in the afternoon eight ministers were ordained elders by the Bishop.

Not having the proceedings of the last day's session, we are compelled to go to press without them.

The Louisiana Conference.

We were present at the Louisiana Conference the last two days. Bishop Granbery's presidency gave great satisfaction. The brethren were delighted with him in the chair, in the pulpit, and in the social circle. Dr. Tigert delivered a missionary address which was very highly complimented. He took a number of subscriptions to the Review. Dr. Morton is said to have been at his best, and that means a great deal. The Protestant pulpits of the city, with a few exceptions, were filled by members of the Conference on Sunday. Collections were somewhat behind, but the brethren seemed cheerful and hopeful, as Methodist preachers generally are. If there is a happier class of men anywhere than those who compose the Methodist itinerancy, we have not found them.

North Mississippi Conference.

We had the pleasure of attending the North Mississippi Conference during the first three days of the session. Our Conference home was with Col. D. G. Pepper, and we are sure that nobody—not even the Bishop—had a better one. Bro. Pepper and his interesting family understand the art of hospitality to perfection. Our fellow-guests were Bro. Wendell, of Aberdeen, and Bro. Standifer—most agreeable companions. Bro. Wendell is a grandson of Bishop Paine. He was admitted on trial. Bro. Standifer was our room-mate. It was worth a trip across the State to have such companionship for three days.

Our senior Bishop presided with his usual efficiency. He was firm and dignified, yet always courteous. Without any seeming hurry, he dispatches business with great rapidity. He brings out from the brethren just enough statistical lore to show the results of the year's work. We were too busy with ADVOCATE matters to hear his address to the class admitted into full connection. It is regarded by the brethren as a masterpiece. Many say they have never heard it surpassed and rarely equalled on such an occasion.

On Thursday night we had the privilege of hearing a very interesting, unctuous sermon from Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the celebrated evangelist, who is now a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and co-president of Grenada Female College. We also heard a sermon of great force and power from Dr. J. J. Tigert, our Book Editor.

Sermons were preached every afternoon; but business prevented our hearing them. Dr. Tigert made a favorable impression upon the Conference in the pulpit and out of it, and carried away a large list of subscribers to the Review. Dr. Steele, of the Epworth Era, was present; but up to the time of our leaving had not made an address. He was, of course, booked for service at a later date.

Dr. Cooper made a very effective speech in behalf of Millsaps College, and especially in behalf of the Brooks Home. Dr. Cooper's agency has been a decided success. He has traveled during the year more than 20,000 miles, has raised over $5,000, and has secured many pupils. Moreover, he has made friends for the college wherever he has gone. North Mississippi desires his continuance in the agency. Dr. Murrah also made a capital talk in behalf of Millsaps. The report from Millsaps is decidedly gratifying. Two hundred and five pupils have matriculated during the session, and twenty-five or thirty more are expected at the beginning of the Spring term. The endowment fund now aggregates about $107,000. The report from Grenada Collegiate Institute was decidedly encouraging. It has a good curriculum and an excellent faculty. The patronage is large and increasing, and important improvements have been made in the buildings. The institution is in high favor with the brethren, and has a magnificent future before it. Malone College is also in a very prosperous condition. The president, Rev. J. W. Honnoll, has shown himself to be the right man in the right place.

The brethren extended a royal welcome to the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Scores of them announced to us their determination to work for the ADVOCATE as never before. The ADVOCATE has absorbed the District Reporter, published at Aberdeen. It secures the mail list—about fifteen hundred names—and the good-will of the former publisher and editor, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, presiding elder of the Aberdeen district.

We had so many invitations to preach and lecture during the year that if we were to accept them all, we would spend a large part of our time in the field.

BOOK.

THE ROYAL ROAD; OR, TAKING GOD AT HIS WORD. By Marian Harland. 12 mo. Cloth. Ornamented. $1.50. Anson D. F. Randolph & Company, 182 Fifth avenue, New York.

"The Royal Road" may be considered as a companion to "Stepping Heavenward" in singleness of purpose and in directness of treatment. It assumes throughout and proves from Scripture and experience that there is but one royal road to happiness, and that is to take God simply at his word in living by the day, and trusting him entirely for the days to come. According to the author, the repeated injunctions to cast all of earthly care upon him who careth for his creatures with wise and sleepless love, means everything or nothing.

Following this motif, she has written what can hardly be called a novel, but it is a tale of every day and real life, full of incident throughout. In dealing with people in various ranks of society she shows the workings of this cardinal principle of practical religion in joy and in sorrow, in distress of mind, body, and estate, and proves it to be the philosopher's stone that solves the great mystery of human existence, the one rule without an exception. She holds that the very simplicity of the formula to "take no anxious thought for the morrow," but to do what the hand finds to do to-day, as if the daily task were all of living, has misled many as to its efficacy. The book commends to every Christian a trial of what may be called a safe recipe for peace of mind and active usefulness for the good of mankind and glory of God.

Condition of Pastoral Success.

If the pastor can put the church paper into every home of his charge, he will provide an important condition of success in his work. It will, we think, be found almost invariably true that the active, liberal churches are the ones whose members take and read their own denominational paper. The presence of such a paper in the homes means, generally, that the members are loyal and faithful, that the pastor's salary will be promptly paid, and that gifts to missions and all church enterprises will be liberal and regular. The Rev. Dr. McArthur, of New York, says on this subject: "It is astounding that some pastors, and the people generally, are so little interested in the circulation of a worthy denominational paper. Pastors stand sadly in their own light when they fail to encourage the members of their churches to take a good denominational paper. It is simply impossible for church people to be in the largest degree useful to their churches, to their denomination, and to the cause of Christ at large, if they do not take a religious paper. There is no investment of money which will bring larger returns for the church, for the denomination and for Christianity than what is expended in procuring good religious papers. Two to five cents a week for the year will secure the weekly visit of a great, strong, wholesome and altogether superb religious paper. The general circulation of such a paper in a church is worth as much to a pastor as is an assistant in pastoral work."—Cumberland Presbyterian.

The fact is, the Christian people of this country have just about the sort of government they like. To be sure, they pretend they don't like it, but they do—that is, the great majority of them do. Actions speak louder than words. At the polls they make the government what it is and keep it what it is. If they wished a different government—really wished it, all the year 'round—they would have it. As it is, the larger part of the Christian voters do a great deal of grumbling and goody-goody talking on 364 days of the year, and on election day meekly walk up to the polls at the bidding of their political bosses and vote to keep things as they are, or to make them a little worse.—The Examiner, New York.

It would seem that if the higher critics find it such an easy matter to analyze the Pentateuch into its component parts, they would have no difficulty in resolving a modern composite into its parts. Acting on this idea, an eminent scholar, backed by Christian capitalists, some time ago furnished the critics with a short article composed of sentences taken from the books of well-known authors, and accompanied it with an offer of a liberal reward to any one who would resolve it into its component parts. So far the silence that has prevaded the camp of the critic has been like that silence which once reigned in heaven for the space of half an hour.

Until yesterday elaborate preparations were being made for the usual biennial inaugural ball in January; but all efforts to consummate the affair have been abandoned in deference to the wishes of Gov.-elect Clarke."

We clip the above from the Arkansas Methodist. Mississippi has a governor of the same type. There has been no ball at the gubernatorial mansion of Mississippi during the last four years. We do not think, however, the credit for this is due to Gov. Stone so much as to his good Methodist wife.

It is estimated that one-third of the population of the United States are under twenty-one years of age. These millions of young people are the richest treasure of the nation. From their ranks the material is to be drawn which will constitute the life of both Church and State the next generation. No other national treasure should be guarded with such unceasing vigilance. Yet we are day by day spreading in their path way snares which will inevitably entrap and ruin multiplied thousands of them. Count the saloons of the nation, and in the same breath you enumerate these agencies of destruction. Who is responsible for the existence of the saloon? However it may be elsewhere, in the United States of America the professed disciples of Jesus of Nazareth must bear the responsibility. Without their aid the saloon could not exist for a single year. A wealthy San Francisco lady, a Mrs. Lux, has just bequeathed three million dollars to promote schools of manual training, industrial training, and teaching trades to the young people of her city and State. She wisely gives to her trustees discretion to expend the income of her bequest as they may think best, and to use a portion of it in advancing her ends in the State public schools. San Francisco will thus have its parallel institutions to the London Finsbury Polytechnic; the Pratt Institute, of Brooklyn; the Cooper, of New York; the Drexel, of Philadelphia; and the Armour, of Chicago.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

The Food of the Future.

Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, who originated, ten years since, the lethal chamber for the painless extinction of life in the lower animals, has constructed a portable chamber, which he hopes will soon be in use in the various towns and villages of England. He has also invented an inhaler, by which sheep about to be slaughtered can be rendered unconscious to the knife in twenty seconds.

Although not a vegetarian, Sir Benjamin, according to an interview in the Humanitarian, thinks the ideal thing is to do away with the slaughter of animals for food. He believes that by a process of advanced chemistry fresh fruits, grasses and pulses could be transformed into condensed, meat-like animal foods, and that we ought not to need the animals as laboratories for making human food. Such a process would not only stop the slaughter of animals, but would ensure comparative immunity from disease. The venerable scientist has been asked to superintend such a scheme, and is "fully convinced that the food of the future will be on these lines."—Christian World.

Interesting News from Brazil.

Rev. E E. Joiner writes from Rio de Janeiro of an unusually good opening for work in that city. God grant our brethren the three thousand souls for which they pray!

"Out near the Jardin Botanica (Botanical Garden) there is a large cotton factory directed by Englishmen, but manned principally by Brazilians. The company has a large and commodious school-building and employs a teacher to run a night school for the benefit of its employees. They kindly placed the building at our disposal for English service. I held service in English there from the middle of May to about the first of this month. Numbers of Brazilians came to the English service, and we began to sing some Portuguese hymns for them. Sometimes I would try to read some Scripture to them; at other times I would take some visiting brother, Bro. Tilly or Tucker, with me to talk to them after English service. After Conference I did not feel at liberty to go on with Portuguese service unless the Directory should give us the use of the hall for Portuguese service also, as some persecution might arise and our cause be prejudiced with the English as well. So Bro. Tucker went with me to the Directory. They very kindly gave us the use of the building, lighted free of charge, for such service, saying if any trouble should arise to let them know, and they would have ample police force to protect us from any molestation. Said we could organize a class, and in the course of the conversation let us know that on the plant a lot for a church had been reserved on which first (which was during the Empire) they proposed building a Catholic Church. They left the impression that if our cause succeeded, they would be glad to turn it over to us. Bro. Taveras, who has charge of the mission work in Rio this year, began going with me, or rather I with him, for I turned the work over to him immediately afterward, and every Sunday evening we have service well attended and also Sunday-school. A week ago last Sunday after the preaching eleven or twelve persons came forward, and with tears and strong pleading invoked the Holy Spirit for converting grace.

"We indeed have a flattering prospect there. I regard it as the most favorable place for work in Rio for the following reasons: 1. There is no priest or Catholic Church in a mile. 2. The people are under English influence, which is Protestant. 3. The people are hard working, earn good wages, many of them can read, have the Sundays free to go to service, and when converted will not suffer so much from the outward pressure, and then they would be able to do something toward advancing the cause of Christ with their means.

"Pray that God may give us the 3,000 souls in that immediate neighborhood who are entirely without church privileges of any kind save what we can give in that school-room which will seat about one hundred and fifty persons."

The Pains of Rheumatism,

According to the best authorities, originate in a morbid condition of the blood. Lactic acid circulates with the blood and attacks the fibrous tissues, particularly in the joints, and thus causes the local manifestations of the disease. The back and shoulders are the parts usually affected by rheumatism, and the joints at the knees, ankles, hips and wrists are also sometimes attacked. Many people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive and permanent cure for rheumatism.

A Card from Rev. E. H. Pearce, D. D., of the Kentucky Conference.

MR. EDITOR: A kind note from Rev. W. P. Hurt, of Pensacola, Fla., advises that one J. B. Allen, of Kentucky, is using my name and reference for fraudulent purposes, Bro. Hurt himself having been a victim. Allen is known to this writer. Efforts in every form, in years past, were made in vain for his conversion. Two years ago a letter was received from Nashville, Tenn., stating he had lost a leg, by a railroad accident, and that this had been blessed to his conversion. It proved to be false intelligence in every particular. Before so ascertaining, I had written, congratulating and encouraging his reformation, as advised. It is this letter that he is, doubtless, using fraudulently. Ministry of our church, and others, are hereby warned against him.

The first step in the cultivation of the spirit of missionary work in the churches is the dissemination of missionary news—facts, all forms of missionary intelligence—that the missionary spirit may be aroused, vivified, fostered, nourished, and built up by what it feeds upon. Give all the news of all the peoples of all the lands; give it in trumpet tones; send it everywhere on all winds, and let the breezes be laden with it; and as the ears shall hear the minds shall understand and the hearts shall sympathize, and the hands shall do the rest.—T. A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. ay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. HOME CIRCLE.

SUNNY-BROW AND FROWNIE-FACE.

Dear Sunny-brow is a winsome elf,
Sweet natured all day long,
She always greets you with a smile
Or snatches of a song.

She whispers in the children's ear
Bright things to make them glad,
And always has some pleasant thought
To woo them when they're sad.

She helps them when they're "cross" and "bad"
To smother naughty words,
And murmurs, "Sing, instead of fret,"
And points them to the birds.

She loves her Master, Christ, you know,
And always tries to take
The "Whisper Motto" for her guide,
Which says, "For Jesus' sake."

Now Frownie-face is a wicked sprite,
Who loves to pout and fret,
Who says the Summers are "too hot,"
The Winters are "too wet."

There's not a thing that suits his mood,
He pines for "something more,"
And claps his hands when children fight,
And pout and slam the door.

He tells them things to make them cry,
And frets them all day long,
And never yet one saw him smile
Or heard him sing a song.

A Christian at Home.

A good home life is one of the best evidences of Christian faith and character. A question was once put to a little girl by an enthusiastic mission worker: "My dear, are you a Christian?" The child flushed up, hesitated a moment, and then said, simply: "Will you please ask my mother if I am?" The mother's testimony was good to hear after this modest reply, for it told of a loving, dutiful life lived at home. Could all of us professing Christians stand the same test were it applied to us in our every-day routine?

It is not always those who talk the most, who attend the greatest number of services and meetings, and are the most zealous in good works, who bear the best witness for God. Do not let us for a moment underrate the importance of such things; prayer is work, and work is prayer, and both have their part in the Christian life, or that life would soon become a stagnant pool. But there is another question which it would be well for us to put to ourselves from time to time—not, "What am I doing for Christ?" but, "How am I living to him?"

"Beautiful lives are those that bless," and it is in the power of each one of us to be either a burden or a blessing, "a cushion or corner" in our homes—not by what we do, but by what we are.

If those around us see us anxious to lay aside our own selfish wishes, trying to conform to the unwritten rules of the home, to check the hasty word, to offer kindly excuses for "the absent," who, as we know, are "always in the wrong," to be upright and sincere when it costs us something to tell the truth, then even those who are the most careless must begin, sooner or later, to think, to wonder where the power comes from that keeps the mind calm in troublous times, to speculate as to the source of the charity that prevents the uttering of a harsh judgment, until they are forced to acknowledge "there must be something in it, after all"—to look upon religion, not as humbug, but as reality.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee." That was a divinely appointed mission, and one, no doubt, very hard to fulfill; but people will be convinced by deeds, though they may fail to attach any importance to words.

It has been well said that "a bright heart and cheerful looks make a home." There are six rules which may possibly serve as six drops of oil helping the wheels of home life to go more smoothly: 1. Speak greatly. 2. Never judge by appearances. 3. Make the best of things and people. 4. Be patient. 5. Look on the bright side. 6. Have much to be thankful for. And a seventh might be added, gathered from a life which made it truly its motto, "Try to do little things for God's glory without letting anyone know."—Selected.

A Young Man Should Remember

1. That, whatever else he may strive to be, he must, first of all, by absolutely honest. From honorable principle he can never swerve. A temporary success is often possible on what are not exactly dishonest, but "shady" lines; but such success is only temporary, with a certainty of permanent loss. The surest business successes—yes, the only successes worth the making—are built upon honest foundations. There can be no "blinking" at the truth or at honesty; no halfway compromise. There is but one way to be successful, and that is to be absolutely honest; and there is but one way to be honest. Honesty is not only the foundation, but the copestone as well, of business success.

2. He must be alert; alive to every opportunity. He can not afford to lose a single point, for a single point might prove the very link that would make complete the whole chain of business success.

3. He must ever be willing to learn, never overlooking the fact that others have long ago forgotten what he has still to learn. Firmness of decision is an admirable trait in business. The young man whose opinions can be tossed from one side to the other is poor material. But youth is full of errors, and caution is a strong trait.

4. If he be wise he will entirely avoid the use of liquors. If the question of harm done by intoxicating liquor is an open one, the question of actual good derived from it is not.

5. Let him remember that a young man's strongest recommendation is his respectability. Some young men, apparently successful, may be flashy in dress, loud in manner, and disrespectful of women and sacred things. But the young man who is respectable always wears best. The way a young man carries himself in private life ofttimes means much to him in his business career. No matter where he is, or in whose company, respectability and all that it implies will always command respect. And if any man wishes a set of rules even more concise, here it is:

Get into a business you like.
Devote yourself to it.
Be honest in everything.
Employ caution; think out a thing well before you enter upon it.
Sleep eight hours every night.
Do everything that means keeping in good health.
School yourself not to worry; worry kills, work doesn't.
Avoid liquors of all kinds.

"How to Make Home Happy."

We read in Holy Writ of the mansions prepared by a Savior's love for all the faithful; of a city which hath foundations, whose rivers are clear as crystal, and whose streets are of fine gold; of a land illumined by the glory of God, where there shall be no more sorrow nor crying, and where all eternity shall be spent in one grand pæan of rejoicing.

Such is the general description of the heavenly home which is the goal of every Christian's hopes and aspirations.

We all have our own ideas of heaven; of what it will be like, and of what our occupation there will be. It is the ideal by which we should shape our earthly conduct. In order to make our earthly homes happy, we should act as if preparing for our heavenly mansions.

Every home is in some measure differently constituted from every other home; and consequently it is impossible to lay down any fixed rules or formulas, by the application of which we can make our individual home life happy.

There are, however, a few salient points and a few general principles which everyone ought to know.

In the first place, we ought to be at peace with ourselves. If we have no inward qualms of conscience, if we are possessed of a quiet and tranquil spirit, it follows, naturally, that we will be at peace outwardly, and that no little matter can ruffle us, or mar our happiness.

Then we should be considerate of others. We should be slow to anger, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, has forgiven us.

Next, we should read God's Holy Word in our homes, and strive to make our lives accord with the lessons it teaches. It is very easy to perceive the difference between a home where God is looked upon as a father and friend, and a home where he is not known, or is regarded as an abstract, impersonal idea.

Everyone should earnestly strive for a happy home. The home is the training-school of character. In it men are made or marred. Its influences cling to us through life, and ofttimes follow us beyond the grave. A happy home is the greatest blessing a man can possess, and we should esteem no labor too hard, and no sacrifice too dear, which will aid us in procuring such a resting-place.—Christian Observer.

The Little Children That Are Gone.

Why do they come, these little ones that enter our homes by the gateway of suffering and that linger with us a few months, uttering no words, smiling in a mysterious silence, yet speaking eloquently all the time of the purity and sweetness of heaven? Why must they open the tenderest fountains of our natures only to leave them so soon, choked with the bitter tears of loss? It is impossible wholly to answer such questions of the tortured heart; but one can say, in general, that these little temporary wanderers from a celestial home come and go because of the great love of God. It is an inestimable blessing to have been the parent of a child that has the stamp of heaven upon its brow, to hold it in one's arms, to minister to it, to gaze fondly down into the little upturned face, and to rejoice in the unsullied beauty of its smiles, and then to give it back to God at his call, with the thought that in heaven, as upon earth, it is still our own child, a member of the household, still to be counted always as one of the children whom God hath given us. Such a love chastens and sanctifies the hearts of the father and mother, carries them out beyond time and sense, and gives them a hold upon the unseen. As things of great value always cost, it is worth all the sorrow to have known this holy affection, and to have this treasure in heaven.—Exchange.

There are those whose preaching, in its whole tone, manner and purport, seems to be ever suggestive of the expectation that the hearer is about to heed the message. And in this expectancy there is the hiding of a gracious power, as when Mr. Finney whenever he went to a place to preach is said to have been wont to convey the suggestion and to make the impression, that sinners were going to repent and come to Christ, and that they might as well come forenoon as afternoon.—The Advance.

HYGIENE.

On Gayety as a Curative Agent.

One of our vivacious French confreres presiding at a dinner party of doctors, when the dessert came on, as a post prandium speech made an argument in favor of gayety as a curative agent that we think deserves translation and reproduction, with some additions.

Cheerfulness as a remedy is certainly a very powerful one, and yet it is not mentioned in the great works on therapeutics which have been written by the grand masters of the art of cure. It is not even made a specialty of by some one, nor is yet a patent medicine. It is not taken in pills nor powders, nor even in cachets. It does not thicken the tongue as most of the potions do, nor stick up the skin as the plasters do, nor is it the property of any druggist, wholesale or retail, who sells it, and it does not redden litmus paper nor turn violet syrup green.

Gayety, we are sure, is well deserving of its position as a therapeutic agent, as it has a decided action in medicine and surgery—Intus et extra—and should be found in every good formulary—under Gayety—of the family of Jocus honestus. It is called by the people by its different synonyms of jolly, merry, joyful, jocular, gleeful, sprightfulness, cheerfulness, and liveliness, or it is sometimes referred to in unspoken language as ha! ha! ha!

But we must be serious, as we promised proof of cure and good clinical observations. You won't expect any regular order under the circumstances, but we will try to follow an A, B, C one in naming the diseases our curative agent cures.

Apepsia and Dyspepsia. It is a sovereign remedy in these conditions; you have only to open the great encyclopedia written by Rochard, and read: "Everyone knows the influence over appetite and good digestion that every individual has who is present at a dinner and makes it gay by lively conversation. The very fact of eating in good company has a most favorable effect on all cases of dyspepsia, and such persons should never eat alone or with gloomy people."

Again, consult Noirot's great work of the Art of Long Life, and he states that you will find: "Nothing facilitates digestion as such as gayety." Recamier, the great French physician, ordered for a marquis, who was suffering from indigestion, that the drums should be beat during his meals. He told him that his stomach needed rhythmic movements given by sound to assist his digestion, and it produced a cure!

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

VIRGINIA MOLASSES CAKE.—Cream one cup of butter and one cup of sugar, add three eggs well beaten, one tablespoonful each of ginger, cinnamon and powdered cloves, one cup of molasses and two cups of flour. Just before putting into the pan, dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in one-half cup of sour cream, buttermilk or cream, stir this into the batter. Bake in a moderate oven about an hour. Served with cream it make a very nice dessert. It is also delightful with preserves at luncheon.—Picayune.

EGG-BALLS.—Boil four eggs ten minutes. Drop into cold water and when cool remove the yolks. Pound these in a mortar until reduced to a paste and then beat them with a teaspoonful of salt, a speck of pepper and the white of one raw egg. Form in balls about the size of a walnut. Roll in flour and fry brown in butter or chicken-fat, being careful not to burn.

VANILLA SAUCE.—Beat one egg without separating, until very light. Put one tablespoonful of cornstarch into a saucepan, moisten it with cold water, add a half pint of boiling water, cook one moment, and pour it slowly into the beaten egg, stirring all the time, add half cup powdered sugar, and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

FRIED VEAL CHOPS.—Select rib or loin veal chops an inch in thickness, dust lightly with pulverized sugar and pepper, and more freely with salt, dip in corn meal and flour sifted together, cover with egg batter, roll in cracker crumbs, fry in fat, drain on cheese cloth, and serve.—N. Y. Advocate.

THE OLD-FASHIONED STYLE

of pill gives you a feeling of horror when you see it and when you feel it. Like the "blunderbuss" of a former decade, it is big and clumsy, but not effective. In this century of enlightenment, you have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver troubles in the most effective way. For Indigestion, Constipation, Bilious Attacks, Sick and Bilious Headache, nothing has been found to equal these pills of Dr. Pierce's invention.

MR. S. BAKER, SR.

Mr. SAMUEL BAKER, Sr., of No. 161 Summit Av., Phillipsburgh, N. J., says: "There is nothing that can compare with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, as Liver Pills. They have done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken."

Read Your Bible.

Young Christian, do you read your Bible every day? You have no time? Certainly that is a foolish excuse. How many things you do every day that are of trifling worth! how much time you spend in light and trifling conversation! Take some of these minutes unprofitably employed and give them to that great Book which Ewald says "contains all the wisdom of the world." We need more Christians with whom the Word of God has become the marrow of the bones and the iron of the blood. It is the Magna Charta of our Christian life. It should be the thing with which we begin the day. A good rule would be to read nothing until we have first read a portion of the Sacred Word. The man of the world can find time to read the newspaper, no matter how many his engagements. He keeps it in his pocket and reads it on the cars as he goes to his work, or as he waits for his dinner. Keep the Bible about you, and use the occasional spare moment to scan its pages. The strong Christian must be nourished on the Word.—Epworth Herald.

DARTON—Mrs. CAROLINE A. DARTON, mother of Mrs. A. R. Railey, died yesterday morning, at 12:30 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Railey, corner of Prairie and Chartres streets. She was over sixty years of age, and was here on a visit from New Orleans. She seemed hale and hearty, but she had previously contracted a severe cold in Dallas, which developed into fatal pneumonia. The body will be taken to Galveston on the International at 11 o'clock to-day for interment by the side of her deceased daughter and grandchild.

The deceased was aged sixty years nine months and eighteen days, was a resident of New Orleans, and an old-time resident of Texas. She was born in Boston; came to Galveston in 1857, and resided there until 1870, in which year she removed to New Orleans. Mrs. Darton was the wife of Capt. W. W. Darton, an ex-Confederate and successful blockade runner during the war, and at present engaged in civil engineering and doing business in the Crescent City, and who is now in Houston on a visit of sadness. She was mother to Mrs. A. R. Railey, of this city; Mrs. Thomas Ballinger, of Galveston; Mrs. Louis Blaylock, of Dallas; Mr. D. B. Darton, of New Orleans—all of whom are here and will attend the funeral and burial. She was also grandmother to Mrs. Louis Forrey, of Dallas. She came to Texas on a visit to her children, and returned here from Dallas, where she had been in attendance on Mrs. Forrey, and one week ago became afflicted with pneumonia. She was a member of the Felicity Street Methodist Church in New Orleans for over twenty years, and was a noble Christian woman, generous, devout, charitable and highly esteemed by all who knew her.

The most heartfelt sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives in their hour of great sorrow.

Mrs. Darton was a sister to Mrs. John Chubb, of Galveston, from whose residence the funeral will take place.—Houston Post, Nov. 29, 1894.

WILKERSON—JENNIE ETHEL WILKERSON, daughter of W. R. and Eddie Wilkerson, was born Nov. 3, 1888, and died Nov. 4, 1894, at Bolivar, Miss.

After weeks of patient suffering God took the tired child home to eternal rest. She was the brightest sunbeam that warmed and cheered her parents' heart; but God's will be done! Let each of them say as did David, "I shall go to her, but she shall not return to me."

"Early Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40 otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer. This great work will surely be purchased if seen.

We repeat, the book complete, or entire series of twenty-four parts, will sell regularly for $6. We will present the complete work to anyone sending us five new cash subscribers to the ADVOCATE, at our regular price of $2 a year.

Sensational Preachers.

But the real failure of the Brooklyn Tabernacle is the failure of sensationalism, which has been on trial here in the person and society of Dr. Talmage for forty-five years. He has brought to his pulpit rare gifts of a certain kind, and his ministry has been able, evangelical, but highly sensational—a word that is not easily defined without becoming offensive. Crowds have followed him. Three houses of worship have been erected and consumed. As preacher, lecturer, editor, the Doctor has secured national and transatlantic fame. He has dined with the Czar of Russia, and, for aught we know, jogged the elbow of the Pope of Rome. But sensationalism in Brooklyn has proved a failure. In the long run, it will prove a failure everywhere. The little Talmages who ape the great Talmage will prove the truth of the theory. People demand sensationalism, but they can not stand it after they get it. It clogs, enervates, disgusts—ends in failure. Thus we study a phenomenon. Of an ordinary pastorate we should not feel at liberty thus to speak, but the pastorate of Dr. Talmage has lifted itself to such prominence, and projected itself into such notoriety that, while intensely individual, it becomes broadly impersonal. It is a study for young preachers and for ambitious churches, and the premature Talmages, who are determined to get crowds to hear them, even if they have nothing to give them after they have assembled.—The Christian Inquirer.

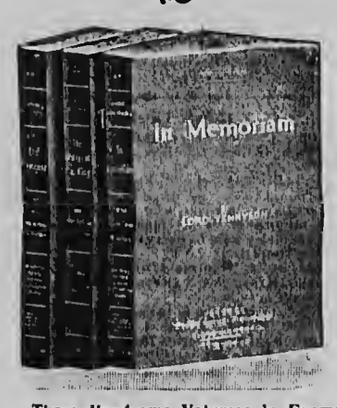
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,
IN MEMORIAM, IDYLLS OF THE KING, THE PRINCESS



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the friend mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 183[illegible]. The elegy was published in 18[illegible]. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the art-motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by exalted imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

DOMESTIC.

Councilman Dudousset, of this city, was convicted of bribery in the Criminal Court last week.

President Cleveland has decided to send an American delegate with the Turkish Commission to inquire into the Armenian outrages.

On Dec. 6 the impeachment proceedings against Mayor Fitzpatrick, of this city, were closed, so far as the taking of testimony was concerned.

Mrs. Phil. Sheridan is said to be about the only widow of a great war chief who declined absolutely to receive purses, testimonials, etc., after his death.

A railroad corporation has been formed in Rayne, La., to build a road from that place to Church Point, through a densely settled and prosperous agricultural country.

Representative Sickles has introduced a bill appropriating $100,000 to enable the government to acquire title to the Gettysburg battlefield and transform it into a public park.

An accident occurred in this city on Sunday, in which a man was burned to death by an electric wire. Crossed wires parted, and the dangling end of one struck the man as he crossed the street.

Many friends and admirers of the late George William Curtis, of New York, have set on foot an effort to build a monument to his memory. It is to be erected in the city of New York at a proposed cost of $15,000.

The bill introduced by Representative Davey, extending the time for the construction and completion of the bridge across the Mississippi river above New Orleans, was called up in the House Committee on Commerce, on Dec. 7, by Representative Price, and was favorably reported. The bill extends the time to six years.

One of the most important commercial arguments in favor of the early building of the Nicaragua Ship Canal is that it would vastly facilitate the American cotton trade with Japan. Japan has 40,000,000 people, who chiefly wear cotton clothing, and the manufacture of cotton goods is, perhaps, the largest industry of the Empire.

Provision for uniform rates of postage for United States mails sent to every portion of the globe, with a few exceptions, is made in the report issued by Postmaster-General Bissell. The rates are 5 cents for each half-ounce of mail, except for Canada and Mexico, where the domestic rates of 2 cents an ounce are applicable, or to the postal agency at Shanghai.

Care is being taken to have all sections of the country heard before the House Banking and Currency Committee next week, concerning the proposed currency system. Chairman Springer is not confining his invitations to Eastern financiers near at hand. He has sent to Chicago and St. Louis and Cincinnati as representative Western cities, and to Nashville, Tenn., and other Southern cities.

FOREIGN.

The first session of the German Reichstag, on Dec. 6, was marked by a disorderly scene, growing out of the refusal of socialist members to rise and cheer for Emperor William.

At their own request detectives are shadowing Herbert Asquith, the Home Secretary; Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland. Fears are entertained of a revival of the Fenian movement.

The Russian admiralty, according to a foreign trades journal, has determined to make an exhaustive test of the merits of petroleum as a fuel for war vessels. The two new armored cruisers now building for the Russian navy are to be provided with furnaces for burning petroleum.

De Lesseps, the great French engineer, died Friday in a remote part of France, where he has lived since his disgrace, some years ago, in connection with the celebrated Panama Canal scandals. At the time of his death the great Frenchman was in his ninetieth year, having been born in November, 1805. The successful construction of the Suez Canal, after the surmounting of most discouraging obstacles, placed him in the front rank of engineers.

The French press are criticising very sharply Mme. Casimir-Perier for telegraphing her condolence to the Empress of Russia over the death of her husband. The papers say that the wife of a Republican President has no official status, and that her action was an impertinent claim to a semi-royal position and rank.

China has decided to send a special ambassador to Tokio, fully authorized to negotiate a treaty of peace. This is the result of an intimation from United States Minister Denby that he and the United States minister to Japan have prepared the way for direct communication between China and Japan, though the nature of the preliminary negotiations are kept a secret.

The Nicaragua Canal bill was taken up in the United States Senate, on Dec. 10, and Senator Morgan delivered the opening address in support of the measure. He was followed by Senators Sherman and Frye, who also spoke in favor of the canal, thus proving conclusively that this important question will be one of the few bills of legislation before Congress which will be considered without respect to party lines and on patriotic grounds exclusively.

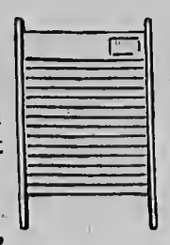
Too Slow

in making clothes, this was. It had to go. And yet people thought it a pretty good thing in its day. Some of them couldn't believe, all at once, that there was anything better. Just so with every improvement. The old way always has some benighted ones who cling to it to the last.

Too Fast



in ruining clothes, un-making them—that's the trouble with the washboard. But it's going now and going fast, to join the spinning-wheel. Women find it doesn't pay to rub their clothes to pieces over it. They can wash better with Pearline. Less work, less wear, no ruinous rub, rub, rub. That's the modern way of washing—safe, easy, quick, cheap. No wonder that many women have thrown away the washboard.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 378 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

In the Living Present.

Last month a silver wedding of historic interest was celebrated at Port Said. On Nov. 17, 1869, the Mediterranean was united to the Red Sea by means of the Suez Canal. This canal converted Africa, as it were, into an island. It was feared at the time that the canal would injuriously affect London. But the reverse proved true. Sad that the Panama fiasco should have enveloped the lustrous name of Ferdinand de Lesseps, builder of the canal, in moral darkness. London is making arrangements to erect a monument in his honor.

The Lexow Committee is unearthing fearful corruption. The "ring" officials, nearly all democratic Roman Catholics, enriched themselves by exacting bribes from rich and poor, good and bad. A priest felt it to be his duty to give damaging testimony. This filled Archbishop Corrigan with holy (!) ire. In that frame of mind he wrote: "An honest Catholic layman would blush to go to such an assemblage as the Lexow Investigating Committee." But why, Mr. Corrigan? Said committee was created by action of the Legislature of New York. Why should an honest Roman Catholic not appear before it? We see, we see. The hoodlers were not to be disturbed, for they are liberal supporters of the Catholic institutions. Boodle ceasing, the income would cease. We see.

The very latest is the establishment of friendship between England and Russia. Formerly England adhered to the Dreibund, Russia to France. Now that adherence ceases. Czar Nicholas II. paid marked attention to the Prince of Wales during the funeral of his father. Glad of the friendship. It will give to England carte blanche in the Corean matter, and open the Dardanelles to Russia. Civilization and Christianity will be the beneficiaries. What though the existence of Turkey be imperiled? The recent Armenian massacre proves that the government of the Sultan is a marplot on civilization. Let the "Sick Man" die. As to the Eastern difficulties, England only can create order out of the existing chaos.

Rubenstein, the famous composer and pianist, died in Petershurg, Nov. 20. He was a native Russian, of Semitic parentage. In 1872 he visited the United States. From a hundred concerts which he gave in our principal cities he netted three hundred thousand dollars. He was offered half that amount for fifty additional concerts; but he declined. His talent was of the highest order.

"Le Signal" is the name of a daily Protestant paper which appears in Paris, France. It is already seven months old. It antagonizes Roman Catholicism and prevalent immorality. But now the existence of that paper is threatened by lack of funds. The editor of the paper, M. Eug. Reveilland, is now in the United States collecting funds for his enterprise.

Satolli, papal ablegate, residing in Washington, D. C., furnishes an elaborate treatise to the "North American Review" on the subject, "The Catholic School System in Rome." Reading his glowing account, one would almost forget the fact that when Victor Emanuel drove the Pope from the throne of the Quadrilateral, Italy contained more illiterates than any other civilized nation. How about Central and South America? About Mexico? Where Rome had sole control illiteracy abounded. ICH DIEN.

A Necessity.

For some time past all the Northern papers have been actively engaged in the work of waging war upon the innumerable impure and deleterious food products that are thrown upon the markets by unscrupulous manufacturers in all parts of the world. This is what started the Pure Food Expositions being given throughout the country, the success of which has been unprecedented. They have placed consumers in a position to know exactly what food products are apt to prove unhealthy or even fatal to consumers. It is the aim of the managers of the Pure Food Exposition, to be given in this city next month, to down the rascality that permeates almost every branch of the food-packing or manufacturing trade, for it is very necessary that in an undertaking of this kind the direct attention of the consumer should be attracted to the evil in order that it may eventually be stamped out or, at least, diminished.

THE UNLIMITED GRACE OF GOD.

(Joel ii, 32; Matt. x, 32; John iii, 15; Rom. x, 13; Rev. xxii, 17.)

Salvation of the sinner was conceived, matured and completed in grace. We are saved through grace. It is the sinner's privilege "to bow and sue for grace with suppliant knee." We can here treat only the first text.

1. Deliverance is promised on condition of complying with certain conditions. Deliverance—how expressive the word! Deliverance from prison, from slavery, from a sick-bed, from a wreck at sea.

(1) Deliverance from sin. Our Master was called Jesus because he was to save the people from their sins. From sin—from the seat of sin—from the evil heart of unbelief. Born of God.

(2) Deliverance from sin's consequences. The soul that sinneth shall die. Delivered from the death which never dies. From wretchedness here and despair hereafter. From the gnawing of the worm which never dies—gnawing here, gnawing eternally. Ever descending the dread declivity to the bottomless pit. Delivered! Glory be to God!

2. To secure this deliverance the sinner must call on the name of the Lord. The Lord. Not as Judas Iscariot who called on the priests, finding no relief.

(1) Call on the Lord penitently. Sorry beyond degree, because of having transgressed God's holy law.

(2) Call on the Lord, confessing our sins.

(3) Call on the Lord for pardon. He is ready and willing to forgive. He will abundantly pardon.

(4) Call believingly. Said the bard: "In my hands no price I bring. I cling to the cross."

3. This deliverance may be secured by all sinners. "Whosoever."

(1) David, confessing, repenting, praying, was restored to God's favor.

(2) The prodigal was delivered. He arose, and tearfully sought forgiveness.

(3) Zacchæus, the publican, was set free. Proof of the genuineness of his conversion indisputable.

(4) Deliverance came to Saul of Tarsus. See him prostrate before the Lord, asking: "What will thou have me to do?"

(5) Cornelius was delivered. Listening to the preaching of the gospel, he was filled with the Holy Ghost.

"Through many dangers, toils and snares
I have already come.
'Tis grace that brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home."

Here and There in Far Cathay.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

Returning to Shanghai after a week's itinerary through the interior, three days were spent in that busy, bustling New York of China, including Sunday, Sept. 30. And a blessed Sabbath day it was. Rarely in life have I so much enjoyed the "communion of saints," and never had stronger faith in the all-conquering power of the gospel. To see a congregation of Chinamen, which quite filled the large church, sit reverently through two services—love-feast and preaching—and in the afternoon kneel with one hundred of them around the Lord's table, with many evidences of spiritual fervor and power, stirred my heart to the depths. If any doubt lingered as to the possibility of bringing this vast nation to Christ, it vanished that day. The Chinaman can apprehend the Lord by faith as clearly as the American, and, when he does so intelligently, rejoices just as gladly in his saving grace. And a solid Christian he makes—not as aggressive as an ardent Westerner, but stern in his fidelity to conviction, and loyal even to the endurance of persecution.

The day was quite filled with restful service. In the forenoon Sunday-school, love-feast, and preaching at Central Church; in the afternoon preaching by Bro. Wadsworth, and communion at Trinity at three o'clock, and preaching in the Union Church at six; in the evening service at Bro. Bonnell's chapel at eight, and attendance for awhile at a good gospel meeting in China Inland Mission headquarters. That was a day never to be forgotten. The Sunday-school, except for the dress and appearance of the people, was exactly like such a school in a well-organized city church in America. Bro. Charles J. Soon is the capable superintendent, and from infant room to Bible class there was the same happy young life and study of God's Word to which I have always been accustomed at home. The songs sung were the same in tune, if not time, though the words I understood not. John Marshall played the cornet, and succeeded fairly well in holding the unaffected and untrained voices together. The collection, of course, was not omitted, and the cash thrown into the baskets was quite liberal for those poor children, most of them from heathen homes. It amounted that morning to $1.80. During the year they had contributed over $50, and were supporting entirely a flourishing day-school in that part of the city.

Immediately after Sunday-school we had a love-feast. To me it was an inspiring occasion. There we had the "language of Zion," which I could understand, though densely ignorant of Mandarin, Shanghai, colloquial, and every other Chinese dialect, expression, intonation, manner, gesture—all were just what I had seen and heard many a pentecostal day far over the seas. Bro. Fong, our oldest native preacher, speaking with suppressed emotion, said: "I feel both glad and sad to-day. Glad when I see the work progressing and so many becoming Christians; but sad when I look around at the thousands who are strangers to this blessed religion." An aged woman, with becoming modesty, yet unfaltering courage, declared her love for the blessed Savior because he first loved her. And many other clear, almost rapturous, testimonies made that feast of love one of the most delightful I ever attended. At its close I had the very great pleasure of baptizing four persons who had passed an approved probation and were ready to assume the vows of membership in the church of God.

The preaching service which followed immediately was attended by a congregation which quite filled the spacious church. Fully two hundred of the number had remained through the entire morning, beginning with the Sunday-school at half-past nine o'clock, and seemed in no wise to abate their eager desire to learn more of "this new doctrine," and to genuinely enjoy the worship of God's house. What a contrast to the indifferent, surging thousands in the streets outside! Within was gladness and life—without was weariness and death. But probably the most helpful and inspiring service was in the afternoon at Trinity. To see a hundred Chinese in this land so long determinedly hostile to Christianity kneeling at the same altar and devoutly receiving the most solemn sacrament of the church, was enough to make the angels sing a new song, and wake the slumbering energies of the feeblest faith. Bro. Reid has 254 members and 265 probationers—a flock which overtaxes his strength not being in robust health. During the year there has been an addition of 74 members and 150 probationers—a per centage of increase equal to "a revival year" at home, and which promises even larger things in the near future. At night, in the street chapel in Hongkew—the American district of Shanghai—the congregation, after the manner of chapel crowds, was somewhat restless. But good work has been done there this year—12 new members received and a probationers' list of 87. In that part of the city a church is greatly needed. With a building like Central or Trinity, a strong organization could soon be effected which would become an evangelizing center to a neglected population of an hundred thousand. Will not some reader of these lines, with faith in the Lord's conquest of China, and prayerfully appreciative of his sacred stewardship, send the money for such a temple? We must build the Lord a house.

On Monday at noon, in the "house-boat," "John Wesley," and accompanied by Bro. Reid, we moved out on the tide, and, with full sail to a favorable wind, turned the prow of our gallant little craft toward Soochow. Up that crowded canal for eighty miles we rowed and sailed, and saw enough to make a volume. What a study are these waterways of China, furnishing easy, but slow, communication with every part of the vast Empire! The methods of agriculture employed, though very crude to a Westerner accustomed to McCormick reapers and other labor-saving machinery, have the merit of highest efficiency. Soil which has been cultivated for over two thousand years is made to yield large harvests and support an immense population. It is doubtful if any land in the world can equal this in the bountifulness and variety of its productions. Nearly every tillable acre is used to raise food for men. Scarcely a square mile is sowed in grass. There are no meadows, and, of necessity, there is no stock raising. The buffaloes used for milling, plowing, etc., are easily kept, and get most of their comfortable living by picking tough grass and weeds along the banks of the canals. The land is so subdivided that holdings are as small as one-sixth of an acre, and even less. The owner of as much as ten acres is considered almost a feudal lord. In public estimation the farmer stands next the scholar. The people are divided into scholars, farmers, artisans, and merchants, and in that order are they esteemed. Beggars and play actors are excluded from this division as unworthy of recognition, and are debarred from holding office. I have seen it stated that at each vernal equinox, before an altar devoted to the inventor of agriculture, the Emperor offers supplications, and plows a piece of ground in honor of the occasion. Viceroys and other high officials are required also to do the same thing. The crop of wheat thus raised—presumably not very large—is used in idolatrous worship. Thus honor is put upon the owners and tillers of the soil. And well they may, for on them depends the nation's hope against starvation. Of their land-tenure and farm-rental systems I have learned much, and may write at another time.

Over the canals in many places are massive stone bridges, which have stood for centuries. The Chinese certainly understood the principle of the arch. Such graceful, faultless curves, made of great blocks of granite, that would tax the Titanic strength of modern engineering to lift and fit them in proper place, are rarely seen in Western lands. I saw one bridge three miles below Soochow, called the Precious Girdle Bridge, that had fifty-three arches. It was on the side of the Great Canal, and served at once as a roadway and breakwater against the floods of a large lake. Near that magnificent triumph of ancient engineering and artistic taste was fought one of the fiercest battles of the Tai-Ping rebellion, in which Gen. Gordon led his gallant forces to brilliant victory. It is strange, however, that these granite structures that arch the waterways have no corresponding roads. One constantly wonders why such massive bridges, that defy the decay of ages, and not a road wide enough for a baby carriage, or smooth enough for anything save the tread of a buffalo or the foot of a Chinaman.

On the banks of the canals and over the fields we saw immense memorials of stone, gate-shaped, and many of them handsomely carved. They were erected to widows who declined to marry again, or other distinguished dead. But not every widow in China deserves a granite memorial. Here, as in America, they are not all averse to reconstructing their homes.

We arrived in Soochow, eighty miles from Shanghai, about noon on Tuesday—a quick trip, thanks to the boatmen, who pulled on the oars while we sweetly slept. The strong walls and tall pagodas of the famed and beautiful capital of Kiang-Soo were some time in full view, before we passed through the gate, and into the literary center of China, and the "silk metropolis of the Orient." We dropped anchor at "Tsing-yang-deen," Methodist headquarters inside the East Gate. Bro. Anderson was there to bid us welcome, and in a few moments we were the happy guests of a hospitable American home. What a sweet breath of the blessed land of the magnolia these missionary homes do bring to lonely wanderers in heathen empires! Soon Dr. A. P. Parker and Bro. Grey called, and in the evening some of the good ladies were invited to tea. But of this great, cultured, wealthy city of over a half a million, and adjacent sections—long stubbornly resisting the foreigner's presence and the gospel he brings, but now most promising to the Lord of the harvest—I must write in another letter. The two days spent there, before continuing our itinerary, on account of pouring rains, gave almost no opportunity of seeing anything beyond the "Methodist compound." But our schools, hospitals, churches and homes made every hour an edification and delight. Of these the church will have full report.

On Friday morning we left in the "John Wesley" for Nanking, accompanied by Bro. Anderson, presiding elder of the Soochow district. It was a great disappointment that Bro. Hendry, the faithful pastor at Nanking, just returned from a rest trip to Japan, could not join our party. He was compelled, however, to respect medical advice, surrender cherished desires, and remain in Soochow. Overworked, broken in health, this self-denying, laborious missionary must for awhile rest from his loved employ. It is poor economy for the church to keep so few men in the field. Excessive labor in this climate, trying to meet the increasing demands of an opening field, will wreck the strongest constitution, and shatter nerves of steel. More men are an immediate and urgent need.

En route to Nanking we passed, at different points, large native boats with flags waving from the mast-head, and a little cannon on the forward deck. These are "gunboats"—revenue cutters, so to speak. They are engaged in patrolling the canals and lakes for robbers and "salt smugglers." The government has a monopoly of the salt business. It is manufactured and sold by imperial officials, and from this source large revenue is derived. The foreign article is taxed, the "moonshine" manufacture is seized, and the smuggler severely punished. I saw a boat which had been cut in two and stood up on ends. That was a captured smuggler's craft, and was put up as a warning against other like offenders. In our hospital at Soochow I saw a robber who was being treated for a gunshot wound, and two Chinese soldiers who had received lead in their bodies, all in the same salt battle on a canal. In every town there is a government depot for the sale of this necessary of life. But in their cooking the Chinese are not reckless in the use of salt.

In the interior we hear and see much of Chinese prejudice against foreigners. In the villages we were greeted with such uncomplimentary terms as "foreign devils," "dogs," "robbers," etc. So tyrannous has been this public sentiment that a missionary's personal teacher would not recognize him on the street, and would not, for any consideration, be seen engaged with him in friendly conversation. They do not believe in social equality. That any entrance for the gospel has been effected, and any hearing secured over such inveterate prejudice, are a great triumph of grace. But that barrier is giving away, and every day brings fresh evidence that the gates of the hearts, as well as the cities, of China are swinging open at the coming of the King of kings.

We reached Nanking, fifty miles from Soochow, at noon on Saturday. Here we found a city of 50,000 inhabitants, and the neatest, best-kept houses yet seen outside of Shanghai. It is in the center of the silk district of the world, and a place of much wealth. Several citizens, silk merchants, and owners of pawnshop stocks (an immense business in China) are each supposed to be worth over a million. Here Bro. Hendry has been working successfully for two years, and Bro. C. K. Marshall (Dzau) has a popular dispensary and chapel. Four years ago Bishop Wilson visited Nanking on a prospecting tour. Now we have an organized church of thirty-two members and over twenty probationers, and are in growing favor with the people. By his medical work Bro. Marshall has found entrance into the homes of the wealthy, and several of them make annual donations to the dispensary fund. The Quarterly Conference held Saturday afternoon showed marked progress during the past three months, notwithstanding the enforced and lamented absence of Bro. Hendry. About nine dollars were reported on self-support, one member received, and seven names added to the probationers' list. I have attended more than one Quarterly Conference in America that did not make a more cheerful showing. On Sunday morning Bro. Anderson preached to a changing crowd in Bro. Marshall's chapel, and in the afternoon we had a short sermon and the holy sacrament at the chapel in Bro. Hendry's house. The new church in process of erection, and well located, will soon be ready for dedication. When that is finished, and a comfortable parsonage for the missionary built, Methodism in Nanking will be planted on firm vantage-ground, and be able to make even more rapid and substantial progress. That home for the missionary is a necessity. It is folly for a foreigner to endure the discomforts of a native house. Far better the comforts of a home, and years to work, than unwholesome quarters and a speedy recall from the field. The enfeebled health of Bro. Hendry, I fear, is traceable somewhat to this cause.

Thanks to Bro. Marshall, we had the pleasure of a visit to the home of Mr. Gold, a cultured and wealthy Chinese gentleman. He is said to count his gold by the half-million. His house, fronting on the narrow, crowded street, seemed not unlike many others; but in the rear, where the family dwell, there are numerous, spacious, and elaborately-decorated and furnished apartments. We were received with great grace and cordiality, and invited to the seats of honor in a model Chinese reception-room. Immediately tea was served in the costliest china—the tea without cream or sugar, and each cup with a handsome cover of the same ware. That is to preserve the fragrant aroma of the delicious tea. In a few moments he served cigars on a silver waiter, which the smokers of our party pronounced equal to the finest weed that grows under any sky. Into a large reception-hall, for feasts and distinguished guests, adorned with swinging lanterns and rich carvings, we were conducted and shown the various articles of interest. Adjoining was the school-room, in which three of his four sons were being instructed by a private teacher. The oldest, a handsome youth of seventeen, was married last year. His wife was an inmate of the family. I am told as many as four generations sometimes live within the same compound. In another part of the house there was a room and teacher for his four daughters. The ladies and their apartments, of course, were not visible, but we had reason to believe that they were not denied a sight of the foreign guests. He then led us into his beautiful garden, fragrant with blooming tea olive and radiant with a variety of fruits and flowers. In the center was an octagonal tea-house, over which delicate vines were tastefully twined, and where again we were served with the Chinaman's favorite beverage from plants grown in the host's native province. I have not often met a gentleman with manners so graceful and a bearing more distinguished. With many well-wishes, and a cordial invitation to accept his hospitality at any time, we were bidden a very friendly good-by. Thus a long-coveted opportunity was enjoyed—seeing the inside of a cultured, high-class Chinese home. The humble huts of the coolies, and the malodorous haunts of the laundrymen in America, give no idea of what the Chinese can be and are, when uplifted by education and culture. They are undoubtedly a people of remarkable capacity.

Bro. Marshall entertained us at tea and dinner, and greatly regretted that we could not spend another day in order to give us a genuine, typical Chinese feast. He treated us to several Chinese dishes, and, in addition to a knife and fork at each plate, had a pair of chop-sticks. I developed some little skill in their use, and shoveled rice quite like a native, much to the amusement of the servants in attendance. Fearing that his guests might not altogether enjoy a regular Chinese meal, we had a sufficient foreign menu to satisfy any taste or appetite. According to Cathay, no lady was present at the table; but at evening prayers Mrs. Marshall and the beautiful little daughter appeared with all the household. The other children are away—some at school, others at work, and doing well. A very interesting family has our good brother, and a most valuable work is he doing for our Lord.

Early Monday morning, before the stars had ceased to shine, the captain of our boat had his men at the oars, and we were off for the Great Lake region. On the way, in several of the smaller lakes, there were curious sights—women and children in large tubs for boats, propelled by one paddle, gathering water chestnuts for market. At first we thought they were wading in the water; but a nearer view disclosed the crude little craft, an oblong tub, in which they sat and gathered their treasures. At noon we reached the island of T'ung T'ing Shan, where a full day was most delightfully spent. It is fifteen miles long, and at some points two miles across. Around that entire island for thirty miles or more there is a paved walk, made of brick set on edge, the work of three hundred years ago. As only human feet walk that highway, it may last for several centuries longer. All around the island there are prosperous villages, and the most respectful people to foreigners yet seen in China. Not an ugly name were we called, and everywhere treated with marked consideration. How I longed for a man to open work there immediately. Our brethren all feel that an early and large harvest would surely be reaped. And it is a healthful, beautiful place. The mountains, up to whose heights we climbed, invite the breezes from afar, while all around their sides are groves of pomegranates, mulberry, tree-strawberry (yang-me), persimmons, chestnuts, tea-olive, in full and fragrant bloom, with here and there the orange and other fruits. And such persimmons—as large as an apple and delicious beyond imagination to one only accustomed to the little opossum variety in certain parts of America, which are only endurable after the frost falls. From the mountains we had a magnificent view of the Great Lake stretching away for miles like a sea of sapphire, dotted with green islets, making a picture almost as beautiful as the Inland Sea of Japan.

In the early afternoon of Tuesday we moved up to the eastern end of the island with our boat, and left before the larks began to sing on Wednesday morning for Mount Ting-ugasan, near the town of Modoh. We wanted to cross the Great Lake—fifteen miles—Tuesday afternoon, but our captain was as cautious a man as ever commission bore. He is a typical Chinaman, and has mortal terror of pirates and other wicked prowlers by night. We rowed against wind and tide, and at noon anchored at Modoh. The lofty mountain which overlooks this busy village, crowned with a tall pagoda 150 feet high, the castle Summer home of ancient kings, and the scene of royal romance and splendor, was our objective point. From the top of that mountain to Soochow, twelve miles distant, there is a paved walk, called the "King's Highway." The old pagoda stands, though somewhat dilapidated, the stately, solemn sentinel over the ruined castle and devastated gardens of the Soochow Kings. Four hundred years before Christ that mountain was beautiful terraced, laid out in gardens and grottoes, and crowned with magnificent palaces. A tale of love and sorrow connected with that royal mountain, concluding with its surrender to the ambitious King of Hanchow, would form the basis of as thrilling a story as was ever woven by the author of Ivanhoe. What a strange sensation—standing on the very spot where kings and courtiers dwelt in splendor more than two millenniums ago! And a grander view I have never had in all my travels in the home and distant lands. For fifty miles the eye swept a scene of enchantment in every direction, and looked down upon more than six toiling millions of heathen people. There, in full view, was Soochow, with her temples and pagodas leaning against the sky, and her waterways glistening in the afternoon sun. In every direction were towns and villages by the thousand. The fields, cultivated like a garden, with their varying colors from gold to deepest green, and traced by canals that shone like silver borders around beds of flowers, looked like a vast fairyland. It gave me a new view of China and another conception of her really wonderful people. I recalled that reported scene when Hernando Cortez reached the mountain heights that overlooked the beautiful valley of Mexico, and, enraptured with the charming landscape, in the center of which nestled the capital of the Montezumas, crowned with the castle of Chepultepec, he lifted eyes and sword to heaven, and swore that he would take that land for Christ and the king. So I felt like summoning the Christian Church to that historic summit, in order that the inspiring view might compel a vow to win this marvelous empire from heathen darkness, and present it as his last and fairest inheritance to our Lord and King. When China swings into the column of Christian nations, the angels will get ready to sing the coronation hymn. And that crowning day is coming—coming not with the swift sweep of Isaiah's angel with six wings, but with the steady, irresistible step of the infinite love and eternal purpose of a God mighty to save.

Down the paved highway, once guarded by stone balustrades, and marked by costly shrines, we returned to our boat, thanking God for exalted hopes that towered far above the venerable pagoda on the mountain and stretched beyond the glorious sweep of the horizon. At eight o'clock we were at the city gate of Soochow, but found it closed. A few cash, however, induced the squeezing guardian of the outer wall to let us in, and soon we were home again, ready for the Annual Conference which met the next morning at nine o'clock.

In the Living Present.

Humorous papers multiply. The reading public is eager to receive them. Punch, Puck, The Judge, Kladderadatsch, are a power in the land. Say what you will,

"Sense may be all true and right,
But Nonsense, thou art exquisite."

The best nonsense comes from very thoughtful men. It is the outcome of relaxation.

This is the reign of the bicycle. Preachers, physicians, drummers and hummers employ it. Even women have joined the procession. Well, there would be no folly if there were no fools. But good may come of the craze. It necessitates good roads. Our railroad companies have frustrated all plans of converting our highways into passable avenues.

Prof. Huxley points out that nature's plan of curing insomnia is to limit the supply of oxygen to the blood. Thus birds put their heads under their wings and soon fall asleep. When sleeplessness ills us, cover the head with the bed-clothes, and breathe and rebreathe respired air. This will surely secure the embrace of "Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep." When asleep, the cover is unconsciously removed.

Next month the Parisians will celebrate the bi-centenary of Voltaire's birth. Though he rendered the sacred contemptuous and killed by ridicule, he was a typical Frenchman—gay, brilliant, unscrupulous. Even to-day atheism is rampant in the metropolis on the Seine, and Voltaire is its acknowledged apostle.

Princess Bismarck, who died recently, was a bright, lively woman, a first-rate housekeeper and nurse, a devoted wife and mother. She studiously avoided meddling with politics, always keeping in the background. With all this, the aged and now weeping statesman declares that his sainted wife made him what he was.

Our Baptist friends insist that the Bible makes repeated mention of immersion. It does. In two places particularly. One was when Pharaoh and his host were immersed in the Red Sea; the other, when the Gadarene swine were drowned in the deep.

THE SECRET OF THE SAINTS.

To play through life a perfect part,
Unnoticed and unknown;
To seek no rest in any heart,
Save in God's heart alone;
In little things to own no will,
To have no share in great,
To find the labor ready still,
And for the crown to wait;

Upon the brow to bear no trace
Of more than common care;
To write no secret in the face
For men to read it there;
The daily cross to clasp and bless
With such familiar zeal
As hides from all, that not the less
The daily weight you feel;

Oh! 'tis a pathway hard to choose,
A struggle hard to share,
For human pride would still refuse
The nameless trials there;
But since we know the gate is low
That leads to heavenly bliss,
What higher grace could God bestow
Than such a life as this?

Regeneration and Sanctification.

MR EDITOR: Of late there is much said and written about these two things, that is to no good to the cause of Christianity or of truth. These brethren seem to forget that they are writing about experiences of faith, and not of reality. It must be admitted by all that the Christian life is a profound mystery—a spiritual life and a spiritual world brought to our vision and experience by faith, but simply as "the substance of things hoped for," and not the real. The Bible nowhere teaches that our constitutional nature is changed in this life, but that that which we experience by faith will ultimately become real, and even more so, because faith may not be able to comprehend it all. By the fall our natures were constitutionally changed, so that sin in substance is transmitted in natural generation. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." Our children partake of our fallen natures by the law of natural generation, and nothing in the economy of grace can or does prevent it; hence this condition of being is not changed by grace in this life.

It is the province of Christianity to show by the demonstrations of the Spirit that this unfortunate condition brought about by sin can and will be changed, the evidence of which is, that experience wrought in us now by faith through the abundance of revelations made in the Word of God, and added to by the Spirit in "the leadings into all truth," which faith experiences, "is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession unto the praise of his glory." (Eph. i, 14)

Now, since our constitutional nature is not changed, it is foolish and unscriptural to be claiming such a change, or that this corruption of nature is removed. Theoretically, through the abundance of revelations faith can see a new man "in Christ Jesus" completely redeemed, and in his proper place in heaven, whether in the first or third heaven. By faith, through the Spirit, God can produce such an effect upon these fallen natures of ours as amounts to a substantial experience, in every way corresponding with what the real will be, so that we may say in truth, "Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know (from our faith experiences) that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is," which condition can not be realized (only by faith) in this life—that is, Christ's condition of being. It is illogical and unscriptural to talk of the blood of Jesus Christ cleansing us from all sin, in the sense of removing this corruption of nature. It can only be applied in the sense of an atonement to remove the offensiveness of a sinful condition, and to remove sins that have been committed. In this sense the blood of Jesus cleanses the Christian every day. "But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanses us from all sin." (I. John i, 7.) But the moral change wrought in us by the Spirit through faith refers to the mind and heart of the being—the mind and affections.

In this mysterious work of the Spirit appears the new creature sharply and positively in contrast with the present unchanged condition of our being. "It is not expedient for me, doubtless, to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I can not tell; or whether out of the body, I can not tell: God knoweth). Such an one caught up to the third heaven. . . . Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities." This sinful constitutional condition was so disagreeable with Paul that "he besought the Lord thrice that it might depart from him," and the only answer given was, "My grace is sufficient for thee." This condition can be endured and fought until death, and then, when we have been tried, "we shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord will give to them that love his appearing." "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies." (Matt. xv, 19.)

This condition can be changed. No one questions this, but this is wrought by the Spirit through the Word. But nature back of this is unchanged, and stands ready to send forth these things again, and would but for the crucifying power of the Spirit; hence we are exhorted by the apostle, "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." (II. Cor. vii, 1)

The only question is that of faith perceptions and substantial experience. These will be had as one advances in the divine life in an advanced understanding of the Word and the new life of faith. But take the advice of St. Paul: "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." Do not claim these faith experiences in any other sense than faith experiences, and that, too, according to the measure of faith given by God. "For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool, for I will say the truth, but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me."

The indwelling spirituality and righteousness may be measured outwardly by the demonstrations of the Spirit, just as the intensity of the fire in a stove is measured by the heat outside. "Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus: whereunto I also labor, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily." (Col. i, 26-29) J. W. ELLISON.

Rev. J. A. Parker, et al., versus the Methodist Standards.

Rev. J. A. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, accuses me of diving into the mud of human standards of faith, in palpable contradiction of Article 5 of our Confession. Of course, the standards referred to are the teachings of Wesley, Watson, and others, as other writings are found in the doctrinal standards of the M. E. Church, South and in the caption of his article he claims that the teaching of these are contrary to that of Jesus and Paul.

These human standards that Bro. Parker refers to, that are, as he puts it, in palpable contradiction to Article 5, contains what the Methodist Church believes as being the true teachings of God's Word. This church has long held to these doctrinal standards as being, of course, scriptural because it would be a terrible thing to think that a church would teach her preachers a doctrine that it believed to be without scriptural foundation, and hence false. This is a gross slander of our church, to say the least of it. Now, these sermons in Vol. I. of the Wesleyan standards are being deliberately taught our preachers, all of them. None are accepted without having passed examination in them.

So far from giving up what is taught in these sermons, the church though her delegated power — the General Conference—had the Book Editor to prepare an analysis and questions on each of these sermons. It is no argument as to who the author of these sermons were; but it comes to every preacher as the voice of his church, and when the committee asks the thirty-six questions that accompany the sermon on Sin in Believers, it but repeats the voice of the M. E. Church, South; and when these questions are answered by the young preacher he answers in the exact language of the sermons. The same is true of the sermon on Repentance of Believers.

Now, does the Methodist Church believe what it is teaching the young preachers to be true and scriptural, or does it not? Of course, it does, these brethren to the contrary notwithstanding. Well, then, if what the Methodist Church believes and teaches be true, inbred sin remains in the heart after conversion and is removed by the Holy Ghost in the work of entire sanctification in answer to consecration and faith. This is the only kind of sanctification that is taught or known in Methodist standards or history. It was professed by the Wesleys, Watson, Clarke, Fletcher, Asbury, McKendree, and others. Not one case of any other kind in the whole connection till, perhaps, Dr. Meek, who declared that he sanctified himself twenty or more years ago.

Now, Bro Parker, you are so zealous for the church, observe: Our first restrictive rule says that even the General Conference, which represents the voice of the church, has no power to change our present established standards of doctrine. Who authorized you, Dr. Walker, Bro. Ellis, and others, to change them?

I look at the book of Wesley's Sermons, and they are called standards. I turn to the dictionary, and Mr. Worcester says it means: "that which has been tried by the proper test, an established rule, or model." Well, do we understand that it means Methodist standards? It does most emphatically, and it means that it is the exact Methodist idea of Bible doctrine. Should I now leave my church and go after Bro. Parker and Dr. Walker, and others, would I not still be in the mud of human standards? What they say, after all, is only their version of the matter. Are they more than human or not?

These brethren are at positive variance with the doctrinal standards of their church. Their inconsistency is glaring, and the further they go on this line the worse their cases. They remind one of the pictures in "Character Sketches," in which the infidel has a lever under the Rock of Ages, trying to overturn it. His lever breaks at the fulcrum, and he goes down, and as he goes he vainly imagines that the great rock is turning over; but it is only the fellow out on the end of the lever going down. Unlike the over-zealous church member, I have no fears that these brethren will overturn the standards of our church.

Our people are coming back to our standards and to the teachings of Jesus and Paul. The Savior's prayer in the seventeenth chapter of John is being wonderfully answered in the Methodist Church, and the prayer of Paul in fifth chapter of I. Thessalonians is also bringing fruit. God wonderfully blesses the preaching of it everywhere. The seal of the Divine Spirit was never more surely stamped upon any movement than this. Bro. D. G. W. Ellis claims to be master of the field. Let the church read his article, and then read the teachings of our church on the subject touched in his article, and let them say whether or not he is true to his church.

Bro. Peebles, in his effort to describe what entire sanctification is, doubtless enlists the sympathy of everyone who has an experimental knowledge of it. It's like an unconvertal man trying to prove that people who are actually regenerated are not.

The voice of God and the Methodist Church is resounding it as it was first commissioned to do; is calling the people back to the old paths. Thank God the voice is being heard. The people are coming; not only Methodists, but others.

Rome or Reason.

The late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes said: "In the nineteenth century every man faces towards Rome or reason; God in us, or God in our masters. He may stand midway between the two, but he faces towards one or the other."

Of this utterance the writer is reminded by a late article from our good Bro. Mellen, in which he declares that he and his house will follow Wesley, Watson, Fletcher, and Clarke, because of their superior scholarship to those who oppose his (Bro. Mellen's) rendering of these divines. Granting, for the sake of argument and politeness, that Bro. Mellen and his house are more learned than any, or all, of those who differ from him, and are, therefore, more capable of understanding the authors mentioned, does he mean to assert that only those who have had similar theological training are capable of understanding or expounding the Scriptures? To say this is to follow the Church of Rome, which forbids the Bible to any save those she pronounces sufficiently learned to comprehend it.

If Dr. Walker, who has gone in and out before this so great people for more than half a century without fear and without reproach, shall sound the gospel trumpet, warning the children of God against trailing the blood of the everlasting covenant, wherewith they were sealed, an unholy thing, and draws the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, against that most unscriptural "residue" theory, shall he be denied credence because his commission bears only the authority of Heaven, and not the sign-manual of Oxford or of Rome? And if others, "beloved of God, called to be saints," choose to search the Scriptures, "whether these things be so," shall they be forbidden because no theological degree, no papal benediction has been bestowed? Then must they bear His reproach, of whom it was said, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?"

But "Layman" proposes a most proper test, if properly applied, for "by their fruits ye shall know them," and points to the results of the late meeting in Natchez. Crowds, however, are no criterion, for "that Egyptian" led three thousand men into the wilderness, while our beloved Lord chose less than six hundred to attest the divine fact of his resurrection.

As for the culmination of the meeting referred to, the writer is willing to admit that, as members of the Methodist Church, and not recruits of the Salvation Army, many might object to singing in the depot every time a preacher leaves town. A profound silence on the part of hearers would not be surprising, since they would probably fear that the preacher was leading, and his company following, to an insane asylum.

"Letters on Baptism."

"Letters on Baptism" is a book on baptism published by the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society, 175 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, T. H. Tewksbury, agent, and also sold by Dr. W. B. Palmore, St. Louis, Mo. Seeing this book mentioned in the St. Louis Advocate, and that Dr. Palmore had arranged to sell it, I at once ordered it from him, costing me about seventy-three cents. After reading it awhile, I concluded that it was the very book for my people, and hence I ordered one dozen copies, and each one who has a copy is perfectly delighted. It is undoubtedly the clearest and most spiritual presentation of the subject I have ever seen before. The author was Dr. Edmund B. Fairfield, a Baptist divine, who was requested by a Baptist publishing house to write a book of about four hundred duodecimo pages in defense of Baptist views of baptism. In order to this, he determined to go over the whole ground from the beginning; but, as he prosecuted his task, he became thoroughly convinced that immersion was not the only baptism, and, therefore, quit the Baptist Church, and wrote "Letters on Baptism," which is an answer to an inquiring friend. It presents the Methodist views of baptism in the clearest and most satisfactory light. It suits me better than any other work that I have read on the subject before. While I am not much on immersion, and am thankful to say that I was not immersed myself, although reared a Baptist, and, too, of the many I have taken into the church since I became a minister of the Methodist Church, I have not had the unpleasant task of immersing one, yet I never could see otherwise than that the Methodist Church is right in claiming that immersion is a mode of baptism. I believe firmly that the day is not far off, and I long for the day, when immersion will be esteemed to be so crude and so unnecessary that no candidate for baptism will desire it.

Let everybody get "Letters on Baptism." ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

Notice.

Dear Sisters of the Woman's Missionary Societies, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference:

Since my return from Mexico, I have been appointed secretary for this district. My health is so delicate that I can do very little work, I fear. I am not able to write to each society in the district, so I will speak to you through the ADVOCATE.

I would beg each auxiliary secretary to be sure to report to Miss A. E. Linfield, Crystal Springs, Miss., before the tenth of December, and each treasurer to Miss Mary Andrews, Vicksburg, Miss., before that time. Do not think that it is unnecessary to send in collections because they are small.

Remember that each society is under obligations to help raise the two hundred dollars for Miss McNemar's education. She will be our missionary, and we must educate her. Try to send your contributions to the Conference treasurer by the first of January, for it will be needed.

We have fifteen hundred members in the Mississippi Conference, and only raised $1,124.37 during the last year. This shows that only about two-thirds of our members pay their dues. Now, this ought not to be so. Dear sisters, let me plead with you, in the name of Jesus, to deny yourselves, and make an extra effort to pay your regular dues. Do not wait to be asked for it. Besides the dues, make special offerings to the Lord, who has done so much for us. It is a glorious privilege to help carry on the Lord's work, and we are sure to be blessed in it. Christ says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." He has commanded us to teach all nations. Are we willing to meet souls in the judgment day, who will tell us, "You had the Light, but did not show us the way?" May God roll upon the heart of every Christian the burden of souls, so that they can't sit at ease in Zion!

In Memoriam.

Rev. Geo. T. Vickers, son of Samuel Vickers and Anna Maria Hardcastle, of State of Maryland, was born in Snidersville, Queen Anne county, Md., July 12, 1821. His parents were Church of England, and then Protestant Episcopal. He, when a youth, preferred the simpler service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was converted in Exeter Street M. E. Church, Baltimore, Md., when about the age of eighteen.

He came South, starting for Tennessee, but located in the State of Mississippi, where for awhile he taught school. In the year 1846, month of November, while on Cole's Creek circuit, under the presiding elder, Benjamin M. Drake, he was licensed to preach. He entered the Mississippi Conference on trial at Natchez, December, 1846; was ordained deacon at Vicksburg, 1848, by Bishop Paine, and, in 1850, elder by Bishop Capers. He was active until the year 1860, when impaired health placed him upon the supernumerary list. He supplied Covington circuit at several different times while supernumerary. At his death he was upon the superannuated list, but not a claimant upon the Conference fund.

Bro. Vickers was the pastor's friend, as many a novice in the itinerancy sent to labor here can testify.

He had a classical education, was a close student, a profound thinker and able preacher. His poetical effusions commanded attention, and evinced a tender, loving heart. He was well posted in church history, and with him Methodism was a subject of prophecy. He was the author of a book called "Methodism in Prophecy."

He was quiet and retiring in disposition, and very conscientious in all the acts of life. His thirty-odd years' residence in St. Tammany parish, La., was but to be entrenched in the love and respect of the whole parish. Everybody loved Bro. Vickers.

If his will is executed, one-half of the proceeds of the estate has been donated to the Board of Foreign Missions, M. E. Church, South; the other half as a perpetual fund, the interest to be used for the superannuated ministers, widows and orphans of the Mississippi Conference.

Nov. 22, 1894, will mark the time when a faithful ambassador of the Lord sweetly fell asleep in Jesus.

Selections.

The Closet Door.

"But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly."

I wonder if you have a door leading into such a room in your house. I ask not where it is, but only whether you have some spot thus dedicated. It is too bad if you have not. Prayer in the sanctuary, you ought to engage in that. Prayer in the parlor or library with the whole family kneeling in circle, you ought to engage in that; but more than this, there should be some place under your roof hallowed by private devotions, where no eye but God's eye looks in upon you.

I really do not see how you can get along in your Christian life without day after day dropping down in such a place. It is seven long days from one pulpit prayer to another pulpit prayer. It is twenty-four long hours from one family kneeling to another family kneeling. Between these times there come trials and temptations innumerable, and how you can get through them unless without this help is to me a great mystery. Why, I believe there are business men who would find half of the worriment of the store lifted if they would only turn the keys of their private offices a few minutes each day and call upon God. I believe there are mothers pulled from kitchen to nursery, and from nursery to parlor in ceaseless going, who would find half their vexations taking wing if they would only break away now and then to lift the latch of the closet door.

Arthur Tappan did a business reaching up into the millions. Importing goods, founding the American Tract Society, overseeing the publication of two papers, he was busy every moment, and yet this man found time every day to secretly drop down on his knees between the dry-goods boxes asking help of God. Havelock was accustomed to get up at four o'clock in the morning if the army was to march at six, rather than lose his private devotions in his tent; and Luther, with a whole Reformation resting down, wrote to a friend, saying, "I have so much to do that I can not get on without three hours a day praying."

O, the prayer closets and our need of them! These secret trials demand secret communions. It is when we go to God alone that we are hugged closest to his side and hear things not told to the great company.—Selected.

The Sweetest Joys.

Many of the sweetest joys of Christian hearts are songs which have been learned in the bitterness of trial. It is said of a little bird that he will never learn to sing the song his master will have him sing while it is light in his cage. He learns a snatch of every song he hears, but will not learn a full separate melody of his own. And the master covers the cage and makes it dark all about the bird, and then he listens and learns the one song that is taught to him until his heart is full of it. Then, ever after, he sings that song in the light. With many of us it is as with the bird. The Master has a song he wants to teach us; but we learn only a strain of it, a note here and there, while we catch up snatches of the world's song and sing them with it. Then he comes and makes it dark about us till we learn the sweet melody he would teach us. Many of the loveliest songs of peace and trust sung by God's children in this world they have been taught in the darkened chambers of sorrow.—Christian Weekly.

In nearly every church there may be some members who—like old "receiving ships" in navy yards—are dry-rotted with love of the world. They lie moored at the dock of formalism, and present an orthodox appearance. If sent to sea, and struck by a gale, they smash into utter wreck. There is a certain sense in which every Christian should love the people of the world as Christ did when he died to save them, or as Paul did when he consecrated himself to bring the world to Christ. But in trying to draw the world up towards God, we must beware lest it drag us down into sinful conformities with its habits, its pursuits, and its practices. It is not love for sinners' souls, but love for sins, that endangers a Christian's character. Christians were put into the atmosphere of this world to purify it, and not to be poisoned by it. "Ye are the salt of the earth," says Jesus to his followers. But if Christians do not salt the world, then the world will accurrot them through and through.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

We never think we can make anything beautiful and worthy of our life, with the many discouraging things, the obstinate hindrances, there are in our lot. Really, however, we can make our life all the nobler, richer, greater, stronger, worthier, by means of the very things which, we think, ruin our chances. We can so carve the stone that the iron-rust which seems to mar it shall prove one of its finest features when mastered and wrought into its own place. That is the way to treat hard and discouraging things in our lot. It is useless to fret over them—fretting will never remove them, and it only weakens our energy and mars our life. There is no other such enemy to noble living and heroic achievement as worrying. But if we meet the hindrances and discouragements with undismayed courage, with persistent resolve, and with unconquerable energy, we shall master them, and in mastering them carve royalty of character and noble worth for ourselves.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

A fisherman fishes every day—not when he feels like it. And he does not always fish in the same way. There are seasons of big hauls, and there are days of patient waiting on a baited hook. But there is never a time when the sea is empty of fish. Even so in winning souls. If it is a successful business, it must be an every-day business, and not "according to feelings." But there are all sorts of men and all sorts of ways to get at them, and there are times of great ingatherings, and times when we must patiently wait for them, drawing them in one by one. But there is never a time when there are no souls within reach. To catch men, he must know them, as fishermen know fish.—Exchange.

"Take the lowest seat," was Henry Ward Beecher's advice, "and work your way up. Let a man be called up always. Do your work wherever you are, and do it faithfully and so contentedly that they will want you still higher. The more you do your work well, the more they will want you still higher and higher. Be drawn up. Do not force yourself up. That leads to chicanery, to pretense, to mistakes, and even temptations and crimes."

Others are affected by what I am and say and do. And these others have also their sphere of influence. So that a single act of mine may spread in widening circles through a nation or humanity.—William Ellery Channing.

I can conceive no dying hour more awful than that of one who has aspired to know, instead of to love, and finds himself at last amid a world of barren facts and lifeless theories, loving none and adoring nothing.—Robertson.

There is something wrong about the society that shuns fallen women as a pestilence and receives with open arms the purple-robed Dives who owns the houses in which these wretched creatures ply their horrible trade.

It is time that a little more stress was laid on simple honesty. It is not every man who can be a great saint or a mighty preacher, . . . but every man can be faithful in his work.—J. F. Clarke.

Let us be careful so to act that if men do speak against us they will have to speak falsely, and if they do hate us they will have to hate us on account of our devotion to Christ.

In a miracle God for one moment shows himself, that we may remember it is he that is at work when no miracle is seen.—Robertson.

Report of Board of Education, Louisiana Conference.

[We invite the attention of our readers to the following extract from the report of the Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference.—EDITOR.]

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Since the last session of this Conference several important changes have been made in the faculty of Centenary College. Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, after years of faithful and excellent work, resigned the presidency of the college, and Dr. C. W. Carter, an honored member of this Conference, was elected his successor, entering upon his duties at the opening of the present session. Two additional instructors were at the same time added to the faculty—J. M. Sullivan to the chair of physics, and C. C. Wier to the chair of English. As now constituted, the faculty is adequate and able. We congratulate the Board of Trustees and the Methodist public upon the enlargement of facilities thus secured, and note with pleasure the immediate good results in the large number of new students now in attendance. Of the ninety who have matriculated for the session, forty-five are new students. Of these ninety, eight are young preachers, and eleven are sons of preachers. The increase of students over last year's enrollment is 26, with the Spring term increase still to be added. Twenty-six parishes of our own State are represented in the student body, with members also from Texas, Mississippi, Alabama and Hondnras.

The college is in need of funds, both for improvement of buildings and to meet the salaries of the professors. For the former purpose special donations must be secured, and we urge upon our people the wisdom of immediate response to this call. For the latter purpose the interest now due, and falling due, on endowment notes would largely suffice, could this interest be collected. We urge immediate payment. We may be forced to suffer loss from a faculty from which we can not afford to lose a man, if this matter is longer neglected. The college is entering upon what promises to be the most prosperous period of its career, and we can not afford to arrest its progress by depriving it of means.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

The report of the president of Mansfield College shows an attendance of fifty-nine students during present session, of whom ten are daughters of preachers in this Conference. The establishment of a free high school at Mansfield has drawn from the college patronage largely, and will continue to do so in the future. To compete with this school on the plane of tuition will be impossible so long as the college remains unendowed; the competition must be on the issue of better advantages to the student, and these advantages the faculty is supplying, and will continue to furnish. The Departments of Music, Art, Foreign Languages and Ancient Languages are all well officered, and the instruction in the Literary Department is extended and thorough. We cordially recommend this excellent school to our membership throughout the Conference.

PAINE AND LANE INSTITUTES.

The colored education work of our church is confined, so far as church action is concerned, to Paine Institute, at Augusta, Ga., and Lane Institute, at Jackson, Tenn. Each of these excellent schools is presided over by a minister of our own church, and each deserves the hearty sympathy and support of our people. The sum of two hundred dollars is asked of this Conference during the coming year for this work by the General Board of Education, and we urge its collection in full.

The report of the treasurer of this Board shows the receipts from collections during the year now closing to be four hundred and eighty-two dollars and twenty cents for education, and eighty-six dollars and ten cents for Paine and Lane Institutes. In accordance with the resolution adopted by our Conference at its last session, the fund for education has been divided between Centenary and Mansfield College, Mansfield receiving $206.60, and Centenary $275 60.

Your Board offers for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the present Board of Managers be continued for Mansfield Female College and for Pierce and Paine College.

Resolved, That Rev. C. W. Carter be appointed president, and Rev. C. C. Miller professor at Centenary College, and Rev. A. D. McVoy president and financial agent at Mansfield Female College.

Resolved, That we cordially invite Prof. C. C. Wier, as agent for Centenary, and Dr. McVoy, agent for Mansfield, to visit the various charges of this Conference in the interest of these institutions.

Resolved, That we instruct the Joint Board of Finance to apportion among the districts of this Conference the amounts asked for by the General Board of Education for our educational work, and for Paine and Lane Institutes.

WM. H. LAPRADE, President.

Foreign Missions.

Many of our people say they are willing to give to home missions, but not to foreign. Often this is a mere shift to escape serious attention to any mission. There is no true conviction of duty to support the cause of Christ as such. Everything is considered from a local and material point of view. I have found it so in nearly all cases coming under my own observation. The low grades are anti-mission. They who are in true sympathy with Christ are ready for any enterprise that may help to save men—men anywhere. The love of Christ constraineth us. This is the primal, all-engaging, all-supporting motive. Every other motive is ruled by this one. But this one is as broad as the command of Christ: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Any sole reason for giving the gospel to people at home will stand good for giving it to all men.

What in this very century has transformed some of the most besotted and degraded peoples of the earth into joyous, intelligent, generous Christians, and started them on a career of highest civilization? What, indeed, has been the conservative and aggressive power for good in the earth for nineteen centuries?—and what must yet be that power to the end of all centuries? No true answer can be given that does not count the gospel of Christ as the essential and controlling factor.

Now, this gospel is not a self-diffusing breath that by some miracle or mystery gets itself spread into the circumfluent air of this world, so that men shall ignorantly or by chance breathe it in and be saved. No; Christ commits his gospel to them that love him, and says: Give ye them to eat. Give ye this gospel to them who have it not—to all nations. How anyone, who claims to be a Christian, can exclude himself from this command is more than I can see. Yet we have men and women in the church who say they do not believe in foreign missions, and do not give to that cause. They lower the collections for missions, and hold back the bread of life from hungry millions. They should be alarmed lest they should perish, while the heathen are saved by others' fidelity.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. Parvin, Bienville, Sparta circuit, Louisiana Conference, Dec. 1: "We have had a great revival on the Sparta circuit this year. Many bright converts and reclamations—seventy-five. Received into the M. E. Church, South, thirty-one of that number. At the union meeting at Bienville, Morphis meeting, an evangelist did good work. Over 100 professions, conversions and reclamations. My pen can not write all the good that was accomplished."

Rev. T. J. Miller, Dec. 10: "Bro. B. H. Rawls, pastor of Steen's Creek circuit, and his wife both have typhoid fever, and are very sick. We believe the case of both to be hopeful. Bro. Rawls will not be at Conference, but his report will be sent in. He has been blessed with great success this year. Many have been converted and 92 added to the church, and the membership greatly revived. Bro. Rawls is loved by all his people. Brethren, pray for him and his."

RICHBURG, MISS., SURRENDERED TO GOD.

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell closed a meeting here on Nov. 28—one of the grandest meetings I ever witnessed. Some of the hardest cases I ever saw have turned to God, and some of them pray in public. The first prayer meeting ever held in this place was on Nov. 30. Everyone was happy and praising God. The whisky drinking and gambling is broken up. Our pastor, Bro. Forsyth, was with us. We hope to get him again next year. Pray for us.

A. G. POOL.

Rev. C. McDonald, Forest, Miss., Dec. 6: "A card this morning from Dawson Rawls informs me that his father, Rev. B. H. Rawls, has fever, and has doubts of his being able to attend Conference. Sister Rawls is just recovering from a serious spell of typhoid fever. I hope the Christian friends will remember them in their prayers. Bro. Rawls has had fine success on Steen's Creek circuit. On last Sunday I dedicated a nice new church at Pine Grove on the Trenton circuit. A new parsonage has also been built on the Trenton circuit. Bro. Barr is closing a very successful year's work."

NATCHEZ, WESLEY CHAPEL.

Four of the collections are paid in full; but there will likely be a deficit in the rest. From examining the roll, I discover there have been 52 additions, 47 professions of entire sanctification, and that, I can safely say, 25 unregenerate and backslidden members have been born anew, or reclaimed.

During the entire year there has been a steady upward trend, and no flagging in interest, even in anticipation of Conference. In services, when invited, many respond to the opportunity for voluntary prayer and testimony, and after the conclusion linger in the aisles in cheerful conversation, and seem loth to leave the church.

Cottage prayer meetings have been kept up since early Spring. In a previous charge, after a great revival, the pastor's heart was gladdened and hope kindled at the spontaneous origin of meetings of this kind, but was disappointed and dejected when in a few weeks they began to wane, and finally died. But it really seems that this institution is here to live. In a meeting (recently begun in a neglected part), a few evenings since, the power of God was so imminent that the whole assembly was affected, and sinners and lukewarm professors of Christianity, with tears in their eyes, arose and expressed a determination to lead better lives, and requested the prayers of Christians. This is mentioned, not because it is an exception.

The children also have prayer meetings—boys and girl separately—under the supervision of adult members. It is thrilling to hear a child of eleven, under the influence of the Spirit, nicely weaving passages of Scripture in petitions for pastor, church, Sunday-school and parents at home.

I believe if the Son of man were to come to Natchez, he would find faith in the church. It was just a few days ago a member (like those with a hundred of whom Mr. Wesley thought that he could soon take the world for Christ) said to me that he believed the persons for whom we had covenanted to pray would be saved. About two months back, in an experience meeting, a mother made a like assertion in regard to her son who was out in the world and powerfully under the influence of sin. Since then he has been converted, baptized, received into the church and sanctified. After praising God for full salvation, in language evidently taught by the Holy Spirit, he fell asleep in the full assurance of a blissful immortality.

In the above I have given the sunny side. As in every community, there are some who, when victory in a revival service is about decided, fall into line; but as soon as the series of services are concluded, fall away and are seldom seen in ordinary meetings. And there are others, not so good, who are so paralyzed in their spiritual nature and fixed in their homes that the greatest revivals do not arouse them or move them toward the house of God. Satan also has powerful sway in the hearts of many men, young and old.

I can not close this without referring to Jefferson Street Church and pastor, Rev. W. B. Lewis, with whom my association during the year has been so delightfully sweet. Especially do I wish to mention the weekly Monday evening holiness meetings in which Presbyterians and Baptists mingle in joyful experience with the Methodist. Presbyterians, I think, take the lead in triumphant testimony and praise to God. This service will compare favorably with similar in the palmiest days of Methodism. It seems that the problems of how to get worldliness out of the church and provide amusement for the young are being solved.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

Announcement.

I have appointed Rev. James A. Parker to Morgan City, and Rev. C. Marcy Lyons to Louisiana Avenue.

J. C. GRANBERY.
New Orleans, La., Dec. 18, 1894.

The Mississippi Conference.

We were present at the Mississippi Conference during the entire session. We were exceedingly fortunate in our Conference home, being domiciled under the hospitable roof of our old friend, Bro. J. A. Gulley, who, with his interesting family, contributed largely to the pleasure of our stay. We could not have been more delightfully entertained. We also made many delightful visits in the homes of old parishioners, though the Conference did not last long enough for us to accept half the invitations we received to break bread. There were two preaching services each day—in the afternoon and at night. The preaching which we heard was good to the use of edifying. Having been appointed to preach at the Presbyterian Church, on Sunday morning, we missed hearing the Bishop's sermon. It is spoken of by those who heard it as a most excellent discourse—thoughtful, admirably arranged and full of the very pith of the gospel.

The missionary anniversary on Friday night was a very enjoyable occasion. Addresses were delivered by M. L. Burton, R. W. Bailey, A. F. Watkins and Sister Lambuth. The programme was quite varied. Each speaker chose a different phase of the great and many-sided subject of missions, and there was equal variety in the manner of treatment. All were good. Dr. Lambuth was also called for, but spoke only a few words, he having delivered an extended address during the morning session.

This session of the Mississippi Conference is remarkable as being the only session at which no one was admitted on trial. There were six applicants; but none were admitted simply because there was no room for them. Never in all its history was the Conference so crowded. The forming of two new districts relieved the pressure a little. Then the division of circuits was resorted to and worked as far as practicable, but still no room could be made for the would-be recruits to our ranks.

If the cholera should be quarantined, how much more should the saloon be quarantined, which, according to Gladstone, produces more evil than "war, pestilence and famine combined."

The Mississippi Annual Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The Conference met in Central Church, Meridian, at 9 o'clock A. M., Wednesday, Dec. 12, Bishop J. C. Keener in the chair. After a Scriptnre lesson from the second chapter of II. Timothy, Hymn 218 was snng, and the Bishop led the Conference in prayer. After roll call Dr. C. G. Andrews was re-elected secretary, with J. A. B. Jones, J. W. Chambers, W. R. Sims, G. H. Galloway and J. G. Galloway as assistants. Standing committees on the various interests of the church were then appointed.

At this point the report of the Book Agents was read. Communications were read from the Board of Missions, from the Board of Church Extension, from W. W. Smith, secretary Board of Education, and from S. A. Steele, editor of the Epworth Era, and from Geo. Wm. Walker, president Paine Institute.

The following were introduced to the Conference: Bro. T. B. Holt, treasnrer of the Board of Missions, and Rev. Mr. Lewis, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Meridian.

A commnnication was read from Rev. T. L. Mellen, president State Sabbath Association, and referred to the Committee on Sabbath Observance.

The following transfers were announced from the Louisiana Conference: W. M. Sullivan, J. T. Leggett, W. L. Linfield, R. S. Gale, R. B. Downer. Henry Hawkins, from the Japan Mission Conference.

The following is a list of the superannuates: Thomas Price, D. Merchant, A. B. Nicholson, W. E. Ballard, W. B. Hines, H. J. Harris, E. A. Flowers, George Bancroft, J. W. Harmon, John A. Vance, J. M. Pugh, G. R. Caldwell, J. H. Evans and R. S. Gale.

Ques. 17—"Who are supernumerary?"

Ans. J. W. Sandell, J. S. Parker.

The following local preachers were elected deacons: Joseph Martin Alford, from Jackson district; Brandon district—Thomas Henry Harrod (of Montrose circuit); Geo. Marion Hull (Rose Hill circuit); John Robert Hays (Carthage circuit); J. D. Ellis (Washington circuit); Joseph Alonzo Bishop (Brookhaven district), Murray G. Felder, J. M. Broadway.

The character of G. H. Thompson passed, and he was continued in the class of the third year.

The following were elected to elders' orders: John W. Crisler, F. M. Keen, Henry W. Wallace, Kirby S. Enochs, Wiley J. Ferguson, William M. Stevens.

Nathan J. Roberts was reported as having been transferred to the Louisiana Conference.

The following were continued in the class of deacons of one year: A. C. Flowers, W. T. Griffin, C. C. Evans, B. W. Lewis, J. T. Abney, W. J. Dawson, H. B. Trevilion.

W. M. Sullivan was reported as transferred from the Louisiana Conference in the class of the third year. J. P. Haney and P. M. Brown were announced as transferred to Louisiana Conference in the class of the third year.

SECOND DAY.

After devotional exercises and the adoption of the Minutes of the previous day, one transfer was announced—E. Langford, from the Texas Conference. Communications were then read from the following colleges, viz.: Whitworth, East Mississippi, Edward McGehee, and Millsaps.

Question 7 was continued. The name of J. T. Leggett was called, and his presiding elder, P. A. Johnston, announced that Bro. Leggett stood his examination on the third year's course before the Louisiana Conference, and was a transfer to this Conference.

J. W. Tinnin was called and passed into class of fourth year. J. G. Cammack, H. C. Brown and H. B. Trevilion were continued in class of third year. H. B. Vandenburg, H. G. Hawkins, R. H. Barr, A. T. Bell, H. W. Van Hook, R. D. Hardin and W. J. Roberts passed to the class of the third year. M. J. Miller, J. C. Ellis and J. S. Hodges were continued in class of second year.

J. R Whittington was discontinued.

Reports were then heard from the preachers and presiding elders of the Brandon, Jackson, and Meridian districts. Rev. D. A. Little, not being present on account of sickness, sent a written report of the Meridian district, which was read by Pres. T. B. Holloman.

A collection was taken for the Indian Mission in Mississippi, which amounted to $38.50.

THIRD DAY.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. R. B. Downer. Ques. 2—"Who remain on trial?"—was then taken up. The characters of the following were passed: E. H. King, C. M. Crossley, A. C. Burt, J. H. Foreman, W. M. Williams, W. W. Moore, F. B. Ormond, G. W. Huff, W. P. Woodward, and T. J. Norsworthy. Of these C. M. Crossley, A. C. Burt, J. H. Foreman and G. W. Huff were continued in the class of the first year. E. H. King, W. M. Williams, W. W. Moore and F. B. Ormond were advanced to the class of the second year. T. J. Norsworthy was continued in the class of the second year.

Important features of this day's session were the addresses delivered by Dr. W. W. Smith, secretary of the Board of Education, and Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary. Dr. Smith emphasized the need of church schools where the atmosphere of piety prevails. He said in substance that it is idle to talk of educating ministers at secular institutions. We might as well talk of raising oranges in Virginia. The world needs the Christian ideal of education. This is, that character is worth more than wealth or honor or learning. More men go to pieces for lack of character than for lack of intelligence. To insure stability the arm of faith must reach up and grasp divine power. The Doctor plead earnestly for co-operation in vitalizing the educational work of the church. His address made a fine impression.

The address of Dr. Lambuth upon the domestic and foreign mission work was of thrilling interest. He briefly reviewed the work of the past year, showing what great advancement there has been, and how urgent are the calls coming from every benighted land. The Doctor read an extract from a private letter recently received from Bishop Galloway, who urges the immediate sending of more laborers to China. The Bishop stated that 135 have this year been added to the church in China.

After Dr. Lambuth had spoken Bishop Keener made some pertinent and impressive remarks respecting missionary work. He said we don't want any more open doors, but we want open hearts and open purses.

Dr. C. G. Andrews then rose and stated that for twelve months a young Mississippian of splendid qualifications has been waiting to be sent as a medical missionary to China, but the neccessary funds have been wanting. The Conference and the visitors present being called upon for subscriptions, $700 of the necessary $1,000 was quickly raised.

The epitaph which the committee had prepared for the tomb of the late Dr. J. W. Lambuth was next read by Dr. Andrews and adopted.

The Epworth League Committee then presented a report embodying a resolntion for the appointment of a Conference League Board. The report was duly adopted. After snndry announcements the session was concluded with the benediction.

FOURTH DAY.

After religious service Question 2 was called. The characters of the following were passed and they were continued on trial: McKendree M. Black, Elbert T. Breland, Charles F. Emery, Daniel Scarborough, A. Harvey Shannon, J. D. Ellis and Thomas Henry Harrod. J. C. Ellis was continued in the class of the second year. A. C. Flowers and J. F. Marshall were located at their own request.

The following were admitted into full connection: D. Vandenburg, R. H. Barr, H. W. Van Hook, P. D. Hardin, A. T. Bell, W. J. Roberts, and H. G. Hawkins.

At this day's session the passage of character was completed, and all the ministers were found blameless in their life and official administration.

The following were introduced to the Conference: Dr. J. J. Tigert, Book Editor; Dr. Wm. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College; Rev. N. Augustus, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Rev. James A. Moore, professor in Millsaps College. The latter transfers to the Mississippi Conference from the North Alabama Conference. Rev. E. E Langford was announced as having transferred from one of the Texas Conferences.

Shortly before adjournment the report of the Joint Board of Finance was read and adopted. The report embodies a resolution for the setting apart of a special day for presenting the claims of our superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers. The committee proposes to prepare and furnish each pastor a programme to be used on that day, and thus secure greater uniformity. A deficit of about $33 was reported on the assessment for Bishops. The assessment for the Conference claimants for the year just past was $5,000, of which $4,203 20 was raised and only apportioned. Of this sum $203 was from other sources than the regular collections, so that the deficit is really about $996.

Bishop Keener's address to the class admitted into full connection was able, edifying, and characteristic of the man. The Bishop stressed the experience of conversion, showing that it takes years to realize the depth of the inward change. The neccessity of growth in the Christian life, of being changed from glory to glory, of receiving grace for grace, were points forcefully presented. He mentioned the fact that some will not say, "Forgive us our trespasses," for they think they have gotten beyond that. Then he quoted the death-bed testimony of Mr. Wesley, who said: "I the chief of sinners am, but Christ died for me." The Bishop warned the young men against violating or minifying the discipline of the church. "We must move," he said, "in phalanx, for everything in Methodism is under discipline. There are no self-appointed itinerants nor local preachers."

SUNDAY.

The Bishop after the sermon Sunday morning ordained the following deacons: Traveling deacons—Harris B. Vandenburg, Paul D. Hardin, Adolphus T. Bell, Henry G. Hawkins. Local deacons—Jos. M. Alford, Geo. Marion Hull, John Robert Hays, Joseph Alonzo Bishop, Murray G. Felder, J. Nicholas Broadway, McKendree M. Black, J. Harvey Shannon, John D. Ellis, Thomas Henry Harrod.

After a sermon at three in the afternoon, by Dr. Tigert, the following were ordained traveling elders: George A. Guice, John W. Crisler, Henry W. Wallace, Kirby S. Enochs, Wiley J. Ferguson, William M. Stevens, Francis M. Keen.

FIFTH DAY.

The Conference was greatly saddened soon after the opening of the morning session by the announcement of the death of Rev. J. S Hodges, a young man of much promise, who this year served the Carey circuit. His illness had prevented his coming to Conference. Bro. J. M. Weems, his presiding elder, paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of the deceased brother, who was admitted into the Conference just two years ago. Hymn 618 was sung, and the Conference was led by Bro. T. M. Brown in prayer.

The members of the various Standing Committee having served for four years, new committees were appointed.

The report of the Orphans' Home Committee, which was now read and adopted, contained a resolution providing for the appointment of a commission consisting of two preachers and one layman to confer with a like commission from the North Mississippi Conference and report plans, etc., to the next Conference.

Next followed the reading and adoption of the report of the Church Extension Board, in which it was stated that of the $2,800 assessed for this cause, only $1 584 had been raised.

The Committee on Publishing Interests made mention of the flourishing condition of our Publishing House, expressed gratification at the increased circulation and editorial management of our Southern Methodist Review, heartily commended our general organ, the Nashville Advocate, the Review of Missions and the Sunday-school publications of our House, and pledged the support of the Epworth Era. The following resolutions, which formed part of the report, were duly adopted:

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to co-operate heartily with our Conference colporter in getting the books of our Publishing House into the hands of all our people.

Resolved, That we will earnestly endeavor to put the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE into every Methodist home within our Conference, and that we will do all we can to prevent the ADVOCATE being crowded out by certain papers published at a distance which by adopting certain racy methods more diverting than commendable, or by stressing some controverted dogma, seek patronage from a wide area, and can, therefore, afford to ask lower rates.

Resolved, That the presiding Bishop be requested to reappoint Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor and publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; and that Revs. W. B. Lewis, R. J. Jones and R. W. Bailey be elected Publishing Committee for the same.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, Sec'y.

The Committee on Education, in its report, felicitated the Conference on the continued prosperity of our several institutions of learning, and heartily endorsed the management of the same. Mention was made that over sixty preachers and sons of preachers are now attending Millsaps College. The endowment plan of raising funds for Whitworth College was approved. Regret was expressed at the resignation of Rev. W. H. Huntley, president of Port Gibson Female College. Provision was made in accordance with the recommendation of the General Board of Education for the organization of a Conference Board of Education, of district and also local boards for the better correlation of our educational work. Following the reading of this report speeches were made in behalf of the schools under the auspices of our Conference. Dr. Wm. B. Murrah ably represented Millsaps College, which he said was not a rival of Centenary, but rather a sister in the grand work of education; Rev. J. W. Chambers made a telling appeal in behalf of Whitworth College, his purpose being to carry out the plans of the lamented Dr. H. F. Johnson for endowing Whitworth, and thus in the course of time do away with all tuition fees. Rev. T. B. Holoman next addressed the Conference in behalf of East Mississippi College, which is prospering under his excellent management. Rev. P. A. Johnston spoke a good word for Centenary. Edward McGehee College was represented by Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, and also by Dr. Hunnicutt. At 12:30 the Conference adjourned until at three o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

All other matters having been attended to, the afternoon session was devoted mainly to the reading and discussion of reports from the Standing Committees. The Committee on Temperance, in its report, reaffirmed the previous strong declarations of our church respecting intoxicants. Other committees which reported were: The Committee on Sabbath Observance, on the Spiritual State of the Church, on Sunday-schools, and on the Bible Cause. After the reading of the last-mentioned report, Rev. J. W. McLaurin, agent of the American Bible Society, addressed the Conference, giving some interesting statistics with reference to the work of this society, and asked for greater co-operation in the grand work of furnishing humanity with the Word of Life.

The statistical secretary announced that the Mississippi Conference now has 35,000 members within its bounds, we having lost about 5,000 members by the late transfer of territory to the Louisiana Conference. The net gain in membership during the year has been over 2,000. The amount raised for foreign missions is $5 897.21; for domestic missions, $2,532.81. The number of pastoral charges is 120; the number of parsonages, 91.

Just before the reading of the appointments the Conference passed resolutions of sympathy for Rev. D. A. Little on account of his long and serious illness, which prevented his attending the Conference.

Yazoo City was elected as the place for holding the next Conference.

After a resolution of thanks to the people of Meridian for their kind hospitality to the members of the Conference, followed the reading of the appointments.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible
FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor Sunday-School Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. BEREFT.

BY LILLIAN GREY.

The baby lies
With lolded eyes.
And hands at rest upon his breast;
So whitely chill,
So strangely still—
O mother, mother! let him sleep,
For many eyes wake but to weep.

The curling hair
Needs not your care,
Nor restlessness your soft caress;
Such quiet feet,
That late were fleet—
O mother, mother! let them stay,
For many feet go far astray.

And many a life
Is marred with strife,
And sin and hate oft lie in wait,
And dangers stand
On every hand—
O mother dear! it may be best
The baby early went to rest.

And yet—and yet,
To ne'er forget,
Nor cease to long with yearning strong,
By day or night
For touch or sight—
O mother, mother! give him up,
God bids thee drain this bitter cup.

There is a place
Of solemn grace,
Where flowers grow and free winds blow,
And grasses cling,
And wild birds sing—
O mother, mother! leave him there,
And plead to Heaven for strength to bear!

Pleasing Mother.

Mothers are usually pleased with the successes of their children. This is especially true in their life after leaving home. A mother watches the successive steps and efforts of her children as only a mother can. If they succeed in their callings, she rejoices as no one else can. If children appreciated the concern that is felt for them, and the earnest desire for their success that follows them everywhere by their mothers, they would care vastly more about pleasing them than is often the case.

Pleasing mother should be a habit with children. Early in life they should begin the cultivation of thought and effort with reference to the gratification of her wishes and of making her happy. If they would do this they would find daily opportunities for speaking kind words and rendering such helpful services and showing such noble traits of character in dealings with others, as would gladden the heart and lighten the cares of mother in a way too often little thought of. If boys, if girls, could but realize their indebtedness to their mothers they certainly would generally be very much more anxious about pleasing them.

The great men of the world, like John Quincy Adams, James A. Garfield, and others, who have acknowledged their great indebtedness to their mothers, took great delight in pleasing them. But most of all their noble lives, their courage in doing right, and their honorable achievements in public life were especially pleasing to their noble mothers. Hardly a higher tribute can be paid to any young man's success in life than that "it pleased his mother."—Religious Telescope.

True Economy.

Some women entertain curious ideas of what constitutes economy. A fragile little housewife saves seventy-five cents each week because she can not afford to hire some one to do the ironing. But she never hesitates to pay a dollar a pair for stockings, or two dollars for a pair of gloves, or three for the doctor's visit occasioned by overtaxing her strength. Another considers fruit a luxury beyond the reach of the family purse, but she has no scruple whatever in buying new material for the dress which she has worn only a few months, and employing a dressmaker to alter the sleeves to accord with the present voluminous fashion. We recall a dear woman, the delicate mother of six active children, who would not save her strength by using a carpet sweeper, because, she said, "They do wear out the carpet so." But the habit of what she called economy wore her out long before the carpets, and the motherless children have the things mother saved instead of her precious self. True economy considers other values than dollars and cents. It also studies how to secure the largest returns from the expenditure of money. The purchasing power of a dollar varies greatly in the hands of different women. She who has the most to show, not necessarily in material goods, or increased savings in the bank, but in health and comfort, in friendships and growth of character, is the one who has most wisely used her Lord's talents.—Selected.

An English Custom to Be Imitated.

A generation or so ago family worship was common in the great majority of Protestant homes. It was usual for the head of the house, whether he was a church member or not, to have morning or evening prayers, and not infrequently both. The custom has, unfortunately, lapsed. Even when the father and mother are consistent church members family worship is frequently an unknown custom. It is not so in England, and Mr. Bayard, in an address to his neighbors the other night, paid a nice and a deserved compliment to English manners and English customs.

"I could tell you," said Mr. Bayard, "of other experiences somewhat of a varied character, tasting of the delights of a genial and refined hospitality. I have never passed a night in any house in England in which that family did not kneel every morning in common prayer to the Ruler of the world. Everywhere it is done. It is not done ostentatiously, but it is done by the hearts of the people, and it is almost their universal practice. I have been a long time there and do not remember that I have heard any oath. I have been a long time there, and I do not remember, I am sure I have never heard at any entertainment, a story that a man would object to telling to his wife, his sister or his daughter."—Watchword.

Silent Power.

There are persons whose very presence is a benediction. From some almost unexplained reason you feel drawn into their company, and know yourself better because of it. They do not lay hands on you, and they do not preach a sermon to you, and still no preacher living ever won and melted your heart as do they.

I truly could not have a holier wish than that something of like influence might be born from your very presence. Not many are talkers. You could not write a sermon and much less could you preach it. The presence of pen and ink and paper would set you in a flurry, and you could do nothing. Not many are wonderful workers. You are shut up in the home, and little time and strength do you have for the pushing on of any large reforms. But all this does not prevent the sweet influence of a Christian life from flooding out as the light floods out from the sun. It is possible for you on the street, it is possible for you wherever you go, to be a silent power, stirring and moulding and healing everyone whom you meet.—Selected.

The Value of the Family.

Our sense of the value of the family needs to be revivified and roused. The family, the great institution of paradise, the scene of purest love, the nursery of infancy, and the stimulus and shelter of all the virtues! Each man and woman has a duty to this end. A homeless civilization is sure to be a satanic one; the vices will flourish and the virtues be nipped by the untimely frost. It is only in the religious household we may hope to find children who, as manhood dawns, will respond to the sense of duty by following Christ in the serene and bloodless triumphs of his kingdom on earth. Back of the good man must needs be the good household. Here and there may be a saint and an apostle won from the dens of vice; but, unless the den be reformed, a miracle only can insure the safety of the new convert. In the future, as in the past, the solid and reliable men and women, the leaders in business and society, and the pillars in the church of the Lord Jesus will be found in the quiet and holy homes of the land.—Zion's Herald

Cross or Nervous.

Five-year-old Mary had fretted and made herself generally disagreeable, and at night her mother put her to bed with a feeling of relief. "There, child," she said, as she kissed her good-night, "I hope you won't be so cross to morrow." Mary had cuddled down in the blankets, but at this she sat upright again. "Ah!" she said, "when it's me, you say 'cross;' when it's you, you say 'nervous.'"

One of the poorest economies is to keep children who are anxious to study away from school because times are hard and they can earn a little by going at once to work. In the competition of the modern world the capacity of availing one's self of the opportunities of life largely depends upon the trained faculty and range of vision only to be gained by a thorough education. The so-called "self-made men" are not arguments for the opposing view. Probably no instance of a "self-made man" could be cited which would not show that, with greater advantages, he might have attained to greater power. A minister of our acquaintance recently said in our hearing that he had put all that he had saved into his children; and one could not but think, as he looked into their bright, intelligent faces, that he probably made the best kind of investment.—The Watchman.

Distinction may be won by a wise use of the odd ends of life. Oliver Wendell Holmes achieved literary distinction, though he was one of the busiest and most successful of physicians, and professor of anatomy in Harvard College; the secret of his success as a man of letters being that he kept the pen busy during the spare moments which ordinary men would have allowed to go to waste. By duly economizing stray bits of time, Mr. Edmund C. Stedman, the well-known banker, obtained his well earned reputation as poet and critic. Genius, allied to industry, finds expression under all conditions.

You can not afford to hunt down ill-natured criticisms, or to worry over them. Profit by them as far as they are just; answer them by doing well.

Hygiene.

The Duty of Sleep.

The sleeping room is nature's repair shop, the place of recuperation and renovation. There are persons who sometimes tell us that some great man, such as Napoleon Bonaparte, only slept four or five hours in twenty-four. But Napoleon Bonaparte was a poor example to follow. His restless spirit kept the world in an uproar a good share of his life, he was broken in health long before he was defeated in battle, and finally, fretted and chafed in his captivity, he died aged fifty-three, long before he had reached the allotted age of man.

If a man would last, he must rest. If he would make his life calm and strong, glad and useful, he should have abundant sleep, and to obtain it he should avoid late hours, and should especially avoid stimulants. The man who takes anything to keep himself awake is making a great mistake, and is preparing himself for future troubles. A man who keeps awake with stimulants now will be trying to put himself to sleep with chloral by and by. A woman who drinks strong tea to keep herself awake will by and by be taking opium to benumb her senses that she may get a little rest.

One of the great hindrances to sleep is a restless anxiety about things to come. There is so much to be done that some people feel that they can hardly take time to sleep; but six, seven or eight hours of good, solid sleep, begun at nine o'clock at night, is a much better preparation for a hard day's work than any amount of midnight toil or restless tossing upon the bed in the watches of the night.

It is a matter of duty for persons who fear God and serve him to see to it that they have their sleep. They must not be cheated out of it; they must not be harassed until sleep forsakes their eyes; they must rather bid their cares depart, and commit soul and body, business and estate, friends and foes, to the care of a loving Father. They must make it their business to sleep.

There is nothing more favorable to healthful slumber than the peace of God that passeth understanding. With that peace we can lay ourselves down and sleep, and awake because the Lord sustains us. And we can prove how vain it is for men to rise up early, and sit up late, and eat the bread of sorrows, and strive and struggle to gain those things which God is willing to give, and which he gives his beloved while they are asleep. Our heavenly Father is able to do exceeding abundantly above our utmost thought, our utmost desire; and it is for us, knowing his love and care and tenderness, to resign ourselves into his kind hands, committing the keeping of our souls unto him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator, fearing no evil, but casting all our care on him who careth for us; who has been with us from the beginning; who has promised to be with us to the end; who has said: "I will never leave you nor forsake you." In our sickness he smooths our pillow and makes all our bed; in our weariness he gives us abiding rest; and in the toils and conflicts that fall to our earthly lot he supports and protects and strengthens and defends his feeblest children.

Lie down and sleep, then, O children of the Most High! Let sorrows and doubts and fears be gone. Cast off the restlessness and weariness which has disturbed your souls, and let the peace of God which passeth all understanding keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ our Lord.—The Safeguard.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

MEAT AND TOMATO SCALLOP.—For one pint of finely chopped meat allow a pint of tomato sauce made as follows: Simmer one quart of tomatoes for twenty minutes, then press through a sieve. Melt without browning one tablespoonful of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and stir until smooth. Add two cups of the tomato and cook, stirring constantly until it thickens. Season with salt and pepper. Grease a baking-dish, put in a layer of the meat, then a layer of the tomato sauce, and so on until all is used. Cover the top with bread crumbs and bake twenty minutes. If there is less than a pint of meat, make up the quantity with bread crumbs, mixing them with the meat.—Table Talk.

A KNIFE

In the hand of a Surgeon gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Breach, Ideally cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large. Fistula, and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

DANTZLER—SARAH ERAN, daughter of William and Mary Griffin, was born April 26, 1837; was united in marriage to Mr. L. N. Dantzler, Nov. 18, 1857; assumed the solemn vows of membership in the M. E. Church, South, in 1858, and very peacefully passed from earth to heaven at 10:45, Sunday night, Nov. 11, 1894. She was 57 years, 6 months and 16 days old; had nearly reached the 37th anniversary of her happy marriage; had completed an active and signally useful service to her Lord and Master of 36 years, and died honored and loved by the thousands who knew her pure life and noble character.

Mrs. Dantzler was a central and influential figure in all the circles in which she moved. Her rich endowment of mind and heart fitted her for the easy occupancy of a foremost place among the noblest Christian women of our land. She wisely and faithfully endeavored to measure up to the grave responsibilities of her high position in society and the church, and her record of multiplied activities, of loving ministries, of golden deeds, of gracious achievements, attest the sincerity and force of her purpose and the depth of her consecration to God's service. She was specially active in visiting and ministering to the relief of the needy poor. Where there was distress and want she delighted to go; and many tell, with tearful eyes and with bosoms heaving with emotion, of the tender words with which she observed, of the help with which she relieved, and of the comfort with which she encouraged them—to them she was a veritable angel of mercy. In their homes her name and loving ministries will abide as precious memories.

Sister Dantzler appeared at her best in her home. To her happy union with Bro. L. N. Dantzler were born eleven children. Four preceded their mother to the "Continuing City," to the "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Seven are still living—four sons and three daughters. Of these six are members of the Methodist Church. Two of the seven are officers in the Moss Point Church. She tenderly loved her husband and children, and held an absolute sway over their hearts. Their devotion to her was something beautiful. Her gentle, loving influence dominated the family circle and made it an ideal home—one always full of sunshine and happiness. Visits to that happy home were always seasons of great pleasure to her many friends. No home in all the church furnished greater attractions or gave warmer welcomes to the pastor.

Sister Dantzler was quiet, undemonstrative in her religious life, but faithfulness to her convictions of duty characterized her service of 36 years in the church of Christ. She was a member of the Woman's Missionary Society, the Juvenile Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society, and was actively identified with the work by which the interests of these societies were promoted. She always contributed with marked liberality to every enterprise of her church, and greatly rejoiced in its prosperity. She loved her pastors and their families, and manifested unpassing thoughtfulness about their comfort and happiness. When there was sickness and trouble in the parsonage home she came to comfort and help. The news of her death will carry mourning to many preachers' families who have been the beneficiaries of her tender ministries.

During her illness of several weeks' duration, Sister Dantzler enjoyed the blessed assurance of her acceptance with God. She mightily triumphed over all the powers of darkness. Not a doubt disturbed her. Her soul was filled with heavenly raptures.

This death removes from us one of the brightest Christian characters and one of the most useful lives among us, and we greatly mourn her loss. But with her immortality is a blissful experience. T. W. ADAMS.

Moss Point, Miss., Nov. 14, 1894.

McLAURIN—MALCOLM GILCHRIST McLAURIN was born Oct. 1, 1875; died June 19, 1894, aged eighteen years eight months and eighteen days.

Malcolm was for several years a member of our Union Church School. He spent one year at Centenary College. This was the last year of his life. He came home from college affected with weariness and languor. These symptoms developed into typhoid fever. No one thought that Malcolm would die. He was so young, strong and vigorous. But the unexpected happened. Surrounded by loved ones, calmly he died. His remains were brought from the old Gilchrist home and buried at Union Church. The funeral services were conducted by Mr. Walter Butler, a fellow-pupil of the deceased, and now a faithful young minister.

Malcolm was a boy of good ancestry. He was heir by birth of covenant blessings. His father was a godly man and an earnest preacher. His mother is a good, true Christian. Thus Malcolm could claim the blessings of Christian birthright. Through all his short life he was pure-minded, honest and truthful. With regrets for his death and hope for his future, we lay him away safe in the memory of his loved ones. C. W. G.

Union Church, Miss.

ARMSTRONG—MATTIE REGINA, daughter of John O. and Kate C. Armstrong, was born Dec. 8, 1876, and fell on sleep in McComb City, Miss., Nov. 22, 1894. She joined the Baptist Church, October, 1892, and until death claimed her immortal spirit she lived a consistent member of the same.

Her father and mother who knew her best say of her Christian life that all she had was consecrated to the cause which she so much loved, that of her family and her God. Her greatest pleasure seemed to be while serving others and comforting the distressed. Though so young, she undertook the care of a little babe that was left motherless, and, as an angel of mercy, gave her time and care to the one whom God had thrown providentially in her path; and while she regretted to part from all her loved ones, yet the separation from this trust seemed to be the hardest to give up and be her greatest regret.

A pure girl, with purpose high and noble; a true friend, with deference and respect for all; a loving sister, faithful to a fault; an obedient child, devoted to father and mother, and a faithful Christian has passed from time to eternity, from earth to heaven, from a life of sorrow, trials and afflictions to a life of joy and perfect peace.

May the God of all grace bless the father and mother, brother, sister and friends with the grace and power to live as God would have them, so when life is ended they may meet with their loved ones around the throne of God! M. L. BUATON.

ELLISON—T. P. ELLISON was born in Alabama, Sept. 27, 1809, and died Nov. 28, 1894, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He was married to Miss Polly Moore, July, 1831, who still lives to mourn her irreparable loss. Eleven children were born unto them, six of whom are still living. Two of his sons were in the Virginia army, and were both killed. He moved to Yazoo county in 1827, and settled on Big Black, and there spent his long and useful life.

He helped build the first church at New Hope, or Ellison's Church, and then joined the Methodist Church there in 1838, and for over fifty-six years continued a useful member as class leader, steward, and trustee.

Father Ellison was one of the most exemplary Christians ever known in this county. He was simple, pure, and unostentatious as a Christian; always faithful to his church, rarely ever absent. All who knew him revered him, and looked to him as a model of piety and integrity. When on his death-bed, he told me that all was well, leaving a bright testimony of his full assurance of an inheritance in heaven. D. C. LANGFORD.

FAIRLEY—JOHAN A. FAIRLEY was born in Jackson county, Miss., Nov. 3, 1854, and died in Jackson county, Miss., Jan. 31, 1894. He was happily converted in 1886, at New Prospect Camp Meeting. He immediately erected a family altar. His wife not being a Christian woman, so bitterly opposed him in his family worship, and otherwise, that it finally resulted in a separation between them as man and wife. But in all this trouble he stood firm religiously, and when he came to the Jordan he faced death with a smile, and with the language of Paul he could say: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be unto God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

He has left several children, a good Christian mother, and several sisters to mourn his loss. But I will say to all of them: Look up; he is at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for you. J. H. HOLLAND.

WILSON—CARROLL WILSON, second son of B. L. and Fannie E. Wilson, died in Oak Grove, La., Nov. 9, 1894, aged twelve years and four months.

Carroll was a steady, true and obedient boy, and has left a great vacancy. He was not a member of the church, alas!—but just before he died he said he loved God, and was not afraid to die. His death falls heavy upon his mother, who a little over three years ago lost her husband, who was assassinated by a lot of roughs and hoodlums for no other reason than that he was opposed to the Lottery.

Trials hard have come down upon Sister Wilson; but God's grace is sufficient. May God sanctify this death in the family to the good of others! H. S. JOHNS.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

If we would bring a holy life to Christ, we must mind our fireside duties as well as the duties of the sanctuary.—Spurgeon

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM, IDYLLS OF THE KING, THE PRINCESS

Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the ar motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by manly imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Louisiana Conference Appointments.

There should be, it seems to me, corrections made or attention called to certain errors in the announcement of the appointments of the Louisiana Conference. For instance, in Shreveport district it should be: Fort Jessup, to be supplied; Fort Jessup mission, to be supplied by H. Williams. Anacoco and South Vernon, to be supplied by H. C. Murphy.

In Opelousas district it should be: Lake Charles, Robert J. Harp—Jackson Street, R. W. Randle; Berwick, to be supplied by B. R. Montgomery.

There may be other errors, but these I know as per copy.

A Necessity.

For some time past all the Northern papers have been actively engaged in the work of waging war upon the innumerable impure and deleterious food products that are thrown upon the markets by unscrupulous manufacturers in all parts of the world. This is what started the Pure Food Expositions being given throughout the country, the success of which has been unprecedented. They have placed consumers in a position to know exactly what food products are apt to prove unhealthy or even fatal to consumers. It is the aim of the managers of the Pure Food Exposition, to be given in this city next month, to down the rascality that permeates almost every branch of the food-packing or manufacturing trade, for it is very necessary that in an undertaking of this kind the direct attention of the consumer should be attracted to the evil in order that it may eventually be stamped out or, at least, diminished.

In a "glove contest," which took place in this city on Dec. 14, one of the pugilists was killed. A blow in the face knocked him down, his head striking the floor, from which he never recovered. "Knocked out."

The pawnshop established by St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church of New York for the benefit of the poor has been so successful that the congregation is trying to raise another $100,000 to put into it. It pays its own expenses.

The official report of the Board of Health shows that diphtheria is on the increase in this city. In October there were 51 cases, with 30 deaths; in November, 104 cases, but the number of deaths was not mentioned; on Dec. 14 there were 45 cases and 4 deaths.

The trial and conviction of Eugene Debs, who was the central figure in the great railroad strike of last Summer, is perhaps the closing scene of the most momentous industrial disturbance that has ever occurred in this country. The trial has just been concluded by the conviction and sentencing to imprisonment of Debs and a number of the accused. Debs gets six months' imprisonment, while his subordinates receive shorter terms.

The Young Men's Business League, the New Orleans Law Association and the New Orleans Bar have united in a petition to the Mayor and City Council to provide for the purchase of land occupied by the old buildings of Tulane University as a site for a new and fireproof structure for the accommodation of the civil courts and their several offices, and to furnish appropriate quarters for the Law Library and for the offices of the recorders and registrars of deeds, mortgages and the like.

Ambrym, one of the New Hebrides Islands, disappeared beneath the sea on Nov. 13. Volcanic action was the cause. A native village, with all its inhabitants, disappeared with it.

On Dec. 16 the strengthening Japanese force made another attack on the Chinese, who were advancing from Saihashu. The latter fought with vigor, but were completely routed, fleeing in disorder. The Japanese pursued the enemy as far as Chokinshi and captured four guns and several prisoners.

The German government is evidently in earnest in its efforts to retaliate upon this country for the damage done German trade by the one-tenth of a cent discriminating duty on sugars produced by bounty-paying countries. The duties on cotton seed oil and cotton seed products have been made practically prohibitive, and the recent prohibition of the importation of American cattle is being rigidly enforced.

Brand the Claim As False.

World's Fair Officials Expose a Pretender to an Award.

CHICAGO, ILL.——One of the odd results of the World's Fair is the claim now made to awards by some who were not even exhibitors. Officials of the Exposition have not as yet taken final action in the matter, believing the quick wit of the people will detect the spurious claims. But to the case of a New York baking powder, that has been widely advertising an award, the attention of the Chief of Awards for Agriculture has been directed. He brands the claim of this pretender as false, declaring "Neither the records of this department, nor the official catalogue of the World's Columbian Exposition, show that this New York Company was an exhibitor; consequently it could not receive an award at the World's Fair."

Those who fairly won their honors at the Fair seem disposed to treat this fraud as any other fraud should be treated. The Price Baking Powder Company, of Chicago, having received the highest award, say they are convinced their claims, and those of all other holders of rightful honors, will be fully vindicated by the public.

The Universal Peace Union has forwarded to the Emperor of Germany a petition, urging his consideration of the proposition that Germany restore to France the portion of Alsace-Lorraine whose occupants speak French. The act of the union is based on the publication of the proposition in an international magazine this month, and the petition to the Emperor recites that the measure will result in the permanent reconciliation of France and Germany.

The neighboring Dominion of Canada will again be forced to face the embarassments of a ministerial reorganization, owing to the death of Sir John Toompson, the Premier, who expired suddenly at Windsor, England, a few days ago. The Canadian Premier was in England in attendance on a colonial conference, and had proceeded to Windsor Castle to be sworn in as a privy councilor. After that ceremony he was taken suddenly ill and died in a few minutes from heart disease.

A Christmas Present.

In this holy Christmas time all Christian hearts feel the glow of gratitude to him whose birth we celebrate. The best expression of this gratitude is in gifts to the needy, who are Christ's representatives. Here is a case where gratitude to our Lord may find expression in doing good to one of his needy children. We have a young preacher in Centenary College whose resources have failed. Those who have helped him so far (and their help has been highly appreciated) have completely failed. He has waited and hoped in vain for three months. Shall he be compelled to quit his studies? He is a faithful, humble student preparing for his future ministry, and, without some immediate relief comes, the church will sustain a great loss in his discontinuance. Is there not some ADVOCATE reader who is abundantly able and willing to send me relief for this case? One hundred dollars for this purpose will be a Christmas present which Christ will greatly bless. Let me hear immediately. C. W. CARTER,

THE BIRTH OF CHRIST.

(Luke ii, 1-20.)

An angelic note contained wonderful information: "Unto you is born this day a Savior." This was succeeded by a most charming chorus: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, and good-will toward men." We observe

1. The auditors.

(1) They were shepherds. Unlearned and without guile. Unsophisticated. Jesus chose fishermen and publicans as disciples.

(2) The song of most wonderful import was sung in the night. Even now God gives songs in the night—the night of affliction and temptation.

(3) They were actively engaged in their usual work when the angelic choristers appeared. Saul found a crown while hunting his father's asses. God honors those who honestly do their duty.

2. The commendable course of the shepherds.

(1) Deemed it necessary to investigate. "Let us now go . . . and see." Most of the opposition to our holy religion results from prejudice. Go and see. Find out for yourselves whether what the Bible teaches is true or false.

(2) They came with haste. The King's business requires diligence. Most unbelievers intend to be religious some time; but the acquisition is postponed. Wait when the house is on fire? Flee for your life.

(3) They saw the babe. Never yet did a sinner fail to find Jesus if he earnestly sought for him. Seek and you shall find. When Mary Magdalene sought him in the garden, it was not long until she exclaimed: Rabboni—that is, Master.

(4) They made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child. When converted we are not to be a light under a bushel. Gladly and repeatedly tell what the Lord did for our soul.

A SONG OF THE SEASON.

BY LILLIAN GREY.

There's a thrill in the air,
There is joy in the heart;
There is generous stir
In the house and the mart;
For the Yule-tide is with us; make ready to greet
The Child of the manger; lay gifts at his feet!

No time for complaining,
For envy or strife;
Let the swift flying hours
With laughter be rife;
Put by all forebodings, your murmurings cease,
And hail One that cometh, the Bringer of peace.

Ii, led by false glitter,
You've wandered afar,
Come back to your loyalty,
Led by the Star;
Give up your vain quest and your wandering wild,
For the "pearl of great price" is the wonderful Child.

Ring out the glad carol,
Old strifes put away;
Deck chapel and church
In his honor to-day;
Let the great organs tremble with symphonies grand,
And send the glad tidings all over the land.

Oh, sing, little children!
And sing, young and old!—
Though the joy of Christmas
Can never be told—
But sing and rejoice, with your banners unfurled,
For the Christ that is come is the Hope of the world.

A Methodist Conference in a Celestial Capital.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

The China Mission Conference met in Soochow, the historic capital of Kiangsu, on the morning of Oct. 11 and adjourned on the evening of the fifteenth, after a most harmonious and delightful session. The weather was perfect throughout, with not a cloud in the sky, and just cool enough to put elastic movement into mental and physical energy. The days of storm and rain, which immediately preceded, gave way to fairest days and most glorious nights—all working together for the joy and cheer of the Conference. All the brethren and the members of the Woman's Board were entertained in Tien Sz Tsong—the several homes and schools that constitute the Methodist compound, and all within a radius of one hundred yards. On the first morning, at breakfast, each guest found a card on his plate with list of engagements for dinner and tea already arranged. Thus each home had the privilege of entertaining all the visitors once or twice during Conference, and the confusion of having an overcrowded table at one place and no guests at another happily prevented. The social features of the Conference occasion were greatly enjoyed, so far as time allowed, but the hours were much occupied with business. We had Conference sessions in the forenoon from 9 to 12, the Woman's Board representatives met at 2 P. M., I counseled with the presiding elders at 4, and the mission meeting was held at night. There was preaching by the native brethren at 8 and 7:30 P. M. each day, and at 4 the ladies had a Bible meeting with the women.

Promptly at nine o'clock on Thursday morning the session was opened, with every member present except one, soon to arrive from home. The old Conference hymn,

"And are we yet alive?"

never so thrilled me before, although the tune was sung in a strange tongue. But everybody in that large congregation, which almost filled our spacious First Church, sang with loud voice. Down some rugged cheeks, fresh from storm and battle, tears fell, and then, with an energy of tone expressive of the victory of faith, they heartily rang out the inspiring lines,

"Let us take up the cross
Till we the crown obtain."

A splendid body of men and a brave band of noble women! From Dr. Allen, the veteran of thirty-six years' service, to Bro. R. A. Parker, just completing his first hopeful year of missionary experience; and from Miss Lochie Rankin, the first heroic representative of the Woman's Board to her heathen sisters in China, to Miss Steger, of Missouri, just arrived by the last steamer to begin her missionary career—all, together with the native brethren, seemed strangely impressed with the power and presence of the Holy Spirit. In that frame the Conference began, and closed after a session of five joyous, but laborious, days.

Two secretaries were elected—one English, the other Chinese. Dr. Parker was interpreter, and sat by the chairman to state questions and put motions in Chinese. Thus the native brethren were able to take an active part in all Conference proceedings. The discussions were in their language, Dr. Parker keeping me advised of points and motions made. Business proceeded regularly, and, despite the different tongues, all minded the same thing.

The reports of the preachers, which were more than mere statistics, specially interested me, and brought out incidents of missionary labor that were most instructive. This was eminently true of the native pastors. One brother said the last had been his best year, and he had the strongest hope of his people becoming Christian. "Some of our meetings," said he, "are much like Pentecost at Jerusalem—multitudes come to preaching, probationers are more easily secured, and the older members have a better spirit. Our new members are well trained, and the probationers come not only to the meetings appointed, but at other times, and want me to instruct them. The members are contributing more liberally also. One of the stewards said to me not long ago, 'If you get so much money from the people for missions and other things, they won't pay anything for the preacher.' I told him the Lord would take care of that."

Another said his chapels were crowded as formerly, but a larger number sat quietly through the entire service. He said some sick people came to chapel, and went away well, or much improved—or so they claimed. Another said the people were becoming friendly, and seem desirous to learn of the doctrine. At one place a recent convert relieved their distress about getting a chapel by offering his own house for public service. He kept books in the room where visitors were received, and many remained to read with him, and thus learn of the Christian religion.

Another young preacher gave a thrilling account of a new convert enduring persecution at home with such patience that the family were being favorably affected toward Christianity. They ridiculed him, mixed uncooked and cooked rice for his meals, put thorns in his bed, and in every possible way attempted his humiliation; but all was borne with such a meek and quiet spirit as to commend his religion and command their respect.

All the missionaries gave cheering accounts of their work, and the success of the year was most gratifying. About 135 were added to the church, and nearly 200 additional probationers were receiving regular instruction, making the full members and probationers foot up 990. Such numerical results have never before gladdened the hearts of these faithful brethren. And all the indications point to a larger ingathering next year. One young man was admitted on trial, four were ordained deacons, and five to the order of elders.

Buffington College is located in Soochow, and under Dr. Parker's skillful management has achieved great reputation. It is really a well-equipped institution, and has already made some valuable contributions to the ranks of our ministry and to honorable positions in the Empire. I was quite surprised to see the chemical and physical departments so well supplied with the best apparatus, and to find classes of young men studying calculus and other higher mathematics. There were four graduates in the collegiate department last year, two of whom have entered the theological school, and are being prepared for the itinerant ministry. An additional building has become a necessity, in order to provide for an industrial department. All these educated boys can not be preachers and teachers. Christian young men are at a disadvantage in, if not debarred from, the national examinations, and, therefore, have no hope of official preferment or any influential share in the conduct of public affairs; but if taught civil engineering, telegraphy, etc., they can secure imperial positions because of their expert knowledge. If made to learn a trade, they will become useful and influential Christians in the artisan class. I commend this enterprise as worthy of liberal support, in which there is great promise to the cause of God in China.

The hospital here, founded by Dr. W. R. Lambuth, and conducted with eminent success by Dr. Park, has had a prosperous year under the superintendency of Dr. Hart. The number of patients treated is the largest in the history of the hospital, and its influence in the community and beyond increases with the weeks. Gin Li (pronounced Lee), in command of this military division, is a liberal friend and patron of the institution. I saw several of his soldiers in the wards, under treatment for gunshot wounds received in a recent battle with pirates and salt smugglers. A few days before the General sent his check for $200, and had, on a former occasion, shown his appreciation of foreign surgery. Another prominent gentleman sent a handsome board, with suitable character inscriptions, which was elevated to its appropriate place on the walls with rather imposing ceremonies. Dr. Park received a number of such testimonials. Before a serious operation is performed the family of the patient are required to sign and seal a document acquitting the surgeon of guilt in case it should prove fatal. This precaution is necessary to save trouble, if not life, from an infuriated mob. But successful surgery commands highest respect, almost idolatrous admiration. The hospital and dispensary, therefore, become efficient evangelistic agencies. At the forenoon clinics, while the numbers are waiting to have audience with the doctor, a chaplain preaches to them, and is expected to minister consolation and instruction to the patients in the wards. He finds ready access to the hearts of the afflicted. Here is one place—a missionary medical hospital—where the sick are not supposed to be injured by the visits and prayers of a pastor. A few such retreats from professional upstartism would be a blessing in America.

The Anglo-Chinese College in Shanghai matriculated 141 students during the past year. We have a splendid property and a fair equipment. Good work is done, but all feel embarrassed in not being able to retain the pupils longer. After a few years' instruction they readily secure lucrative positions, so great is the demand for such young men. Not sufficient time, therefore, is given to ground them in the great doctrines and experience of the Christian religion, nor are they sufficiently trained in the higher collegiate branches to become leaders in educational or literary work. But the demand for these boys is great. Eleven secured positions in some branches of the government service during the last year. When the anticipated changes in China take place—when telegraph lines are extended, postal and fiscal systems established, and other railroads built—need for the character of work proposed by the college will be intensified. I believe the institution has a great opportunity, and will make a grand history. Young men attending the institution pay tuition. Quite an intelligent, handsome student body they make.

There are also thirty-three day-schools, attended by 539 pupils, and taught by Christian teachers. Including the girls in the boarding and day-schools of the Woman's Board—860—we have 1,616 youth under Southern Methodist instruction in China. The value of these schools to the evangelization of this great Empire can not be estimated. All these children may not become Christians, but they can never be heathen any more. They have taken a long step forward which can never be retraced; have put their hands to a plow which will not let them look back. Out of these schools have already come some of our best workers and most earnest Christians. The outlay has brought large return. I wish we had money for similar investment at other points. It is wise missionary policy.

The representatives of the Woman's Board were called to meet daily at 2 P. M. These young women transact business most orderly and accurately. Their reports are written and quite full, embracing incidents which enliven and brighten the statistics. Committees report promptly and minutely. All the details of their work are inquired into diligently and rigidly. The very best results are sought from the investment made. Plans are freely discussed, and every woman votes her own clear judgment and honest convictions. I think their work has never been on a better basis, and was never administered more harmoniously and vigorously. Their day-schools are so located—contiguous to our churches—as to aid in building up Sunday-schools and congregations. This is wise. Unless thus intimately and sympathetically correlated, much of their labor would go to waste.

The Girls' Boarding-school, located near First Church, and under the immediate superintendency of Miss Pyles, is doing admirably. I had the pleasure of visiting the class-rooms and noting the methods employed. The dormitories are neatly kept, and the girls evidenced, in manners, dress, speech and song, that they were being carefully instructed. In that home Misses Gary and Waters also reside, but their work is out in the city, superintending the day-schools. And hard work it is. The Lord is blessing the cause committed to the hands of these dear young women.

The Woman's Hospital in Soochow, conducted by Dr. Anne Waters, of Mississippi, is doing admirable work. The number of patients treated is the largest in its history. The wards are quite full all the time, the clinics are crowded daily, and the multitudes of diseased made whole win name and influence for the Christian religion. Mrs. Campbell and a Bible woman instruct and exhort in the little chapel while the crowds are waiting their turn to be admitted into the consultation-room. Thus, as in the days and spirit of the Master, they take advantage of bodily affliction to administer spiritual remedies. So, while the diseased are made to take up their bed and walk, I trust many hear the great Physician also say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Dr. Waiters has been called into the homes of the official and wealthy classes, and has received distinguished consideration and flattering testimonials for efficient professional service.

The Conference was an occasion of spiritual power. It was a genuine and joyous "communion of saints"—a time of refreshing from the Lord. Hearts flowed together, experiences of higher living were given, and instances of answered prayer and divine guidance related which made the occasion a Pentecost. I esteem it one of the great privileges of my life to have been associated for days with these heroic men and consecrated women. The native brethren, I am told, partook generously of the joyousness of the Conference, and go out to another year's work more hopeful than ever before. By the way, the loneliest man in China is a young native preacher trying to establish work in a new place. He is not only alone—cut off from friendly communication with his own people—but is suspected of betraying them into the hand of "foreign devils." A foreigner, not at all dependent upon the people for social entertainment, having resources within himself for daily enjoyment, though entirely alone in a city of an hundred thousand, had less to endure and suffer than the neglected, rejected and suspected Christian Chinaman. That they stand up so bravely and accomplish so much can only be attributed to the sustaining and all-conquering grace of God.

By slow degrees access is gained to the higher classes. Bro. Anderson has received into his church—the Central, of Soochow—two gentlemen of the literary rank—the first fruits, I trust, of a great harvest in this famed city of scholars and governors. The only aristocracy in China is an aristocracy of letters. Culture alone can wear a crown. Every high official must pass through the Examination Hall. The Emperor can not appoint a man to chief office who has not won his degrees in a fair competitive examination. As little as we think it, culture controls Cathay. The literary classes are supreme. Of course, the system may be abused and circumvented, but the theory is wise. It is China's civil service that requires special fitness before appointment to office. Position is not a reward for partisan support. Now, to gain access to this class means much for Christianity. Our physicians and the hospitals are also throwing open barred doors, and introducing us to the literati. To Dr. Walters we were indebted for a visit to the ex-governor of a province who resides in Soochow. We were received in state by the venerable statesman, conducted into his inner reception-room, treated to tea many times, and shown distinguished courtesies. Dr. Walters has cured several sick members of his family, and he was loud in her praises. When a daughter of the present governor was ill he recommended her, and a messenger was dispatched; but the young physician was taking a little needed rest in Japan. Dr. Hart also has received like consideration for service rendered to distinguished families. Such incidents are eloquently significant when we think of the inveterate hostility to the very presence of the foreigner a few years ago.

The growing demands of our work make it necessary to provide facilities for publishing books and papers. A resolution was adopted by the Conference looking to the co-operation of all Methodist bodies in China, in the establishment of a Publishing House. The question of location was left open, but all agree that if the institution can be secured, it must be domiciled in Shanghai, the great commercial center of the empire. I commend it most heartily. If established, it will pay expenses from the day the first press begins to run, and in a little while will become a source of revenue.

On Monday night the 35th question was called and the appointments read—first, the representatives of the Woman's Board, then the members of Conference. With glad hearts and cheerful voices all joined in the parting hymn. The next morning boats were in line on the canal, and as one after another filled with passengers, the boatman pulled on the oars, and we waved them loving good-bys. Dr. Allen, longest in service, and revered by all, said he never felt happier or had stronger faith in the Mission. With a benediction upon his younger co-laborers, he boarded the little Methodist flagship, and led the way out the great gate and down the canal toward Shanghai. And so the gate of another Conference year has opened to the China Mission. May it be a double, wide-open gate of glorious triumph! To Bro. Anderson and his charming family, under whose roof ten days have been spent, I am indebted for a thousand delicate courtesies. For every one I have a brother's love.

Not Always Appropriate.

Some pastors invoke thanks upon the offerings of their churches. The Herald and Presbyter quotes a saying of D. Cuyler on this usage: "Dr. Cuyler notes the fact that in some churches the pastor, when collections are taken, receives the plates or baskets from the hands of the deacons, giving thanks and invoking a blessing on the contributions of the congregation. He adds: 'A good, sensible proceeding this, especially when there has been a good, generous contribution; but I have known some collections over which a "confession of sin" would be more appropriate.'"

The Salvation Army.

The oddest, sincerest, intensest religious enterprise of the present day is the Salvation Army. The key to it is its purpose—just to save men; nothing else. It does not want to do anything more, and attempts nothing else—no schools, no education, no religious training; nothing but to get men into the kingdom of God. It will get them in any way it can. It has no dignity to save, no conventionalities to consider. Why care for a sneer when there is a soul to save? It is an army in name, and in reality a church; but a very strange kind of a church. It is a cross between Methodism and Quakerism. Like old Methodism, it is religion on fire, or charged with electricity; and like Quakerism, it has no sacraments. It knows and cares nothing about baptism and the Lord's Supper, and yet it has its confession of the faith, in joining the Army, which does the office of baptism in the early church, and every meeting is scarcely less than a communion with Christ and one another. The Salvation Army hand-book, "Doctrines and Discipline," in answer to the question, "Does the Army consider baptism a duty that must be performed?" says: "Decidedly not! The Army only considers one baptism essential for salvation, and that is the baptism of the Holy Ghost." It reckons baptism with the Jewish rites of circumcision, shaving the head, and other ceremonies never intended to be permanent. All it wants is to save men, and it holds that baptizing them is not saving them. Just so the Lord's Supper is recommended to those who feel that it would help their faith; but it is not essential to membership in the Army, or to salvation. So the Salvation Army knows no formal church. Its members may, or may not, be members of the churches; but its theory is that the Army takes the place of the church. Where the rest of us say "church," it says "Army." It asks no converts to "join the church;" only to "join the Army." Joining the Army does not save anyone. He must be saved first, and then he is asked to join the Army and engage in the work of saving other people. Salvation is its only purpose, and an army its form of organization, because that is the most effective to save people.—Harper's Weekly.

Looking at the emotional element in preaching from the standpoint of the pew, some instructive testimony is furnished. There are preachers who sometimes, when we are off our guard, dash our eyes with tears, and we hastily wipe them away and are ashamed of ourselves to have been so easily and superficially moved. And we have listened to others who have wrought on us from beneath, and have broken up the great deeps of our natures, and our emotions have been made to roll with the swing of a great ground-swell, and for days we have continued to feel the mighty stirrings within us. And when we afterwards reflected upon our experience, we were no more ashamed that we were moved by the contemplation of the great truths which the preacher presented than that at other times we felt deeply in the presence of Niagara or Pike's Peak. Herein is the difference between the sudden gust from land-ward that creates a brief and noisy dipping among the sails and breaks the water into passing foam, and the long and deep-breathed nor'easter, that "blows great guns," and for days and nights shakes the shores with the thunders of the charging breakers.—Exchange.

The French courts are occupied with trials of ballot-box stuffers. All the tricks of Tammany Hall seem to have been practiced. At Toulouse a man is charged with having deposited in the ballot-box three hundred fraudulent votes—a sleight-of-hand arrangement. The French Republic seems to be firmly established!

The Crown Prince of Germany, a lad of fourteen, was catechised by the court chaplain on the subject of total depravity. At first the lad would not admit that his father was a sinner, but, being assured that it was nevertheless true, he remarked: "Well, it may be so; but of this I'm convinced: my mother is not a sinner."

That free silver coinage would only add to the millions of the Western silver kings does not enter the comprehension of many. Presenting silver bullion at the mint, it would be converted into dollars, giving the owner about two dollars for bullion which in the market is worth only one dollar. President Schurman, of Cornell, has decided that the study of Greek is not essential to intellectual culture. It has hence been eliminated from the curriculum of that institution. Listening to an address of Dr. Smith, general secretary of the Board of Education of our church, we noticed that, while he emphasized the mastery of Latin as indispensable to intellectual development, he did not make mention of Greek.

DAILY GRACE.

BY NAOMI.

Not for the talents ten,
Master, I pray;
Only for grace to do
Thy will each day.

Not for the word of power
Swaying each heart;
Only in work for thee
Taking glad part.

Not for the highest place,
Dear Lord, I ask;
Only a heart of love
Meeting each task.

Not for the voice of fame,
Transient, if sweet;
Only a resting-place
Low at thy feet.

Not for the end of life,
Bringing its rest;
Only to faithful be,
Doing my best.

So let me patient prove,
Feeling thee nigh;
Hearing thy cheering voice,
"Lo! it is I."

So let me gladly wait,
Doing thy will,
Till I shall see thy face,
Serving thee still.

Holiness.

From hearing a number of our "second-blessing" brethren preach, I have reached the conclusion that their idea of "holiness" is the acceptance of the residue theory and its logical sequence of a partial regeneration. That to be orthodox, this must be believed, must be preached; that we are to exhort and urge men to seek in believing prayer the removal and cleansing out of the heart the remains of the carnal mind left in it by a defective and imperfect regeneration. They also state if we oppose their theory on this subject, we can not be Christians.

In the course of more than half a century I have heard many scores of Methodist preachers, and I have never heard one who did not preach holiness as he understood it. They have all insisted we "must be born again," must be "new creatures;" that, spiritually, all must be new; that the old things of the unregenerate must pass away, "the old man" of sin must "be crucified." Then, these many preachers that I have been hearing these long years have always insisted that this thorough inward change was to be followed up and demonstrated by a strict and conscientious compliance with the Ten Commandments; with the first and great command, "Thou shalt love God supremely," and also the second, which is like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;" by doing as the prophet says God requires us to do, "To do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God;" to do in all our intercourse with others as we would be done by; to "add to our faith" all the graces; to grow up into Him in all things, who is the Head, even Christ; to continue in prayer, and to be faithful unto death, that we may "receive a crown of life." But it seems that all this is not enough in the eyes of our second blessing brethren. We must believe that our regeneration is partial, and that this partial work of the Holy Spirit must be supplemented and completed by a second cleansing, or blessing; and if we do not accept this, and think it unscriptural, and as such conscientiously oppose it, we can not be Christians.

We do not believe in the residue theory of a partial regeneration, leaving in the hearts of the regenerated a portion of the carnal mind, which is enmity against God; is not subject to the law of God, neither can be. We do not believe it because we do not believe it is taught in the Scriptures. Mr. Wesley was clearly not satisfied that the six texts he quoted in the sermon on "Sin in Believers" to prove the residue theory, proved it, and so twenty years afterward abandoned that view, and eliminated it from the Ninth Article of the Church of England. Our Calvinist brethren believe the residue theory is taught in the seventh chapter of the Epistle to the Romans. The Arminians do not believe this; our standard writers do not. Wesley did not, as he did not refer to it for proof of the residue theory. In the fifth chapter of the Romans, St. Paul gives us the experience of the justified man. He has "peace;" he has access by faith into this grace, wherein he stands and rejoices in hope of the glory of God; the love of God is shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto him. He was an "enemy;" is now "reconciled," and "rejoices in God." In the seventh chapter St. Paul gives us an inspired description of the experience, the struggles and self-despair of the enlightened, the awakened man, who sees the right, approves it in the enlightened reason of his inner man, and seeks to pursue it and act it out in his own self-righteous strength; but his carnal affections rebel; he can not, in his own unrenewed strength, do the things he would; evil is present, and his depraved affections continually lead him to do the things which his mere enlightened reason would not do. This painful struggle continues, until he, in self-despair, cries out: "Oh! wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from this body of death?" Then comes the triumphant and joyous statement, "I thank God through Jesus Christ, our Lord." Then immediately comes the blessed statement, "There is, therefore, no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Now, we submit that there are clearly two experiences described by St. Paul—one of a justified and regenerated man, and the other an awakened man struggling in vain with his depraved nature to escape sin in his own strength, and can not until he comes to Christ. We think it as unreasonable, as unscriptural as it is unkind, to fasten upon the blessed Holy Spirit the offensive charge of giving birth to spiritually scrofulous and leprous children. Let him believe this who can. I can not. J. B. WALKER.

P. S.—Bro. Featherston has sufficiently answered Bro. Burt. We can all well afford to wait for Bro. Burt to "tarry at Jericho" for the growth of more mature conclusions.

Dr. Foster's Accusation.

In the ADVOCATE, for Nov. 15, our good Bro. Foster, in his report of Bro. Manley's grand sermon, brings a charge against the ministry of the Methodist Church which is neither charitable nor just.

First, he affirms there is a "strong opposition to the holiness movement." If by this assertion he simply means to say there is a "strong opposition" to his view of holiness, he is right. But if he means to say that a strong opposition exists in the ministry of our church to the doctrine of holiness—that the child of God must be as "perfect as" his "Father in heaven is perfect"—he is wrong. I have been among Methodist preachers for more than half a century, and for more than a third of a century have been one myself, and I have not yet seen or heard one who opposed "the theory of holiness," nor do I believe one can be found who does so.

Had Dr. Foster said there is a "strong opposition" to the residue theory, personally, I would not demur to his indictment. It would have been more just and truer had he said that a "strong opposition" exists to the adequacy of regeneration. For, if he does not object to the cleansing work of the Spirit wrought in the heart by regeneration, there is no room for his theory of holiness. But not satisfied with so mild a charge as this, he goes on to say: "It is preached in Methodist pulpits all over the country, that people can not attain unto that perfect love of God, which constrains them to keep his commandments." For the purpose of pointing out the harshness and injustice of this charge, I have italicised a few words, to which I call the attention of his readers.

What is the meaning of all this? One of two things: either that "Methodist pulpits all over the country" are giving out a gospel that Christians can not keep God's commandments, or that Dr. Foster seeks to boost up a very uncertain theory by the exercise of an inflamed imagination which overreaches the facts in the case.

In conclusion, I deny the Doctor's charge, and call for the man who opposes "the theory of holiness" as taught in the Bible and in the Discipline of the church; and respectfully suggest that hereafter he substitute "residue" for "holiness." This is clearly the ground upon which he fights. To this we are opposed, and this only. J. A. PARKER.

Union Gospel Mission.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to make an appeal in behalf of the children of the Union Gospel Mission to your benevolent and generous readers. Christmas is coming, and the children of this Mission are to have a Christmas tree. I hardly know how it is to come; but through the past years God has never failed to gladden the hearts of the children of this Mission with gifts at the commemoration of the birth of his blessed Son. A present to these poor children means so much more than to the children of the wealthy and well-to-do. And, then, as many parents can not give, the giving by a religious body carries home so strongly to their hearts that God, their heavenly Father, is the giver, and thus put more vividly before their minds the fact of God's goodness.

Either money or gifts will be acceptable. And as many Christmas trees will be laden with gifts too numerous for claimants, through the generous profusion of the donors, these uncalled-for gifts can be used to furnish forth our Christmas tree, which will not be until Friday, Dec. 28, at 7:30 P. M. Thus a great joy will come to the hearts of our children by utilizing the mere redundance of other Christmas trees; and the superfluities of these will well fill our yawning emptiness and the eager expectancy of our poor children. It is an easy way of making many a poor child happy who never has a taste of the Christmas cheer of the rich.

Gifts or money can be sent to the Bible House, No. 163 Camp St.

There will be an entertainment or celebration, consisting of songs and recitations on the occasion, under the conduct of Mrs. M. B. Hillyard, to which the public are cordially invited.

Sanctification.

The brethren have been writing a great deal on the subject of sanctification. There may or may not be harm in the discussion, but "a tree is known by its fruit," and if they are in earnest people can judge whether they are sanctified without being told of it. Professions are vain unless backed by holy, upright lives. Sinners are seldom benefited by professions. They respect a man for his godly life, not for his loud professions. A wicked person is capable of judging whether a person is a hypocrite or not. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Correspondence.

South Carolina Letter.

On account of sickness I was unable to attend the recent session of our Conference. This was the first time that I have missed since I joined. It was a great affliction to me not to be able to meet with the brethren. I did not know that the annual gathering at Conference was so pleasant and profitable until I missed one. I learn that in many respects the session was very pleasant and profitable. Bishop Keener was on hand. On account of his feebleness he was at times unable to preside. This was very much regretted. Our efficient young secretary, Rev. E. O. Watson, was re-elected. He is filling the position with increasing acceptability.

The event of paramount interest was the election of an editor for the Southern Christian Advocate to succeed Dr. W. D. Kirkland. It was with much regret that we parted with Dr. Kirkland. He had served us and the church at large with great fidelity and courage. As I have said before, W. D. Kirkland is as true a friend to Methodism as ever breathed. He will be greatly missed among us. The election of any man to succeed him was an experiment; but I feel that the old Southern is safe in the hands of Rev. John O. Willson, the one elected. He is universally known and loved among us. If he doesn't succeed, it will not be for the lack of love and esteem.

Another question of much interest was the plan for the establishment of an orphanage. A plan was adopted and a committee appointed to work up the matter. Money has already begun to come and the orphanage seems to be an assured fact. Such an institution is greatly needed in our State, and it will be an everlasting disgrace to South Carolina Methodism if the work is not carried out.

Following is the report made by the statistical secretary: Local preachers, 149; traveling preachers, 201; members, 71,622; infant baptisms, 1,721; adult baptisms, 1,289; number Sunday-schools, 695; officers and teachers, 4,937; scholars, 40,529; number church buildings, 708; value, $835,566; number parsonages, 166; value, $242,675; other church property, $205,397. Paid presiding elders, $14,039; paid pastors, $99,361; Bishops' fund, $1,531; Conference, $7,988; foreign missions, $8,746; domestic, $8,004; church extension, $2,060; education, $1,905; expended on churches and parsonages, $40,173; other objects, $18,588. For some purposes the collections, as was expected, fell considerably short. In some parts of our State the financial depression is very great. We are looking and hoping for better times.

Since the session of our Conference one of our best men has died—Rev. R. N. Wells. He had just finished four years of successful work on the Charleston district.

We enter upon the new year with renewed consecration, and are praying for a year of unparalleled success. May the God of all grace grant us success!

May God prosper your noble journal, and bless it in its noble work.

The Foe to Saving.

If no workingman wasted his wages in any sort of riotous living, if all earnings were wisely and economically spent, most of the world's want and poverty and discontent would disappear. An exchange aptly says: "The labor question will remain open as long as the drinking saloons do." Dr. McLean, one of the witnesses before the Pullman Strike Commission, testified that the trouble among the employees was largely caused by the use of liquor. If there had been no saloons or liquor traffic, the great strike would not have occurred.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

In the "Cheering-up" Business.

When the hard times began last year it was reported that a clever woman declared that if she had to earn her living she would become a "general sympathizer," going to anyone who wished to pour out her troubles and worries, listening and comforting for a fixed sum per hour; the interviews to be strictly confidential, and the professional sympathizer never to allow herself to have pains or trials greater than those of her client. This seemed an odd little fancy, as impracticable as original, until a short time ago, when, reading over the lists which a Woman's Exchange prepares to meet the wants of its patrons, the eye fell upon this item: "In the cheering-up business. A lady who has had successful experience, will read to or amuse invalids or convalescents." Then there is such an occupation, after all, and one which this cheering lady has made successful as well. How does she manage her delicate work? by what cunningly devised means has she bottled up the sunshine which carries its brightness into the lives of those who are strangers to her? and from what founts does she draw sparkling, exhilarating draughts? and who, after she has spent her day in "reading to and amusing invalids and convalescents," cheers her when twilight gives her back to herself?

Yet while as a means of gaining a livelihood the business is undoubtedly new, it is really an old, very old, vocation to which from time immemorial women have spontaneously devoted themselves. In the home nest, as daughter and sister, a woman learns to express the sympathy of a loving heart, and in the new relations of wife and mother her opportunities increase immeasurably and unceasingly. Upon the so-called weaker partner has ever fallen the duty of lightening by her ready responsive cheerfulness the burdens borne by her lord and master. * * *

The men whom one must depend on in the dark hours of life, when illness and sorrows and losses depress the most buoyant nature, often possess in the highest degree the power of cheering—physicians, whose mere presence seems to bring healing; lawyers and clergymen, whose help glows with the unaffected goodness of their sunny natures; and others, weighted with the exacting cares of business life, who yet have a pleasant word and a bright smile in the darkest hour of their own troubles. Blessed be all, of whatever age, sex, or condition, who are "in the cheering-up business!"—Selected.

How to Kill a Parish Church.

[A staunch friend of the Church News in whose judgment we have confidence hands in this selection for publication. However, we think those for whom it is intended will never read it, and if they did, it would only vex them, and those who would take it kindly do not need it.—EDITOR.]

Absent yourself from morning service; it takes a dull and careless minister to stand up before empty pews.

Stay at home whenever it rains on Sunday, or is too hot, or too cold.

Never let the pastor know if he has done any good.

Take a class in Sunday-school, and be in your place about three Sundays in five, and late the other two.

Attend no church gatherings if you have an opportunity of going anywhere else.

If a stranger be near you in church, never hand him a hymnal.

Never speak to anyone you see there Sunday after Sunday unless you have been regularly introduced.

If you are ill, do not send word to the pastor, but let him find it out for himself. He will then probably call by the time you are well enough to go out and spend the day. In the meantime, take every occasion to tell other church people that you fear the minister is not much of a pastor; that he does not seem to know who are sick; that he has not been to see you for weeks, and that all the time you have been so miserable.

If times are hard, at once diminish or withdraw your subscription, for fear lest when you have paid for your cigars, ribbons, jewelry, etc., you may have nothing left for your holiday.

Always grumble at the sermon, and fear that you can not stand the draughts much longer.—Michigan Churchman.

Religious (?) Shirkers.

Shirkers are found in every community and in almost every church. They appear to be utterly devoid of conscience in regard to their personal obligations. They can look on the sin, poverty, and wretchedness of men, and not lift a finger for their relief. They can see their neighbors toiling, suffering, and making sacrifices in the cause of humanity, and not offer a helping hand, and feel no condemnation on account of their neglect. They are thoroughly selfish and useless, nor do they ever think they are doing wrong in doing nothing.

They are fearful and faint-hearted, or they are not in sympathy with the leaders in every good work, or they do not approve the methods adopted, or they consider the work beneath their dignity, or they are fully occupied with their own personal and private affairs, or some other excuse serves to satisfy them in their indifference to great, public, reformatory, and benevolent movements. Most shirkers comfort themselves with the reflection that they are not needed. They are not in the Sunday-school, the prayer meeting or the temperance movement because they have such a modest opinion of their own abilities that they hope they will not be missed.

But the cause of God suffers when the weakest one deserts his post. The threads of which a great cable are made are very slender. One of them would not support a pound weight. United and twisted together, they bear the strain of a great ship and hold it fast to the pier. The united efforts and prayers of all Christian people in almost any community would revolutionize its moral life.—N. Y. Advocate.

One Girl's Consecration.

What one girl's consecration will do is beautifully told as follows: "In the latter part of the last century a girl in England became a kitchen maid in a farmhouse. She had many styles of labor, and much hard work. Time passed on, and she married the son of a weaver of Halifax. They were industrious. They saved money after a time to build them a home. On the morning of the day when they were to enter the home the young wife rose at four o'clock, entered the front yard, knelt down, consecrated the place to God, and there made a solemn vow: 'O Lord, if thou wilt bless me in this place the poor shall have a share of it.' Time rolled on and fortune rolled in. Children grew up around them, and they became prosperous. One, a member of Parliament, in a public place declared that his success came from that prayer of his mother in the door-yard. All of them were wealthy—four thousand hands in their factories. They built dwelling houses for their laborers at cheap rents, and when they were invalided and could not pay, they had the house for nothing. One of these sons went to America, admired the parks, went back, bought lands, and opened a great public park, and made it a present to the city of Halifax, England. They endowed an orphanage, and they endowed two almshouses. All England heard of the generosity and good works of the Crossleys."

Afraid of the Holy Ghost.

In my early life I could not endure too much talking or preaching about the Holy Ghost, because he seemed to be so awful, so august and so great that I dared not entertain him. But I have ceased to be afraid of the Holy Ghost since I drank in this text, which tells us that joy is but another name for the indwelling of the Blessed Spirit, and those who are most filled with the Holy Spirit are the most winsome companions. In the spring their life runs most merrily, as they gather flowers by their children. By the winter fireside their merriment is the brightest and the sweetest. When a man is full of the Holy Ghost, you may always tell it by his abounding joy. Galatians v, 22, corroborates this, for we are told there that the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness. Think of the gentlest woman that you ever knew. Think of your mother's touch upon your fevered brow when you were a child. Remember that the Holy Spirit is as gentle as a woman's hand, as a summer zephyr, as the rippling laugh of a little child. Therefore, there is no need to be afraid of the Holy Ghost.—Meyer.

More Spiritual.

We can not be too spiritual. It is well, however, to have clear ideas of spirituality. A man may be very familiar with the Bible, and yet not be truly spiritual; and one may pray a great deal, and still lack much in spirituality. We have known some people who could repeat Scripture with remarkable fluency and pray with apparently the greatest freedom, and yet they were living quite unspiritual lives. What is it, then, to be vitally spiritual? It is to be modestly Christ-like. It is to have an unappeasable hunger for gospel truth. It is to be unswervingly obedient to Christ. It is to love prayer, not as an exercise, but because it brings the soul into communion with God. Let us be more spiritual.—Zion's Herald.

Small Things.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of subsoil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons, is impossible. A man may be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fiber of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."—The Examiner.

Work is the grand mission of all human beings. Play is an incident, and can be indulged largely only to the detriment of both the individual and the public. Civilization, as it advances, so far from dispensing with work, adds to the tale of duties. No man is so much at leisure as the savage who has few wants and no high ambitions. As the savage rises in the scale, becoming conscious of new wants and wider responsibilities to others, he finds additional exertion indispensable. He must not only work, he must work consecutively: there must be foresight and introductory preparation. He must co-operate with others, and become organized as a regular soldier in the army of labor. This means that he is taken out of the condition of the savage and placed in that of the civilized man, and it means, also, that the transformation is wrought by means of labor. Labor is the great school-master of man, whose discipline is both severe and salutary. To this drill of life we own both manly virtue and the success attained by its exercise along any of the lines of human industry. To do, and to do with purpose, is the glory of man; to be idle is to decline toward the condition of the savage.—Zion's Herald.

The tiny ray of sunlight which slips in through the crack of the shutter yesterday wrote with its golden pen these words upon the darkness within: "There is a great big world of sunshine, just like me, outside." Don't keep sunshine barred out from your soul. Open wide the shutters. Do not interpret the meaning of life from the darkness, but from the sunshine which falls upon it. The joy of yesterday which crept into your clouded life points you to a world that abounds with it. The satisfaction you felt today upon doing that good turn for another was as a drop to the ocean of satisfaction you will find if you make every other day just like this.—Ram's Horn.

There are a few dozen people in our church—one might possibly say a few hundred—whose strong point is their pretentiousness. They have never themselves done anything notable; but they claim the right to censure the remissness of everybody else. To hear them talk, one would think that we have little piety, less intellectual ability, and absolutely no scholarship among us. They constantly represent Southern Methodism as a sort of moral Sahara. The wonder is that they do not emigrate to more congenial climes. With the wide world before them, they might find some place better suited to their way of thinking.—Christian Advocate.

In our despair we can never see anything good. The very heavens frown on us. Joseph in the pit, or as a slave, could see nothing good to come out of his captivity, yet it led him to the throne. Daniel could see nothing good to himself to come out of being put into the lions' den; still this was the road to his promotion. Such examples should be an inspiration to us. These dark places in the providence of God will serve to lift us up to the sunlit plains of glory.

The greatest miracle that I know of is that of my conversion. I was dead, and I live; I was blind, and I see; I was a slave, and I am free; I was an enemy of God, and I love him. Prayer, the Bible, the society of Christians—these were to me a source of profound ennui, whilst now it is the pleasures of the world that are a weariness to me, and piety is the source of all my joy.—Vinet.

No amount of singing and prayer, of church-going and profession, is sufficient to maintain a Christian character in a man who is not honest in his dealings or truthful in his relations with men. The moral character is just as essential as a spiritual experience. If his faith does not dominate his life, influence his conduct and shape his character, it is not saving faith.

There is no burden which, if we lift it cheerfully and bear it with love in our heart, will not become a blessing to us. God means our tasks to be our helpers heavenward. To shrink from a duty, or to refuse to bend our shoulders to receive a load, is to decline a new opportunity for growth.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

History Repeats Itself.

It seems that the Church of England was in a lifeless state of empty formality in Mr. Wesley's time, and that he started in it trying to preach without "being born again." And, no doubt, some—perhaps many—in these times have also made the unfortunate mistake of starting out, and are still trying to preach without experimental knowledge of the "new birth." But it would be infinitely better for all to "tarry at Jerosalem until they be (baptized with the Holy Ghost) endued with power from on high," before trying to teach others how to be saved. And then they would be happier and more useful, and would not discount the experience of those who have been thus blessed, nor prone to doubt that it is the privilege of all to have the witness of the Holy Spirit when they have "been born again," and a distinct experience when delivered from all inherited depravity, when pardoned for actual sins and delivered from inherited propensity to sin. Everybody may know whether they are spiritually dead or alive, lost or found, miserable or happy. If any don't know whether they have "been born again," or not, they may know by that they have not been, or are dead now, at least, and ought to lose no time in "being made alive and new creatures in Christ Jesus."

No Christian has any more right to doubt the experience of "holy people" than a sinner has to doubt his. Each experience has to be realized before it can be known and appreciated. To unregenerated sinners "the new birth" appears as incomprehensible as "the second blessing" can to those who have only "been born again." Therefore, "let brotherly love continue," and mutual forbearance be exercised, and all wrangling cease, and everybody earnestly seek all the fullness of the blessings of God—"praying without ceasing, and in everything giving thanks."

Mr. Wesley being a chosen vessel of God, honest and sincere, full of earnestness and zeal for his own salvation and that of others, he anxiously persevered in seeking a correct and full knowledge of the plan of redemption, that he might avail himself of it fully, and teach others how they, too, might find pardon and peace, and worship and serve God in spirit and in truth, and go through this life rejoicing, and be saved in heaven, for the mere form of godliness, without the power thereof, had utterly failed to satisfy the longings of his yearning soul. "Lacking wisdom," which the church did not have to impart, "he asked of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it was given him." But, being a pioneer in that wilderness state of the church, he passed through different views before he entered fully into the spiritual Canaan. But, when he found out what great blessings the good Lord had in store for all who love him perfectly, "he walked in the light as He is in the light, and had fellowship with Him, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleansed him from all sin." And then, true to his high calling and holy commission, he went forth "spreading scriptural holiness over these lands."

But the Bishops of England, and those over whom they lorded, "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," big-headedly and vainheartedly and self-distractively, they refused to seek, as Mr. Wesley did, to "be filled with all the fullness of God," and rejected his doctrine, and him, too; and they, having no such peaceful and joyous experience as he had, "imagined vain things" about what he professed to enjoy—"the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep the heart and mind through Christ Jesus." (The italics are borrowed in this last quotation to emphasize the fact expressed therein.) And, instead of sitting at the feet of that holy man of God and learning how to be happy in this life and saved in the next, they "raged" against Mr. Wesley and his faithful hand as blindly and ineffectually as "the heathen" and "the high priest and all they that were with him" did against Peter and the other apostles. Let everybody read and ponder the account of that stupendous folly, and the consequences that followed, in Acts v, 17-42, and Psalms ii.

Unclean Speech.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful."—Psalm i, 1.

The force of the above verse never struck me so forcibly as it did one evening after a day's travel. I had been in company with a number of friends, and we had been exchanging jokes and stories, most of which could not have been told in the presence of ladies. That evening when I opened my Bible to the first Psalm, the first verse was the greatest reproof that could possibly have been framed; it came upon me all at once that my conduct during the day had not been that of a Christian, and when I tried to make excuses for myself, I found that I was more like the ungodly described in the fourth verse of the same Psalm, viz.: "The ungodly are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away." How much like the chaff I had been, influenced by the least opposing wind, offering no resistance to evil influences, yielding to temptations, showing no one that the solid grain of Christianity was in my heart, but appearing to my companions nothing but chaff.

Young man, do you realize the damage that you can do by an exchange of smutty stories with others, or by indulging in conversation that you would not want your mother or your minister to hear?

To illustrate: Suppose at some future time I should try to talk to one of the companions mentioned about the state of his soul, would he consider me sincere? Would he not be apt to look back upon that day when I was apparently not trying to lead any better life than he? What shame I would feel if he asked me the question, Were you a Christian when I was with you before? How could I answer him?

Oh, be careful, you who are Christians, look further ahead, consider the consequences of your actions, remember that more sin is committed with the tongue than with any other member of the body. How we should guard our speech, how we should pray, "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable unto thee, oh Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

May God make this short letter counteract the evil my tongue may have committed, and instill into your heart the necessity for guarding your thoughts and words. Read the first chapter of James, and let the twenty-sixth verse do the work in your heart that this letter may have failed to accomplish.

To the Auxiliaries of the W. F. M. Society of the Mississippi Conference,

Dear Sisters: If you have anything in your treasury designed for the McNemar Fund, will you please forward it at once to the Conference treasurer? If you have only a small amount on hand, do not hold it back to wait for more to come in. Send on what you have, and then go to work to make more. In this way we can keep up with the quarterly payments better. If you have not done anything as yet this year toward this fund, will you not go to work at once and avail yourself of the privilege of doing so? This is the only special work our Conference society has undertaken for this year. Let us not come out behind with it at the end of this year. The Lord has blessed us in this special work, and will continue to bless us if we do our part and are faithful to our trust.

Sisters, let us come to the front and show ourselves worthy of the honor of entertaining the Woman's Board at the next annual meeting to be held in Meridian, next year. Let it not be said of the Mississippi Conference Society that we are "playing at missions;" and let us not have to go up to the meeting of the Board ashamed to make our report.

Suppose we begin with the first of January and make an experiment of the tithe system of giving for the year 1895, and see what will be the result both to ourselves and to the cause we profess to love.

Hoping this appeal will meet with a hearty and generous response from every auxiliary to the Conference, I remain, Yours faithfully,

ADDIE V. MARSHALL.

We pray that God may open up to him the richest treasuries of his grace, and that the days remaining to him may be bright and lustrous with victories won for the Captain of our salvation, until he shall realize the promise of the Eternal God, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40. Read the following description taken from the manufacturer's catalogue, and then read our offer.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer Sewing Machine, as you will perceive, is very attractive in appearance, the cut being an exact representation. It is strongly constructed from the best grades of material produced, and its adjustment perfect; also combines simplicity, durability and workmanship of the highest order; and in point of finish, light-running and sewing qualities, is unsurpassed. In addition to the above-mentioned qualities, our Favorite Improved High Arm Singer has the latest, most useful and practical improvements, such as a perfect Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle, positive Automatic Bobbin Winder, Self-Setting Needle, Tension Liberator and Loose Pulley, and is without any exception the best machine ever produced for the money.

"The Favorite Improved High Arm Singer is the only Singer style machine using a Cylinder Shuttle. The bed of machine being sunk flush with table and nicely hinged so it can be turned backed to admit of oiling and cleaning under works without the least inconvenience.

"Automatic Bobbin Winder, used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer, is positive in its operation, and works to perfection, winding the thread on bobbin as evenly as thread is wound on a spool.

"Flat Tension Spring. Every lady who has used machines with coil tension spring, knows the value of having a machine with flat tension, 'same as used on the Favorite Improved High Arm Singer,' for the reason that when tension is once set it always remains the same and does not alter while machine is in operation, requiring operator to stop every little while and re-adjust same.

"The Cabinet Work is of the very latest design, made of the best quality of Oak or Walnut, as preferred. Unique and attractive in style, and elaborate in finish. The rich nickel-plated trimmings harmonize with the general handsome appearance of the machine.

"Furnished free with every machine are the following-named accessories: One Foot Hemmer, one Screw Driver, one Wrench, one Oil Can and Oil, one Gauge Screw, one extra Check Spring, one Package of Needles, five Bobbins and one Instruction Book.

"Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, one Foot Ruffler, one Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths, up to seven-eighths of an inch; one Binder and one Thread Cutter.

"The Stand is among the handsomest in design. Finely japanned. Has large drive wheel."

This machine is manufactured by an old and reliable company, who guarantee the machine for ten years.

Cranky Leadership.

It is a great pity that those who have infinite capacity for leadership so often develop a crankiness by means of which they are shorn of—their strength. We publish in this issue an article from the Minneapolis Journal concerning the nonsensical notions recently advocated in an address by that marvelously gifted woman, Miss Frances Willard. She advocates the Henry George single-tax nonsense and, what is worse still, the governmental ownership of all the newspapers. We have not seen the address, but have read numerous extracts from it in our exchanges. If Miss Willard is correctly represented, then she has reached a point where her influence as a leader of thought is gone. No such absurd anachronisms as these will ever disgrace the jurisprudence of this enlightened, liberty-loving land.

And now comes Joseph Cook, and advocates compulsory voting. Of course, everybody knows that many good men by their failure to exercise the right of suffrage give "lewd fellows of the baser sort" an opportunity which they are not slow to use to the detriment of society; but this constitutes no valid reason in favor of compulsory voting. In a locality where there are two parties in the field, both committed to the liquor traffic, must the prohibitionist be compelled to make choice between the two? We think not. We use the prohibitionist simply as an illustration. While we believe, and constantly proclaim, that every citizen ought, as a rule, to exercise the right of suffrage, we believe it to be true that there are times when he may most efficiently serve his party and his country by refraining from voting. Under the Constitution of the United States a man has the right to vote, and he has an equal right to refrain from voting; and this right Joseph Cook, with all his knowledge of science and philosophy, will never be able to deprive him of. A great need of many of our latter-day reformers is level-headedness.

Miss Florence Nightingale, at the age of 74, is enjoying excellent health. She is a rich woman, having, besides some private means, the $250,000 publicly subscribed for her by the English people at the close of the Crimean war. Quite recently she confided to a friend her intention to settle the money as a trust, the interest to be devoted to nursing wounded soldiers, should her country ever again be engaged in a war with a European power.

Startling Suggestions.

The Times-Democrat, of the sixteenth, reports an interview with a certain Southern Methodist editor concerning church affairs and concerning the prospective policy of his paper. We quote as follows:

"'Our idea is that Bishops should be elected for four years, with eligibility to re-election, if they behave themselves. They will then kiss the babies and look after their fences. But when a fellow is elected for life he's got a cinch, and you can't get at him. We hold that a Bishop is simply an officer. It is not an order in any sense. We claim the privilege of criticising his mistakes and maladministration, and that we have as much right to criticise a Bishop as anybody else. We honor him for his good works and esteem him for his piety, but we propose to criticise him just as the secular press would criticise any officer of the government.' He was asked if his purpose was to split the church. 'No,' he replied, 'but rather to get rid of conditions that will split the church if they are not weeded out.' 'What do you mean by rings?' he was asked. 'What do you mean by rings in politics?' was the answer. He went on to say that there were rings in the church as there were in politics, and that they were doing their work. The trouble was that many good men were in these rings and didn't know it. He proposed to open the eyes of the people and to smash the rings."

To change the term of office of our Bishops from life to four years would be a change of church polity such as has rarely been witnessed. It would be nothing less than a revolution. And this herculean task is to be accomplished by a fledgeling editor who has not yet shed his pin feathers. When the young scribe has had a few years' experience on the tripod, he will find out that it is not as easy to revolutionize Zion as he seems to think, and that it is far wiser to boast after the battle is over than before. Without claiming any farther insight into the future than is possessed by others, we venture the prediction that the grass will wave over the grave of the aforesaid scribe for many generations before Methodism will witness any such revolution as he seeks to bring about. But, if a vast amount of assurance is displayed in the task assumed, unparalleled folly is shown in the reason assigned for seeking the change. Change the term to four years, and then our Bishops will "kiss the babies and look after their fences." In other words, he wishes to make the change in order to induce our Bishops to resort to the arts of the political demagogue in order to retain office. And this is reform. From all such reforms may the good Lord deliver us!

What is said about Bishops is, however, quite trivial in comparison with what is said about rings in the church. Everybody knows that ring rule is the curse of American politics, the bane of modern civilization. To make the charge through the secular press that the church is ruled by rings similar to those that dominate the realm of politics is, therefore, a very serious matter, even if the charge had emanated from a man of the world; but when the charge is made by a minister of the gospel of Christ concerning his own church, it becomes doubly serious. This is tantamount to a charge of gross corruption on the part of those who are leaders in Zion. Our scribe can not evade this by saying that he uses the term ring in its better sense, for he solemnly asseverates through the press that he means by rings in the church exactly what is meant by the term in the realm of politics. We brand this charge as a slander. We have been a minister of the Southern Methodist Church for nearly a quarter of a century; we have been a member of three General Conferences and have attended a fourth; we have been associated with many of the leaders of our church; and we deliberately affirm it as our conviction that such a clique or combination as is properly characterized as a ring does not exist in Southern Methodism. On the contrary, we believe that those who occupy the chief seats in our synagogue are as far removed from everything that savors of demagoguery and corruption as the aforesaid scribe himself. We do not believe that Ingersoll has ever made a viler or more slanderous charge against the church of God than this. Our fledgeling editor owes it to himself, to the church and to the world to prove his charge, retract it, or else give up his credentials and retire from the church. If there is anything worse than slandering one's own church, we do not know what it is, unless it is slandering one's own mother; and we are not sure that that is worse.

We have drawn a picture. If any man chooses to write his own name under it, he is at perfect liberty to do so. "It's the hit dog that howls."

The Louisiana Lottery Not Dead.

When a mighty wave of moral indignation hurled the Louisiana Lottery out of this State, it was generally supposed that it would go out of existence. It was soon authoritatively announced that it had taken up its abode in far-off Hondnras, and this opinion seems to prevail in the public mind. This, however, is an error. The drawings take place in Honduras; but the business of the company is carried on in Tampa, Florida. Its officials reside there, and it has established there a printing concern of mammoth proportions, where all its tickets, circulars and prize lists are printed. In short, the entire business, except the mere drawing, is carried on at Tampa. As the State of Florida seems unable for some reason to throttle the monster, and as the sale of tickets is carried on through the agency of express companies in all parts of the United States, an effort is being made to secure congressional legislation prohibiting express companies and everybody else from handling lottery literature of every description. Petitions for such legislation have been signed by thousands of persons in the higher walks of life. This is a move in the right direction. Let Congress be inundated with anti-lottery petitions. If every citizen who is opposed to this infamous business will sign such a petition, the law will pass. Mark that.

Dr. Parkhurst and Women.

Dr. Parkhurst has entered into a contract with The Ladies' Home Journal by which he will practically become a regular editorial contributor to that magazine for some time. The great New York preacher says that he has for a long time past been desirous of saying some very necessary things to women, and he now announces that he will say them through these articles. He will take up all the social, moral and equality questions which are so uppermost in the minds of women to-day. Dr. Parkhurst will begin this work at once, his first article appearing in the next issue of the Journal.

The Forgotten Minister.

There is but one forgotten minister. He is the worn-out minister. Once he was active, vigorous, faithful, heroic. The hard, poorly-paid work of his life created the church whose blessings we enjoy. His service is too often but a vague memory. He himself is too often but a misty personage of a half-remembered dream. Every pastor will receive a hearty Christmas greeting. I trust he will receive a loving Christmas gift. How few of the superannuated ministers or widows of deceased ministers will have a place in our Christmas festivities as they once had! Dear readers of the Advocate, while your hearts are mellow and warm with the holy emotions of the happy holiday time, will you not remember the forgotten minister? Go to your pastor and ask him for the name and address of a Conference claimant. Write a Christmas letter and send a Christmas gift, a Christmas card, a magazine, a book, or, what would be better, a little piece of paper called a one-dollar or a two-dollar bill. Inclose a two cent stamp for a reply. You will receive in return a Christmas letter which will give your heart a thrill whose warmth will bless and comfort you all the coming year.—Jay Benson Hamilton.

Mr. Dale, son of Dr. R. W. Dale, of Birmingham, who writes the monthly summary for the Sunday Magazine, thus comments upon the connection of Lord Rosebery with the turf:

"The Prime Minister's victory in the Derby, though welcomed with enthusiasm by the crowd, seems to us a matter for serious regret. Everyone who knows the actual condition of the people is aware that at the present moment betting is doing almost as much harm as drink. It produces a vast mass of crime. It drags down thousands of victims into utter misery and ruin. The turf, like those who live by it, is notoriously corrupt. Lord Rosebery is not supposed to bet himself. He would disdain any association with the solid wretches who prey upon the folly and the credulity of their fellow-creatures. But he has to take the system as it exists. He is under no illusion and knows that he is powerless to mend it. How can he fail to see that his name and his influence aggravate the evil? They invest what is disreputable with the semblance of honor. They serve to cloak and to mask the evil. He is the first Prime Minister to win the Derby: we trust that he may be last."

Bishop Foss, in his address before the Brooklyn Methodist Social Union, "The Model Layman," said: He should be intelligent. He should read the Methodist press. He knew a church west of the Alleghanies where in an official Board of twenty-eight members only eight took any Methodist paper. Of course they were "cantankerous," and disturbing to the peace of the church, and useless. "If I had my way," concluded the Bishop, with much emphasis, "I would not allow any man or woman to be eligible to a Quarterly Conference who did not take some one of our Methodist weeklies."

Proselyting should be obsolete in this age. There is no need of stealing sheep from other folds as long as there are so many lost sheep wandering on the mountains, cold and bare. If the motive of soul saving and character building is supreme among Christian denominations, their rivalry will help them to help each other, and the wondering world will say, "See how these Christians love."—The Methodist Herald.

Tuck's holiday publications, which are smaller in size than those already noticed, and quite within the reach of everybody, are fascinating. Everything one can think of in the way of flower designs, dainty landscapes and figures embellish the booklets, calendars, and Christmas cards this year. Roses, violets, pansies, forget-me-nots, butterflys, and chrysanthemums crowd upon the eye. Evidently the fashion of Christmas cards has not gone out, and from the specimens we have seen the delicate pink of the wild rose seems to be the favorite this year.

We are indebted to those enterprising publishers, Raphael Tuck & Sons, London, Paris and New York (368 Broadway), for a collection of Christmas publications, cards, calendars, etc., that is simply superb.

The American Federation of Labor, in its recent convention at Denver, refused to re-elect Samuel Gompers as president. Gompers is a man of transcendant ability. He was defeated solely because of his conservatism. A man of the type of Debs seems to come nearer to the ideal of a labor leader than Gompers. This we regard as a very unfavorable omen. The labor ship needs a wise hand at the helm.

Dr. Jessup says that the Syrian Mission established the first school for girls among the Turks. Before its day it was the opinion of the Turks that one might as well try to teach a cat as to teach a woman. But this school was revolutionary. It was found that the Mohammedan young men preferred girls who could read; that there was a stampede to Christian schools, and Islam was obliged to set up schools for girls in self-defense.

The Voice: Labor's millennium will know no saloon. This is a fact, however blind the so-called leaders of labor may now be to the withes which the liquor Delilah is binding on the sleeping Samson. Wake, Samson! and, in the name of free American workingmen, cast off the bonds! There will be little or no more advancement for labor while the drunken workingman continues to hold back his sober brother.

According to recent statistics there are about 2,000 women practicing medicine on the Continent of North America, of whom 130 are homœopathists. The majority are ordinary practitioners, but among the remainder are 70 hospital physicians or surgeons, 95 professors in the schools, 610 specialists for the diseases of women, 70 alienists, 65 orthopedists, 40 oculists and aurists, and finally 30 electro-therapeutists. In Canada there is but one medical school exclusively devoted to the training of medical ladies, but in the United States, in 1893, there were ten.—Presbyterian Journal.

A Hottentot convert at a missionary meeting in England said: "What pity it is, what sin it is, that you have so many years got that heavenly bread and hold it for yourself, not to give one little bit, one crumb to poor heathen. Sceptics and critics may say what they please about the inefficiency of Christian missions in India, but the fact that British and other foreign residents in that land give $300,000 per annum for the evangelizing of the people is a sufficient answer to the criticisms and taunts. The missionaries live and work under the eye of these givers, who know what they are doing, and how much they are doing. They do not waste their money on those whom they see to be inefficient and unsuccessful laborers.—The Presbyterian.

Thirty years ago there were in Russia 4,000,000 Jews to 80,000,000 Russians. In those days Jews had no social position, and their influence in society was trifling. At the present time there are 12,000,000 Jews to 110,000,000 Russians. In cultivation, education, and wealth the Jew is leaping forward, while the Russian only crawls. Hon. James Alcorn died at his home in Coahoma county, Miss., on the twentieth instant, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. He has been for many years one of the most prominent citizens of the State. He served several terms in the Legislature in both Houses. He also served the State as governor and United States senator. He filled every position to which he was elected with honor to himself and benefit to the State. Until his retirement from practice, a few years since, he stood in the front rank of the legal profession. He is said to have been, with the single exception of Col. E. Richardson, the largest cotton planter in the world. Like many of the money kings of the present generation, he began life with no capital except his talents and his prodigious industry.

Dr. G. W. Rembert, of Natchez, Miss., one of the leading dentists of the State, will remove to this city in a few days. We clip the following from the Natchez Democrat, giving our own personal endorsement to what is said as to the Doctor's personal and professional worth:

The Doctor has resided and followed his profession in Natchez for the past sixteen years, and during that time has not only proven himself a master of his calling, but also to be a most valuable and exemplary citizen. He was ever foremost in all public enterprises, always alive to the best interests of the place, and took a deep and active part in church and kindred work. Dr. Rembert's departure will be a great loss to the social, business and professional circles of Natchez, and our sister city of New Orleans will be greatly benefited by the acquisition of such a worthy gentleman.

Retrospect.

With Christmas bells a-chime and the air full of New Year greetings, it seems to be a sort of moral duty to pause and look backward. Standing, as it were, at the grave of the dying year, and awaiting with eager expectancy the birth of the new one, there appears to be a natural predisposition on the part of thoughtful humanity to meditate and moralize. Amid the feverish excitement of this busy, work-a-day world such rare periods as these come so opportunely. They are the green oases in the arid desert of existence; the breathing times of life, when one may for a few fleeting moments find surcease from the world's toil and turmoil, and gather strength and courage to face it anew.

The hurry and bustle in which we of the present day live and move and have our being is perhaps the most formidable enemy of human advancement, for the simple reason that we have no time to think. The exigencies of the age force us prematurely into action before we have fairly had time to study our studies or to formulate our plans, and the result is too often bitter and ignominious defeat; but they have also taught us the science of comprehensive analysis; they have invested us with the power of forming rapid conclusions and drawing intuitive deductions—processes which are most excellent as constructors of character and individuality, but which are not always to be relied upon.

It is customary with many moralists to seize upon the closing hours of the year as a favorable time for retrospection. A kind of tender melancholy pervades the atmosphere—a melancholy which is always more or less conducive to the resurrecting of buried memories, and which, it may be presumed, commends itself chiefly on that account to the notice of meditative philosophers. Like careful men of business, they go back—sometimes it is to be feared, with painful effort—marking the progress that the world has made during twelve eventful months, and balancing accounts at the end with mathematical precision. The results are not invariably gratifying, nor do they always tend to impress one with a high estimate of human nature; but then we can never be quite certain that the balance-sheet is correct, and so we must perforce put down to the credit of poor humanity a large amount of good that we may guess at inferentially, but of whose actual existence we can have no tangible or positive proof. —From Godey's.

Miss Willard's Address.

Miss Willard's address before the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at Cleveland, while embodying some very excellent moral points, which all men and women should take to heart, certainly was not calculated to generate confidence in the utility of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as an organization founded for a specific moral purpose. As the public understands it, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized to promote temperance among the people and to overthrow the saloon power. Blessed be the Woman's Christian Temperance Union if it sticks to its warfare against the liquor power and in behalf of an equal standard of purity for men and women. But Miss Willard would drag the Woman's Christian Temperance Union into an advocacy of a government censor or supervisor of public amusements, with a seat in the Cabinet and a train of subordinates to carry out his orders as to the way people should amuse themselves. Such an office has existed and does exist, but only in very despotic countries. * * *

But she also directly advocates the Georgian confiscatory single-tax program and the nationalization, not only of land, but of all the lines of transportation and the "ownership of all the newspapers by the people." This last proposition caps the climax. Does Miss Willard mean that the government shall own and run the newspapers? That is a rollicking and grotesque absurdity. Does Miss Willard really believe that every newspaper is controlled by a great corporation, as she affirms; that the 20,000 newspapers in this country are owned by corporations, and the yearly issue of 3,500,000,000 papers are read under compulsion of 70,000,000 of Americans who subscribe and pay for papers which do not express views which they approve? Miss Willard should stick to her last. The public have a high regard for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as a champion of temperance and social purity, but if it is going to take under its motherly wing all the grotesque crankism in sight, its downfall as a moral force will inevitably soon come.—The Minneapolis Journal.

From Rev. T. B. Holloman.

MR EDITOR: Believing that some of your readers would be interested to know and would sympathize with us in our sore bereavement, I drop you this little note. Our beloved father left us on Nov. 19, to join the company of the redeemed. His illness was of short duration. The racking pains of intersusception were too much for one of his age, and he rapidly sank under its tortures. His faith in God was childlike. He left behind all the evidences we could ask. The evident comfort that he found in God's promises was assured by the frequent quotations which he made from the Word. For fifty years he had been a member of the Methodist Church, and from the first an officer. With Paul the Aged, he left for our comfort the assurance that "he knew whom he had trusted," and was willing to leave all with him.

Those who have served North Warren circuit will read this to feel that they and the church have lost a friend indeed. His seat was always filled if possible. His preacher was his friend and brother. All he had was free to the faithful itinerant. He gave him a hearty welcome and cheerful support in every particular.

While we are passing through deep waters, we are comforted. Pray for us.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

A New Book.

SONGS FOR THE SHUT-IN. Compiled by Mary Craig Yarrow. 12 mo. Printed in red and black and bound in artistic cloth. Price 75 cents, postpaid. Thomas Whittaker, publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

Only a few persons perhaps know of the society called the "Shut-in Society." It was organized a few years ago and now numbers over a thousand members. "To be a sufferor, shut in from the outside world, constitutes one a proper candidate for membership." Associate members are persons who, by writing letters, sending papers and books, and little presents, cause some brightness to shine into the hard, dull lives of those who on account of sickness spend their days in doors, often in one room.

This collection of songs dedicated to this society has been selected with much care from a variety of sources and from the best authors, with special reference to the severe trials of these, our suffering brethren. Let all who know of any who are spending their lives in pain, often in poverty and unutterable loneliness of heart, send a copy of this collection of verses to them, and thus in some degree make lighter their heavy crosses, and put a little sunshine into their dark lives.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

WATCHING.

(Matt. xxiv, 42-51; xxv, 1-13.)

The parable of the wise and foolish virgins teaches that constant readiness—watchfulness—is indispensable to the Christian's safety.

1. The wise and foolish virgins were alike supplied with lamps. Both professed Christianity.

(1) The wise were Christians by profession and by practice; the foolish, only by profession.

(2) To be good Methodists, Presbyterians, etc., is well. But it is Christianity which makes us children of God and heirs of glory.

(3) Church life is in vain if we have not the unction of the Holy One. Oil. The life hidden with Christ in God.

(4) But with all this church life most not be depreciated. Without lamps the oil would have been useless.

2. All rested secure; but the arrival of the bridegroom revealed the folly of the negligent five.

(1) The wise virgins, being ready, were privileged to join in the marriage festivities. They inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world.

(2) The foolish virgins propose a division of the oil on hand. Children deem themselves safe, because of the piety of their parents; husbands, because of piety of wife. Sad delusion.

(3) Endeavor to acquire oil—fitness for heaven after the time of preparation and probation had ceased.

(4) Disappointed, the foolish virgins endeavor to find admission to the festive hall even without buying lamps; but they find the door shut. The door to life, light and glory. Knocking does not open it.

(5) The law of fitness would exclude the unspiritual, hence worldly, from heaven even without judicial proceeding.

(6) Watch therefore! says the Master. Life is uncertain. Always in harness. Always ready. Too much at stake to be indifferent and negligent.

A Superb Commentary on the Whole Bible
FOR ONLY $6.

We have made arrangements whereby we can offer the celebrated Jamieson, Fausset and Brown Commentary at a price which places it within the reach of all. This work, as is well known, occupies a prominent place in the very front rank of modern commentaries. It embodies the results of all previous research and scholarship. Read carefully the following testimonials, noting particularly the sources whence they come:

Late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

I think it the best Commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church.

This book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It contains notes of the choicest and richest character on all parts of the Holy Bible. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars. Its critical introduction to each book of Scripture, its eminently practical notes commend it strongly to the Sunday-school worker and to the clergyman. Then, it is such a marvel of cheapness.

James Strong, LL.D., S. T. D., Author of McClintock & Strong's Religious Encyclopedia.

It is exceedingly terse, pithy and pointed in its notes, and admirably evangelical in its statements. The results of much reading, reflection and research are evinced in its pages.

I cordially recommend it, as containing more and sounder illustrations of the sacred volume than any other work I have seen.

Rev. J. F. Hurst, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

For immediate and practical availability, I do not know where to go for its equal. Besides bearing constant traces of thorough scholarship, its spirit is all that the evangelical Christian could desire. I regard the work as worthy of unqualified commendation, and believe that its introduction into the homes of our people would be the means of diffusing not only an increased knowledge of the Sacred Word, but of sympathy with its requirements.

Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, Editor S. S. Times.

A comprehensive commentary of the entire Bible, in a single volume, at moderate cost, has been long desired by American Sabbath-school teachers. I think that the work is admirably suited to meet that want. Prepared by men of right hearts, clear heads and minds well stored—men who, believing the Bible, and loving its most precious truths, have studied it long and prayerfully, and with the best and most varied helps—it comes to the aid of the partly-furnished Bible student, giving to him concisely the results of the most extensive research in earlier and later days, explaining Scripture by Scripture, and pointing suggestively to the deeper meanings of the sacred text. I do not know of its equal, within its scope and cost, and I believe it will have, as it merits, a very wide circulation, and will do great good.

Rev. S. M. Merrill, D. D., Bishop M. E. Church.

The learning displayed in the work is varied, extensive and modern, embodying the results of the latest and most important discoveries in science, and the highest skill and criticism. The expositions are brief, clear and remarkably accurate. In this regard we esteem it a work of rare value. As a reliable, popular exposition of the Sacred Word, we cordially recommend it as superior in several respects to the older Commentaries.

Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York.

I do not hesitate to recommend it to English Bible readers as a sound, judicious, devout, and—considering the size—comprehensive exposition of the Word of God. It meets the growing demand of the Christian community for exegetical works that shall embody, in popular form, the best results of the latest philological, archæological and critical research, and must prove eminently useful. It deserves, and no doubt will soon reach, a wide circulation in this vast country.

Scores of similar commendations could be presented did space permit. The work is printed on good paper, and well-bound in one large super-royal octavo volume of nearly fourteen hundred double-column, closely printed pages. We will send the work postpaid to any address on receipt of $6. We will also give it as a premium to any person who will send us six new subscribers with the cash—$12. We will do this, and also give each subscriber anyone of the twenty-five cent books here named—Premium Cook-Book, Drummond's Addresses, Hawthorne's Works, or anyone of the Fifteen Poets advertised by us. HOME CIRCLE.

IN THE SUNSHINE.

BY JOHN INGL.

And we never miss the sunshine
Till the storm clouds roll apace,
And we never miss the dear love
Till we see the cold dead face;
And our hearts are seldom melted
Till the voice is hushed and still,
Of the loved one we have walked with
Up the pathway of life's hill!

Let us linger in life's sunshine
Till the last glad ray departs,
Let the twilights and the dawnings
Link the closer trusting hearts;
Then each morrow will be brighter
For the sunshine that hath been,
And life's burden be the lighter
For the sympathies between.

O! to speak some words of kindness
In the ear of human woe
Is like eyes to stony blindness
Of the groping ones below;
So the touch of tender fingers
On the throbbing brow of pain
Is the sweet of life that lingers
Ere we turn to earth again!

Be Not Chary of Loving Words.

BY EMILY S. BOUTON.

"If I could only hear him say once, just as he used to in the early days of our married life, that he loves me, I believe I could go to work again without feeling that everything is such a dreary failure," said a weary woman to me once.

"You do not doubt his affection?" I asked.

"O, I suppose he cares, but he never, never tells me so," she replied with a passionate sort of wail in her voice. "We just go on week after week, eating and drinking, dressing, working and sleeping, and that is all there is of it. I often think he would not care if I should pass entirely out of his life, for he never seems to notice what I do, never speaks one tender word to me any more."

And yet he did care; but it was simply a habit he had fallen into, and unless shocked into a realization of what he was doing, the days would go on and on, and the conviction of his indifference would grow deeper and deeper, until the love would go out in her heart for aye. And then it would be too late.

I shall never forget the glow of pleasure that used to irradiate the plain, stern face of a man I knew, at some unexpected word of fondness or caressing action from the wife he loved, whose only sin was omission from sheer carelessness. And then, suddenly, he folded his strong arms across the stilled heart, and his ears were deaf to her voice, and her touch had no power to awaken him to life. Then how she regretted the lost opportunities.

This is the cruel cross of life, to be Full visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some dear presence is but an empty space;
What recollected services can then
Give consolation for the might have been?

Surely the poet who wrote the lines I have quoted had a living realization of the pain which "the silences" had cost.

It is not only those that are wedded who forget to keep the fires of affection brightly burning by words and deeds. The gay young girl, that strong vigorous youth, both full of the luxury of living that health and animal spirits give, oftentimes forget the loving word, the tender caress, to the mother whose heart has beaten all these years a full measure of hope and pride for their future. When you feel inclined to be careless, O, fair maiden and brave youth, and to give more of thought and care to those who have never denied self for your sake, as she has done, remember that the day is coming when you will stand "full visioned" beside her still form, and think bitterly, if you have a heart, of the "might have been."

And yet it is not only young men and maidens who forget to make the home hearts glad by loving words and tender actions. Nor is this carelessness confined to the home circles. Friends hold fast to a reticence, so far as expression is concerned, of their kindly feeling toward each other. They go on week after week, meeting often, conscious of the excellencies of which they do not speak, full of kindness of thought, which may sometimes, when chance arises, be put into deeds, but too often letting, "silences" multiply when it would be so easy and so charming to break and to throw them away.

Be not chary of loving words to dear ones, nor of pleasant appreciative ones to those around you. It is hard to tell what the influences of those utterances may be upon the future of the latter, even though they be not of those whom you have gathered into your heart of hearts.

Faith in the present good, hope for the future, courage to do and dare—these are all often inspired by a chance expression of kind appreciation that costs the speaker absolutely nothing. I do not mean that we should overflow with phrases that are meaningless, or utter what is untruthful and misleading, but that we shall be alert and thoughtful, that no moment when kind words may be spoken shall slip by and leave them forever unsaid. We are all too prone to take things for granted, to "live beside each other day by day, and speak of myriad things, but seldom say the full sweet words" that would have brought gladness to the heart and sunshine to the life of those who may perhaps seem to have the least need of our ministrations.—Toledo Blade.

A Good Disposition.

A woman with a happy disposition is far more to a man as a wife than the woman with a great fortune, for riches take wings. Worldly prosperity has a way of altering, and if once money vanishes the gloomy individual does naught but sit down and weep, having no word of encouragement for the husband, on whom the blow falls most heavily. The happy dispositioned wife will see a way out of the difficulty, or will accept matters as they are in a sweet spirit of cheerfulness that endows her husband with new zeal, and causes him to look upon her as the guiding star of his existence. If God has not given you such a disposition cultivate it as far as possible. It does no good to brood over one's troubles. It doesn't help matters out a bit. Be on the lookout for bright rays, and you will certainly find them.

Speaking Evil of Ministers.

"I do not remember ever to have heard in my father's home one disrespectful or unkind word concerning a minister." That is what we overheard a young woman say not long ago. She paid to her parents a very high compliment, and described a condition of things which should find a counterpart in every Christian home in the land.—Christian Standard (Philadelphia).

Keep the Serpents Out.

You will guard your home with cold, unwelcome protests, reproaches, and physical force, if need be, to keep out the unwelcome living visitor, who will stay, at the longest, but an hour with your children. When the questionable paper or book applies for admission to your home it is admitted indifferently, to stay hours, days, weeks and longer. It whispers at the ear and tugs at the heart of your boy or girl, and may dissipate the purity and bloom of your darlings while you sleep, influence them when you are away from your home, and linger to complete its unworthy, if not fatal, errand after you have forgotten the presence of the printed devil in your dove's nest, and in the very fortress of your love. Aye, the "press is a power," and you fall before the printed power of darkness. We have, more than once, heard a father pray that his boy might be a saint, and then that father would pay money for papers and books that lure his boy toward perdition at a pace which delights the demon who brewed the ink with which the paper and book are printed.—N. W. Advocate.

Good Books a Bait.

Do you justly estimate the number and excellence of the books for young people which are printed by our own church presses? When the youngsters deprecate that book list some parents are silent because they do not know what Methodist publishers, who are parents also, have printed for young people in our church families. Our catalogues name volumes that can keep a boy with his nose close to their pages for hours at a time and make him forget the circus then in town. Better ten circuses than some single books which you may allow to remain unchallenged in your home for ten and twenty weeks at a time. Some unsuspected books slump your boy down into moral mire so deep that all the elephants in all the circuses can not lift him out of it. Our Methodist pulpits might be mighty to save, and they often are. He who can influence the reading of people in his charge is mightier than the average governor of his State.

A World's Tribute.

Among the wonders of the World's Columbian Fair the grandest was the exhibit of American products. The Exhibition was, in this respect, an object lesson of the grandeur and glory of the Republic. Among the exhibits from the United States no article of its class stood so high as

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

The Chief Chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington, backed by an intelligent jury at the Exposition, found it strongest in leavening power, peerless in its purity and beyond comparison in uniform excellence.

Received Highest Award At the World's Fair.

The award is a matter of official record.

Nothing could settle so decisively the immeasureable superiority of Dr. Price's over all other powders as the great honor bestowed at Chicago.

HYGIENE.

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is a sort of nervous storm. The same irritation in each person's case brings on the same train of results. All the different discomforts are probably due to a spasmodic contraction or temporary narrowing of small blood-vessels caused by irritation of nerve tissue, and followed generally by a reaction which makes these blood-vessels relax and grow wider, causing fullness and flushing, throbbing and a sense of stiffness often observed in these headaches.

Remedies often keep off one of these headaches, but if the exciting cause in either overdoing; over-strain (as in efforts to work or read with defective eyesight), or over-excitement from any cause (as in giving a party), it often happens that the headache will keep returning until the sufferer succumbs and nature gets a little chance to repair the waste.

If possible, as soon as chilliness, defects of vision and stomach discomforts begin, get into a dark room and rest, with a hot bottle to the feet. A little soda dissolved in water and milk will very likely correct the stomach, or soda water alone.

If the bowels are confined, take some mild aperient, as half a drachm of effervescing citrate of magnesia. Soda-mint drops suit some cases exactly. The object of all the above remedies is gently to empty the stomach and quiet it. Two grains of caffeine may also be taken.

If unsuccessful in warding off the storm, when the flushing, throbbing, and sense of stiffness come on, a very hot water bag to the small of the spine is efficacious as a counter-irritant to the nerves. Have it as hot as can be borne.

The hereditary consequences of strong drink are something appalling. A specialist in children's diseases, who has for twelve years been carefully noting the difference between twelve families of drinkers and twelve families of temperate ones, reports that he found the twelve drinking families produced in those years fifty-seven children and the temperates sixty-one. Of the drinkers twenty-five children died in the first week of life, as against six on the other side. Among the children of the drinkers were five who were idiots, five so stunted in growth as to be really dwarfs, five when older became epileptics; one, a boy, had grave chorea, ending in idiocy; five more were diseased and deformed, and two of the epileptics became by inheritance drinkers. Ten only of the fifty-seven were normal in body and mind. On the part of the sixty-one of the temperates, two only showed inherited nervous defects; five died in the first week of weakness, while four in later years of childhood had curable nervous diseases, and fifty were in every way sound in body and mind. There could scarcely be a more conclusive demonstration in favor of abstinence from intoxicants on the part of those who assume the responsibility of parentage.—National Temperance Advocate.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.—Here is the commendation of a new dessert.—A dessert that is a pleasant variation to the various blanc manges and moulds is Swiss cream. It is made from one pint of cream, a small teacup of sugar, one large teaspoonful of flour, one lemon, one tablespoonful of milk, and one quarter pound of macaroons. Put the cream into a double boiler with the sugar and the rind of the lemon, which should be finely pared into one long strip, and stir until it boils, taking out the rind as soon as it reaches the boiling point, to prevent a bitter taste. Mix the flour smoothly with the cold milk, and add to it the boiling mixture, stirring all the time. Pour it into a basin or earthen dish, into which the lemon juice has been strained, and stir until nearly cold, before pouring the mixture over the macaroons. Stew the top with candied cherries or citron in very small bits, and serve cold. The candied fruit may be omitted if not on hand.—Selected.

CRANBERRY JELLY.—Three quarts of cranberries; two pounds of sugar; one quart of water. Cook till well done; then put through a fine sieve. Return the juice to the stove, let boil ten minutes, and pour into jelly glasses.

and those about to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its torture, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement is greatly shortened. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child.

MRS. BAKER.

Dear Sir—I began taking your "Favorite Prescription" the first month of pregnancy, and have continued taking it since confinement. I did not experience the nausea or any of the ailments due to pregnancy, after I began taking your "Prescription." I was only in labor a short time, and the physician said I got along unusually well.

We think it saved me a great deal of suffering. I was troubled a great deal with leucorrhea also, and it has done a world of good for me.

SAYS OF

CEREBRINE,

Dr. WM. A. HAMMOND:

"I have been using Cerebrine two weeks, and "I am glad to report the most excellent results. "I was in a state of nervous prostration that ut- "terly unfitted me for any continued mental "work. From the first dose I experienced a re- "newed intellectual grasp and power and clear- "ness and joy in mental work that I had not "known for years. Besides this, I am conscious "of an increase in muscular strength and endur- "ance that surprises me. At first I was inclined "to suspect that these results were due to strong "stimulating properties in the Animal Extracts, "but as I studied their effects I found that they "were not only permanent, but were of an en- "tirely different character from those produced "by a stimulant. Under the influence of an ordi- "nary stimulant I felt a highly exalted state of "body and mind, but the activity was feverish "and eccentric, while the effect of the Cerebrine "is to give a sense of cool, satisfied, self-con- "trolled mental and physical energy.

BLOUNT—MARY, commonly known as Aunt Polly, companion of William Blount, was born Oct. 27, 1819; joined the M. E. Church, South, in her seventeenth year, at Old Santee Church during camp meeting. Was married July 19, 1838—a daughter of Wm. and Rady Loflin, one of ten children. The first of the family to join the church. Converted at the age of seventeen; lived an exemplary life to the end. Was instrumental in bringing all the family in the the church.

Her great interest was her church. The preachers who served Mt. Carmel circuit always found a true, sympathizing friend in Aunt Polly. She always had kind words to say of her preacher. Her home was her preacher's home, and she never forgot the preacher's family, often sending presents to them. Preachers found her a splendid help in meeting. She was peculiarly gifted in prayer: so many have been converted while she was praying. A. K. Worthy says when he was a boy that Aunt Polly was among the first in the prayer meetings and class meetings. Dr. J. D. Ferrell says, "I never knew a more devout Christian." There were given to her ten children—six daughters and four sons. All lived to be grown and members of the M. E. Church, South. Three have died. She was a great friend to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, having been a subscriber from its beginning.

Aunt Polly is gone and left our hearts sad for a while. She left us praising God as she went on high, Oct. 17, 1894. Husband, children, friends, be faithful. We shall see her again. She is not dead, but "sleepeth."

M. L. WHITE.

HARRISON—Died at her home in Montgomery, La., Mrs. E. V. HARRISON (nee Ragan), wife of W. A. Harrison, Oct. 5, 1894. She joined the M. E. Church, South, twenty-one years ago, and lived a godly life until she joined the church triumphant on high.

None knew her but to love her. She was the light of her home as a daughter, and when twenty years ago she went to grace a home of her own she carried with her the same cheerful Christian spirit, and with energy, patience and intelligence she was a model wife. She made it her business to find out the needs of the poor and relieved their wants with a bountiful hand. We can but ask, Why should such a good woman be taken away in her prime and usefulness? We can only trust, and say, "Thy will be done." Well may her seven children "arise and call her blessed." She studied their happiness; each room was made attractive, furnished not only for comfort, but with a mother's watchful eye; each one's taste in literature was considered and their study tables provided with the best books, carefully selected, "that there be no tares among the wheat." She said, "With a happy home, music and good books for companions, my boys would never go astray."

God grant that the flowers she has so lovingly tended in her home may grow to beauty of character in this life, and at last be accounted worthy to bloom in the beautiful home now occupied by their sainted mother.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Nashville Advocate please copy.

DANSBY—Whereas, By a dispensation of Providence our beloved sister, Mrs. SOPHIA DANSBY, a faithful teacher of this Sabbath-school, met the death of a Christian, on Nov. 24, 1894; therefore, be it

Resolved, That by the death of Sister Danshy our school has lost a faithful and earnest teacher; the church, an active, diligent member, who by her daily walk exemplified her faith by her works.

Resolved, That although her place is now vacant in the class at our Sunday-school and the church, yet we have the full evidence that she has entered upon her reward, and is now with her Savior, for she was like one "who waits like the ripened grain for the touch of the reaper's breath."

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the children of our late sister in their sorrow, for they have lost an affectionate and devoted mother.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished by our secretary to the family of our late sister and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Miss LIZZIE WATTS, for Committee.
M. E. Church Sunday-school, Newton, Miss.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

"Early Footsteps of the Man of Galilee."

A new work of Bishop Vincent, and Dr. J. W. Lee (of St. Louis). A great publishing company is just bringing to light the fruit of much toil and outlay of money. They sent an artist photographer, under the guidance of Dr. Lee, to the Holy Land, there to secure the most exact and perfect pictures of the salient scenes of the earthly life of Christ and the Apostles. We have examined a portion of the work and unhesitatingly pronounce it by far the best thing of its kind ever seen by us. The method of photographic reproduction employed is faultless.

The forthcoming book will contain some four or five hundred of these splendid pictures, 8x10 inches in size. The work will be issued in twenty-four parts, pages 11¼x13¼ inches, with chronological charts and colored maps. Each part will contain sixteen pictures, besides the enchanting pen pictures of these renowned writers. The series will run through twenty-four weeks, one a week, at a regular price of 25 cents each. But the ADVOCATE has made a special arrangement by which it will furnish all its subscribers, new and old, for 10 cents a number. Less than half, but very little more than a third of what you will have to pay if your name is not on our subscription roll. The entire series in this way will cost only $2.40; otherwise it will cost $6. This rule of the publishers of this book is the strictest that only to our subscribers can we make this special offer. For $2.40 you may get what another must pay $6 for if you are a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. Send $2.40, and each of the series will be mailed you as fast as issued. Or ten cents (stamps taken) for one issue—any way you prefer. This great work will surely be purchased if seen.

We repeat, the book complete, or entire series of twenty-four parts, will sell regularly for $6. We will present the complete work to anyone sending us five new cash subscribers to the ADVOCATE, at our regular price of $2 a year.

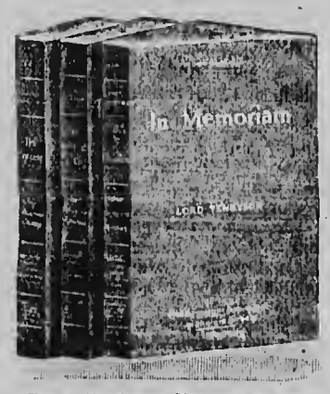
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyries and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

To Students of Millsaps College.

I have moved to Jackson to educate my only child at Millsaps College. In order that I may be able to do this, I must have a few boarders, and, as a special inducement to students to come, I will board the first six who come, at only ten dollars (each) per month; give them nice, comfortable rooms, and do all I can to promote their happiness and make them feel at home. They furnish only such things as are required by the boarding-houses at the campus. My home is very retired and quiet, a considerable distance from the business part of town, and only a pleasant walk from the college.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A terrible explosion occurred at the Caffery Central Sugar Refinery, at Franklin, La., causing the death of two men.

On Dec. 22 the Pickwick Hotel, in this city, was opened. The opening was an attractive event, and crowds visited the building.

Senator Caffery has been interviewed upon the sugar bounty. He said that the outlook for the passage of a bounty bill this session is not flattering.

The annual re-union of the old soldiers of the Mississippi Division, to be held in Jackson, on next Jan. 22 and 23, under the auspices of Robert Smith Camp, promises to be well attended.

A convention of cotton growers has been called to meet at Shreveport on Jan. 15. It is intended to discuss and settle issues valuable to the future interest and welfare of the farming element of this country.

The movement to erect a monument to Dr. Markham is progressing satisfactorily. The Joint Committee has selected a site for the location of the monument opposite the Washington Artillery Monument, in Metairie Ridge Cemetery.

Senator Blanchard presented to Congress, on Dec. 22, a memorial of the cane growers of St. Martin parish, asking Congress to pay the bounty on this year's sugar crop. They contend that non-payment of the bounty will result in their ruin.

The bill creating a national military park out of the battlefield of Shiloh has passed both Houses, and only awaits the President's signature to become a law. The bill, as it passed the Senate, appropriated $75 000 and provided for a park of 3 000 acres.

A terrible race war is raging in Brooks county, Ala., and a pitched battle is expected at any moment. Seven negroes were shot down for the murder of one of the best citizens of the county, and the white and colored men are armed for an encounter.

The greater portion of Napoleonville, La., was burned on Dec. 19. Seven blocks of business and residence buildings in the main portion of the town were destroyed. The loss is estimated between $200 000 and $300 000, with comparatively little insurance.

The cotton troubles are presumably over in this city. This result has been effected by a conference of merchants and laborers in the Cotton Exchange on Dec. 20. White and colored longshoremen will divide work half and half at fifty cents an hour, and the screwmen will do the same up to the limit of twenty gangs of colored screwmen.

FOREIGN.

Fully one hundred lives were lost in a great storm in England on Dec. 22. Telegraphic communication was completely interrupted.

Robert Louis Stevenson, the eminent novelist, died at his beautiful home, Vailima, Samoa, on the third of December, in a very sudden manner.

A decisive battle took place on Chinese soil on the nineteenth. The Japanese were again victorious. Five hundred Chinamen were killed or wounded.

Now that China has appointed commissioners to go to Japan to negotiate for terms of peace, it is probable the latter country will appoint commissioners to meet them.

Czar Nicholas II. seems to be in no hurry to wear the crown of his forefathers if it be true that, according to present arrangements, his coronation will not take place until April, 1896.

A terrible railroad disaster is reported from Chelmsford, on the London and Northwestern railroad. The Manchester express ran into a freight train, which had been derailed, and a complete wreck resulted, the dead and dying being buried in all directions. Nineteen persons are dead already, and over sixty persons were injured, some of them, it is feared, fatally.

The political situation in Germany continues grave. There is a lull for the moment, but the prospect is that at the reconvening of the Reichstag the differences between the government and Parliament, which only began to be defined when the Socialists and Radicals, by the clever maneuver of Herr Singer, precipitated an adjournment, will assume the character of a real conflict.

John Boyd Thacher a Witness.

He Fully Verifies a Disputed World's Fair Award.

John Boyd Thacher is laconic and decisive in his statements. During the lively campaign just closed in New York, this marked him especially as chairman of the Democratic State Committee. It was equally true of him as chairman of the Executive Committee on Awards at the World's Fair. This is the positive and sententious way in which he verifies in an official letter, the honors won by Dr. Price's Baking Powder: "I herewith enclose you an official copy of your award, which in due time will be inscribed in the diploma and forwarded." Thus the question respecting the award, raised by an envious New York rival, is settled beyond cavil. This same rival, by the way, is widely advertising an award for itself. The official records prove this claim wholly false, as they show the New York pretender was not so much as an exhibitor at the World's Fair.

Advices received from Constantinople say that the Porte objects to part of the instructions given to the delegates of the foreign powers who are to follow with the Armenian commission. The powers, however, with the exception of Germany, refuse to modify their instructions, and it is understood that Great Britain is now determined to make an impartial inquiry into the stories told of Turkish atrocities, and that she will insist upon the punishment of the guilty persons.
